Police Department Co-operates With Friedman on Stunt

Sam Friedman got plenty of co-operation from the city officials in a safety slogan contest which indirectly was a plug for "Manslaughter," playing at the Capitol Theatre, Pottsville, Pa.

The safety slogan contest was sponsored by both the theatre and the Journal; the Journal giving write-ups for five days in advance and another in announcing prize winners.

The idea of the contest was to jot down a slogan, not over ten words. And also to make people think in terms of safety, especially drivers of motor vehicles.

The ticket prize winners had only one choice in which to redeem their tickets and that was on the opening night of "Manslaughter," at which time the Mayor in a short speech from the stage donated the first prize.

The Motor Club which donated the first prize also permitted Friedman to hang a large banner from the second floor window of their office building. The office building is in the heart of the city and it was one of the best spots one could have sought for this purpose. The banner was in two colors and plugged "Manslaughter."

The Mayor and Supt. of Streets also permitted Friedman to place signs on the "No Parking" traffic signs. These signs read, "Avoid Committing MANSLAUGHTER—Obey Pottsville's Traffic Rules." 190 of these cards were used in this manner.

Earle Holden Had Novel Herald In R. R. Ticket Form

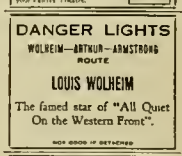
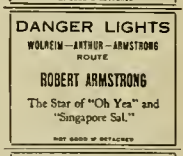
Stunts and more stunts drift into Club headquarters that helped Earle Holden put his pictures across.



His latest does a lot of talking. Of course it's a variation of a gag that has been pulled before but we want to say now that no one has used it as well as Holden, especially in view of the fact that he had a natural picture to tie-up with it, in the form of "Danger Lights," a railroad drama.

Through the co-operation of one of the local railroad companies he secured a few thousand of the envelopes that are used to place tickets in. Appropriate copy was placed on the back of the envelopes. In case you don't know what these envelopes are like, hop down to your railroad ticket office and get yourself a couple.



The tickets themselves were made up in the standard colors used by many of the railroads throughout the world, light olive stock with black type. This stunt created a lot of comment in Miami and was the means for putting the film across to excellent results. How about it? Do you think you can use it on this picture or any coming to your house? It's a good angle and one that you shouldn't miss. You may be able to get the railroad company in on it to pay for half of the printing.

Earle also passes along to us his trailer presentation for the picture, and as it contains some points which will be of value to his fellow Club members we are printing it here.

"Danger Lights" Trailer Presentation

To be used with regular sound trailer one week in advance of play date.

Props Needed:

1 electrical Victrola with loudspeaker
1 imitation train whistle, can be borrowed from music store or some orchestra
1 locomotive bell, can be borrowed from some railroad or possibly from music store. The louder the better
1 Pullman porter's uniform
2 hand bags or suit cases
1 train effect record for use with Victrola

1—Victrola, bell and whistle is in charge of stage manager and should be placed where all three can easily be worked in a quick manner.

2—Pullman porter's uniform is for colored porter, also the hand bags.

How Presented

1—Booth fades in slide on the Magnascope screen showing the rear end of an observation car. This is faded on the close in curtain. As soon as effect hits the screen, the curtains are opened allowing the slide to show on the Magnascope proper.

2—Immediately after the curtains have been opened, the stage manager blows three sharp blasts on the train whistle and at the same time starts ringing the locomotive bell.

3—The ringing of the bell is a cue for our porter dressed in Pullman porter's costume to walk from the rear of the house down one of the aisles with the suit cases in his hand. As he passes down the aisle he will call "All aboard, all aboard for 'Danger Lights' special, Track No. 12, All Aboard, All Aboard," etc. He goes up on the stage and makes a right exit.

4—His exit is a signal for the stage manager to start the Victrola with the train effect record which should give the effect of a train starting and getting up speed. As soon as the imitation gives the effect of speed he should signal the booth to immediately start the sound trailer on the picture superimposed on top of the effect on the Magnascope. On first scene in the trailer stage will close masking to normal size and booth will fade out the effect.

(The Club would appreciate other angles on trailer presentation.)

Cartoonist Gave a Picture to Glaser As Birthday Gift

Some excellent showmanship was called into play by Will J. Glaser, manager of the Paramount Theatre, Faribault, Minn., when he set out to sell the first anniversary of the theatre's opening.

Front page stories appeared in advance that guest tickets would be given to all those never having seen a moving picture. There were 18 acceptances, of which practically all parties were from out-of-town. However, this stunt created considerable talk and helped to publicize the attractions playing during Anniversary Month.

The newspaper published a four-column cartoon of the manager in the act of cutting a birthday cake with heading reading, "Congratulations" and mention of event at bottom. This cartoon was later used on heavy paper with the other side giving a list of the month's attractions. Effective distribution of these cartoons also helped to sell the Anniversary Month bookings. A four-foot birthday cake made out of cardboard and plaster, surrounded with baskets of flowers was placed in the foyer. A card called attention to an offer of a three month's guest ticket to the patron estimating the nearest correct weight in pounds and ounces, the announcement of winner to be made at a Saturday midnight show. The newspaper carried a story and the theatre used a box at top of regular ad in 6-point type giving details.

Nearly 4,000 estimates were received on the birthday cake guessing contest. Estimating coupons were given with each paid admission during the week and there was a great deal of comment and interest manifested by the public in the contest not only by those taking part but many others too. The cake itself weighed 28 lbs. and 10 oz. and really had every appearance of being genuine. A young boy guessed the correct weight.

Listen, Mr. Glaser, we'd like to hear some more from you regarding the work you are turning out at the Paramount. How about keeping us posted so that we can pass it along to the rest of the Club?

Harrison Solicited Aid of Patrons to Help Him Pick Still

Here's another one from the ace showman, J. P. Harrison, that will help you to work up a lot of interest in your coming attractions. This lobby stunt, worked in the Waco Theatre, Waco, Texas, had them talking about the picture with the usual good results following.

A large bulletin board was placed in the lobby; the board containing fourteen 8 x 10 stills and each one being numbered.

In the center of the panel was copy reading: "HELP US OUT, PLEASE! We are in doubt about which picture to run in the newspaper. The one that you vote the most popular will appear in the Sunday layout in the newspaper." A girl sat at a desk in the lobby and registered the numbers that the people indicated.

The stunt got them looking at the stills on "Holiday" as well as getting them talking about the picture, all of which made mighty fine publicity for the picture.

Listen, "J. P."! We'd like to hear a lot more from you. What do you say about it? Are you going to give the postman plenty to do?

Have a Handful of Hart's Showmanship In Newburgh, N. Y.

Street ballyhoos seem to be one of the most effective mediums for business building in Newburgh, N. Y., as Edward Hart, manager of the Academy Theatre, always manages to report that they clicked.

A recent street stunt was that of using a girl to exploit "Common Clay," when it played the Academy.

The girl was dressed neatly, carrying a number on the front of her dress and carrying a large card on her back reading, "Lost a Name, Given a Number, Branded by Society as COMMON CLAY." Other copy on the card contained sales copy about the picture as well as name of theatre and playdates. The girl paraded the streets and excited lots of attention which in turn focused thoughts of persons on seeing the picture.

The same idea was again used, but this time on "Anybody's Woman." We'd like to point out that Hart uses very effective copy and this permits him to use the gag whenever he wants, as the copy attracts attention to it. One ballyhoo consisted of an attractive girl, neatly dressed, wearing a mask and carrying a tray on which was painted "Anybody's Woman." This girl paraded the business section and passed out candy kisses to which was attached tags carrying copy about the picture, theatre and playdates.

The other ballyhoo consisted of two boys carrying a large warning sign—copy on the sign reading: "WARNING! Scandal-wagging tongues calling Pansy Gray ANYBODY'S WOMAN must stop! I admit I married Pansy Gray when I'd known her only three hours and while under the influence of liquor but now she is my wife and I intend to protect her. Neil Dunlap—Meet the husband and wife of this sensational picture in ANYBODY'S WOMAN (cast, theatre, playdates)." These boys carried the sign about town and parked the sign every once in awhile to allow people to read it

In advance of the opening of the new serial "The Indians are Coming," he distributed heralds to the school children, before and after class. He also secured an old car, on which he mounted a three-sheet showing the Indians, and had the car driven around town for several days preceding the opening of the serial. Advertising the serial caused much comment among the children, and acted as a stimulus in bringing them into the theatre.

With so much activity evident up around his district, it is small wonder that Hart keeps his house on the winning side of the ledger all of the time. Let's hear from you again, Eddie.

Briant Engineered Man-Sized Campaign To Sell "Big Boy"

It's a sure thing that E. H. Briant, of the National Theatre in Richmond, Va., knows his stuff. Anyone uninformed on this point need only consult this account of what he did to sell "Big Boy," and they'll have to admit that what we say is the McCoy.

The newspapers gave him plenty of advance stories and pictures on the film. A special front was built, with cut-out letters on the marquee giving it a brilliant finish. The sign was kept burning one week in advance of the opening. Small stickers were made and placed on all restaurant menus and fountain cards. 10,000 round cards, containing a cut of the globe, and an overprint red arrow, pointing to Richmond, with wording "THE FIRST SHOWING IN ALL THE WORLD" were used to plug the film, which, incidentally, world premiered in Richmond. On the reverse side, the picture was played up, together with a line on the cooling plant and bargain matinees. The largest laundry in town put one in each package. Others were distributed at the leading hotels, being placed in each room. The rest were distribtued through cigar stores.

Every day during the run of the picture, life savers and fruit drops, enclosed in special envelopes, were placed in every room of the four leading hotels in the city. Three leading restaurants placed one before the plate of every patron.

Local music stores and radio dealers were contacted and they plugged the theme songs. Haberdashery establishments were also tied up. The theme songs were plugged by the leading orchestras. Radio stations also loaned their assistance. A tie-up with the Big Boy Bottling Company netted Briant signs on their four trucks, and half the cost of printing 25,000 heralds, which were distributed all along the route. The Mayor of the city purchased the first ticket to the world premiere, and posed for the newspaper cameramen.

A bicycle endurance contest was going on in the city. Briant worked up interest in it to the extent of securing contributions to a fund for a cup, to be presented to the endurance riders if they broke a record, from the stage of the theatre. The newspapers came through great for this one. The Mayor loaned his assistance, playing head man on the stage, assisted by another prominent figure in civic circles.

Other activities on the "Big Boy" campaign included the phoning, by Western Union, of a number of prominent people, who were requested to send messages of good-will for the opening. 49 messages were placed on display, included among them one from Al Jolson, and also one from George Arliss. The completed campaign for the opening was a wow. The natives packed the house all during the run, proving to Briant that he knows his showmanship. Give us some more of it "E. H.," and include your photo.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

C. J. Latta Promoted; Leaves New Haven For Cleveland Post

"C. J." has left New Haven. Who are we talking about? Oh, yes. We are talking about C. J. Latta, former managing director of the Roger Sherman Theatre in New Haven, Conn., who has just earned a well-merited promotion to the post of district manager for Warner Brothers' Cleveland, Ohio, theatres.

Every constant reader of the Round Table pages knows what C. J. Latta has done since he has been in the show game. We started to pass his work along two years ago, and we are still doing it. Talk about improving with age! Latta's work does! He made many friends in New Haven, and it is a certainty that it will be some time before they forget him—if ever they do. His contacts with newspaper men and dealers were always a source of great profit for his house. The reason why being that Latta always treated them fairly.

On the evening that his appointment to the new position was announced, plans were immediately made by his house staff to tend him a dinner. And it was some dinner! Speeches and everything. The sentiments of the entire organization that Latta had built up at the house were expressed in these words, found in the dinner program: ". . . it certainly was a pleasure working, not for, but with 'C. J.'" That's enough for us, or any showman. When every one in the house says "Oke," can you ask for more?

Now to get down to business. We are presenting the last activities of Latta at the Roger Sherman. The photo of the man dressed in full-dress suit and wearing a mask, that we are showing, was used on "Raffles." The man walked about the streets of New Haven handing out calling cards reading: "I'm Lonesome. Meet me at Warner Bros.' Roger Sherman, Saturday at 1 o'clock." It was signed: "Raffles." Ronald Colman heralds were also used to plug the picture.

The man was picked up by the police at the close of the second day. It seems that an officer, well informed on city ordinances, did his duty. The story crashed the local papers for a picture, too. New Haven knew that "Raffles" was playing in the town. The heralds on the picture had a novel slant. The back page was imprinted with copy on a tie-up that Latta had obtained with a local jeweler.

The jeweler offered weekly prizes to persons holding heralds that carried numbers corresponding to ones in his window. The town ate up this stunt. They made sure that they received a herald weekly. Thousands of them were given out. There was no question but that the theatre received thousands of dollars worth of publicity. The jeweler was also given a mention on the screen, via trailers, announcing the stunt and new picture. The herald gag is a weekly feature, every herald on a new picture being imprinted. Incidentally, the gifts were sometimes displayed in the theatre lobby, as, for instance, when a 52-piece silver set was offered.

The other photo that we are showing was a ballyhoo on "All Quiet." A stuffed bear was placed alongside a sign carried on a white truck, plugging the film. A radio set was also installed on the truck and this served to attract plenty of attention to the street ballyhoo. This one stunt helped plenty to sell the show, though Latta used others as well.

Another gag that went over well—this on "Scarlet Pages"—was the novelty herald in the form of a booklet that was distributed. It contained twelve pages, in which was found very effective copy—along the lines of these "True Stories," so prevalent—that must certainly have aroused interest in the film. The heralds had no pulling power for the kids—the fact being that the picture was made for adult consumption—so they were left out this week.

We are sure that "C. J.," in his new assignment, is going to continue this live-wire work, and we look forward to hearing that his houses are knocking them cold. Good luck, "C. J."

An Appreciation!

We want to take this means of expressing our appreciation to the members of the Club who responded so promptly to our request for the special material which appeared in The Showman issue last week.

All of those special articles constituted the real "meat" of the Club discussion on theatre maintenance and equipment, and that it will be of great value to other showmen, desirous of learning more about this phase of theatre operation, goes without argument.

We are now preparing the list of subjects to be featured in the December Showman Club section and another group of members will be selected to contribute the necessary stories. In this way each succeeding issue of the Club pages in the Showman section will present new slants until it becomes as valuable from the equipment angle as it now is for exploitation, etc.

Emil Bernstecker Landed Free Space In Local Newspaper

A classified ad that drew lots of comment and created attention was used by Emil Bernstecker of the National Theatre in Greensboro, N. C., at no cost to himself or the house, recently.

The heading was, "EMIL AND 'STUFFER' SPEAK THEIR MINDS." And then followed an explanation who the principals were: "The place is a well known South Elm Street Restaurant. The time is just after ice cream—just before coffee. The verbal combatants are the manager of the National Theatre and the advertising manager of Odells."

A conversation then followed about Saturday ads paying in the Greensboro Daily News, a part of which is repeated:

Stuffer: "Well, I don't know about you, but I tried a Saturday ad offering 1,000 bang guns free to the first 1,000 kids coming to a tire store on Monday morning, and by 10 o'clock the perspiring manager had a broken arm from handing out the favors, a headache from the noise—and no guns."

Emil: "Oh, so that was where those kids came from! Do you know they almost broke up my show with their popping?"

Stuffer: "That's funny. Wonder why they came right over to your place?"

Emil: "I wonder—could it have been—? Yes, I guess they must have read my ads in the Saturday papers, too."

The ad was primarily one to entice advertisers to use the classified columns in the Saturday editions as well as other days. And it proved a good plug for the theatre.

"Which," says Emil, "is another way of grabbing publicity." "And," says we, "how about some more, Emil?"

Putting It Over Big!

Acting upon the tip that an animal cracker hunt as staged by another manager was successful, Harry Palmer of the Princess theatre, Bloomington, Indiana, staged one in his city with the result that the whole town's juvenile population turned out. The hunt was sponsored by the Indiana Daily Student publication and hundreds of youngsters roamed the town in search of envelopes containing animal crackers and special prizes.

The accompanying photo tells the story. And how!

Brewer Boosted His Business on Film by Minnie Golf Tie-Up

With a golf picture to plug at the Tennessee Theatre, Charles F. Brewer, manager of the house, had a natural tie-up with the two miniature golf courses.

He furnished both courses with score cards on which was plenty of copy about the picture, cast, theatre and play dates. The score cards were used in advance and throughout run of picture.

He also decorated the courses with banners which were placed in a conspicuous spot. This banner carried copy to the effect that "Follow Thru" was in the 'Hole-in-One' of musical comedies, theatre and play dates.

The courses in turn furnished the theatre with material to lay out a one-hole miniature in the lobby, including hazard, mat, etc. This display attracted lots of attention and made good publicity for the picture.

Brewer is continually displaying work of this type down in Knoxville, and since this is his first contribution, we are pretty safe in asserting that he is going to follow it up with some more, and rate the title of active member. And when you give us your next work, Charles, include your photo.

Phillips Engineered Profitable Tie-Ups Anniversary Week

Ralph E. Phillips made several advantageous tie-ups that helped considerably in publicizing Anniversary Week at the State Theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn., awhile ago.

A tie-up was made with the local bottling company to serve drinks to all theatre patrons during Anniversary Week. A large bar was built in the lobby, painted up nicely and an announcement placed that the drinks were gratis to theatre patrons. In addition to furnishing the drinks, the bottling company permitted Phillips to place banners on their five trucks; the banners carrying copy playing up Anniversary Week.

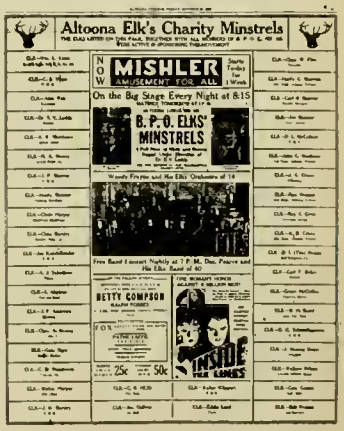
A tie-up with a local bakery resulted in the bakery furnishing a birthday cake; the cake to be presented Monday night at the opening of Anniversary Week. The presentation was made to the holder of the lucky number of the ticket stub. The cake was on display in the lobby four days in advance and also a dummy cake was placed in the bakery window one week in advance with the announcement that the cake would be presented to some one on Monday night. The window display was very prominent as the bakery is on the main street where a lot of transients pass.

Putting Green In Lobby Featured the Midget Golf Course

Ed. Crane had his lobby all fitted up in atmospheric style to advertise "Follow Thru," playing at the Florida Theatre, Daytona Beach, Fla

One week in advance, Crane installed the putting green in the lobby. It consisted of grass mats borrowed from a local florist, and a patented device with holes, which was borrowed from the local Spalding agency, who also furnished golf balls and other golf accessories.

In the background of the putting green was an artificial palm tree, borrowed from a local department store. In front of the palm tree was a display board offering patrons a guest ticket for the opening day of "Follow Thru" for each one making a hole in one. This idea went over big and naturally helped to sell the picture, too.



Crane had a display of golf togs in window of a department store with advertising cards and still photos; a window display of golf accessories in window of stationery store with advertising cards and stills and similar displays in windows of a hardware store selling sports equipment and in the local Spalding agency window.

Minstrel Show Run By Sherred Gained Good-Will for House

They are still talking about the minstrel show that Carl B. Sherred ran, out in Altoona, Pa., recently at the Mishler Theatre.

Ever since he has been at the house, Sherred has been turning out some excellent work, and his activities have been passed along to the rest of the showmen in the Club, in many instances the stunts being adopted and worked immediately to the same success as Sherred enjoyed with them.

The ad we are showing will give you an idea of just another way that Sherred has of getting good-will and publicity for his house; the good-will in this instance being derived from the local newspaper when he showed them that he wanted to promote a full-page ad. The ad, which carried the names of all of the members participating in the Elks' shows, was given a great reception, plenty of attention being paid it. The attendance at the charity show was the largest representative gathering the theatre had ever known.

Listen, Carl! We look to hear some good things from you for the coming season, as we are sure your show selling this year is going to surpass anything that you have done thus far. Let's hear from you real soon.

WHAT IS EXPLOITATION?

AS ANALYZED BY A SPECIALIST

By GEORGE LANDY

According to my Webster's Dictionary, "exploit" has twin meanings: as a transitive verb, "to get the value out of something," as a noun, "a noble achievement."

Certainly, proper exploitation of an attraction, getting the value out of it (Webster should have said, as far as showmanship is concerned, "getting the MOST value out of it") is a noble achievement—in spades, which means double.

Like every other business in this age of modern complexity, exploitation includes a flock of fundamentals, which the thorough showman must never neglect. They form a groundwork that he supplies to his every exploitation campaign. They are the basic forces that he must line up, as best he can with the resources he can command, before he sits down and plans out the distinguishing highlight of his battle for box-office business.

In this groundwork, I classify:

(1) Marquee

Here is a theatre property which few exploiteers value aright. It is virtually an illuminated 24 sheet (or bigger) in the heart of the territory which the theatre serves, close to competitors and seen by thousands daily. Marquee messages should be pithy, striking and unconventional, with plenty of changes of style and content.

(2) Lobby

A good lobby won't sell tickets, of itself; but it will certainly act as a clincher, if your ads, exploitation, and word-of-mouth have paved the way. Again, the lobby is situated in the heart of your "main stem" (whether first run or neighborhood house). Use plenty of originality and don't begrudge money to a good artist. Be a good customer for the color manufacturers; use distinctively variant color combinations, so passers-by will sense the change of attraction; use combinations that fit in with the type of picture you are playing and make that lobby conform to the centralized idea of your newspaper advertising campaign. Use plenty of pictures; the customers love 'em. And don't be too modest about covering space. A good display will sell lots more tickets than an unimpaired view of the theatre's marble walls.

(3) Window-displays

Here is a feature that most of us dismiss by getting a flock of exchange window-cards and letting a relief usher take them around, either with or without passes for the receptive merchants. Forget that system; it belongs back in the days of homespun underwear. Don't accept a window except where it has plenty of passersby; go after the crowds. Get the merchant whose windows command public attention regularly because he puts attractive displays into them. Give him display material on your attraction that is really based on a tie-up thought and also meritorious as an attraction-getter on its own. Give him a card, etc., that fits in with his sales campaign and also with the color scheme of his own displays. Figure out a tie-up that will help the merchant sell his wares as well as your theatre-tickets. Then you are putting over real exploitation and you won't have to shell out a lot of passes to get into windows. Sure, it means lots more work—but you wouldn't be a member of the Round Table and you wouldn't have read this far, unless you were the kind of man to whom the mention of that four-letter word doesn't cause worry. It also means more expense for your art department and it's worth it.

His many years and varied experiences in the show game have fitted George Landy to make emphatic comments on exploitation. He speaks from actual experience. Followers of the Club pages will recall the marvelous work that this high-salaried publicity man turned out when handling Arkayo's Pacific Coast Theatres, an affiliation recently severed. This article is one that was received after the original series had started. String along with George and read what he has to say. It's interesting and helpful.

The Real Meat

Now for the real meat: Newspaper advertising and the central-exploitation idea. Please note the singular use of that word. It reveals this particular writer's whole thought on the subject of exploitation. You get all the milk from a cow when you use one good-sized bucket; you're bound to waste some of it and spill it, if you milk the one bossy into half-a-dozen shallow pans. The great snare for the exploitation man, the deceptive delusion, the fatal temptation, is to fiddle away his appropriation on a lot of minor stunts that may look good in a pressbook, or fill out an impressive report, or help you kid yourself—if you're your own boss—but which don't really mean anything.

Start thinking about your picture a couple of weeks beforehand and lay out the groundwork with your artist—that will give him time to get a start, so you'll be able to have other things made at the last moment and thus also he can give you something worthwhile. "Write down every exploitation thought that occurs to you—use the exchange pressbook, your own clipping file (if you have one), and your Round Table file. Then start the process of elimination: throw out stunts the other fellow has just pulled, those that are too expensive or need too much fixing at political headquarters, etc. In fact, keep asking yourself about each one: "Will it really sell more tickets than it costs? Is it really necessary?" You'll find that you've thrown most of them away when you've gone over the list a couple of times. You'll have just a couple or three real IDEAS in front of you. If you've been living right, it will be just ONE IDEA.

Now, take a fresh sheet of paper—get a big one. Put down everything you can concoct that will sell THE ONE IDEA. Again go through the process of elimination and what you'll have left is PURE GOLD, according to your own particular lights, experience, God-given talents, and local conditions. Clamp down on this one idea and the few ways you have decided to put it over and go into high gear.

Plan Ahead

That's all exploitation is—it's a cinch!

Newspaper advertising (like everything else in theatre-operation) also really comes under the heading of EXPLOITATION—and most importantly. Don't be stingy with the papers; they give you circulation, reader support, other co-operation—they are your one best bet. Give your picture some advance aid; shoot the works the day before your opening, opening day and good support second day. If you're not over by this time, take the picture out as fast as you can.

As your advertising is so important, give it a real chance. Don't put it off until 30 minutes before presstime and then grab any old mat and shoot it in. As soon as you've decided on your central exploitation idea and how you're going to sell this particular picture, differentiated from all others, go into a huddle with your ad artist and try to lay out—tentatively, if necessary, and concretely, if possible—your exact space schedule for the whole run of that picture, your advance and at least the first week's ads, if it's a long run house. If it's a one-week or split-week house, you must lay out the whole campaign at the same time. The one centralized thought should dominate your entire campaign; but you can have as many different ads as possible. A daily change is ideal. Mix art and type, adapt the weight of the ad to local conditions, remember women still are the best picture customers, and stick to your decision.

Outdoor advertising is so local a problem that I won't treat it here.

Make Up Your Mind

It's easier to do a lot of little things than to do one or two well. Don't fiddle away your energies or your appropriation. Make up your mind how you want to sell this particular picture (or other attraction), clear the groundwork away ahead of time, set your ads in work and hew to the line. Always leave yourself a litle leeway so you can grab at an emergency stunt that may arise at the last minute. Timeliness is a great asset.

In short, Noah Webster was right: Get the value out of the attraction, then you're exploiting it. And "noble achievements" win their reward not only in Heaven, but also at the bank.

NEXT WEEK

Jean La Roe Gave Newspapers Her Impressions Of City

The activity Jean La Roe displays out around Columbus, Ohio, where she handles the publicity for the J. Real Neth string of houses, has long been an object of interest to the Club members, who have watched her work ever since her name first appeared on our pages.

Her recent activities cover numerous stunts that she engineered to secure publicity for the houses. When she made a trip to New York recently, upon her return to Columbus, she wrote a couple of columns of text on her visit for one of the newspapers, and, we notice, upon careful scrutiny that she took especial pains to mention that certain pictures coming to the Neth houses were corking films. Which is just another way for grabbing free space.

A stunt that goes over very well for her, and one that has not as yet failed, is that of having children submit sketches of stars in the pictures playing at the Neth houses. Through a tie-up with the local papers, she secures space in the columns, awarding passes as prizes. This angle, for some reason or other has become a great favorite with the residents of the city, and it is nothing to find a few hundred or so replies to every contest run.

Along with this story, we are presenting a sample of the advertising turned out at the house. You will notice that it is simply but effectively done in black and white, conveying every impression intended and striking, in its novelty, which may be seen in the special suit worn by Oakie and the facial expression. This, combined with the background, further aids the ad's effectiveness. As Miss La Roe is perennially active out around her district we will have some more of her work to pass along in the near future. We want to thank her for letting us see this and we are sure she will have some more fine slants on her next contribution.

Saxton's Syracuse Stunts Garner Lots Of Free Publicity

In Syracuse, William K. Saxton is a pretty well known theatrical figure. The distinction is due in part to the active interests he takes in civic affairs, as well as those of his own, the theatre. This popular manager of Loew's State has always had a gag or two up his sleeve to use when he thought the occasion merited it.

One of his recent stunts was that of appointing a boy manager. The boy proved very capable, going out and promoting a tie-up with a local ice company on "Good News." Fifty trucks were secured, all of which carried banners plugging the ice and the show at the State. Copy read: "Arctic Ice for Dependable Service. GOOD NEWS for Dependable Entertainment." The stunt went over very well. In addition to this tie-up, Saxton went out and persuaded a couple of daily advertisers in one of the newspapers to head off their copy with the title "Good News." Some free publicity was garnered from the local papers through an invitation extended the Syracuse "U" football squad to witness the film. The publicity stories appeared on the sport pages.

On his next week's booking, which happened to be "Dough Boys," he planned and successfully executed a "Joy Week," comedy predominating on the screen menu. Saxton is always pulling stunts of this sort and we hope that his future activities will also appear on these pages. It's up to you, Bill.

Spread A Little Sunshine!

We doubt whether any theatre owner or chain executive would veto a manager's suggestion to throw open the doors of the theatre for a special morning show just before Thanksgiving, for the purpose of receiving articles of clothing or food, as the admission price for a special show.

By co-operating with the local Welfare organizations, newspapers, etc., the food and other merchandise can be distributed to the worth-while poor. And in these days there are many who can stand a little helping hand.

In addition to such special shows, you can build a large box in the lobby of your theatre where patrons attending the regular performances can deposit packages for the same purpose. The newspapers will certainly get behind a move of this kind and carry stories and announcements regarding same. Your own program and screen should also be used to publicize this worth-while campaign.

Among other suggestions along these lines, we recommend: Potatoe matinee for the kiddies with a bag of potatoes or some other vegetables as the admission. Old toy shows, with all youngsters attending leaving one or more old toys. These can be repaired (if necessary) and repainted, and then distributed or held until Christmas.

However, we have conveyed our own thoughts on the subject. Whatever you can successfully work out along these lines will answer the purpose, BUT do something.

Theatre Front Was Well Designed For Selling Of Feature

While we'll agree that those showmen who handle the Stanton Theatre in Philadelphia, Pa., have every right in the world to take pride in their work, to the extent of shooting us in their corking display on "Scarlet Pages," we think that they should have given us their names so that we could credit them with it, and let the rest of the show world know who turned out the work.

This front display had everyone who saw it talking. The photo does not really do it justice, as the camera cannot capture the startling color effects that were used. Looking at the photo closely you will observe the novel art pieces in the form of an opened book that carries the theme of the picture. On one page the title was splashed, on the other a still scene enlarged and made into a cut-out was placed. Appropriate copy was contained on the page. The valance under the marquee contains effective copy also. This valance, we believe, was made up in red, carrying silver letters.

The front created a lot of talk that resulted in word-of-mouth comment for the picture, in this way giving it publicity that was very valuable. We hope that we will hear some more about what is going on down around this house.

A Question

Would window displays get better results in the winter time than billboards?

A showman would like an answer to this question. What are your views on the subject? Send them along to Club headquarters.

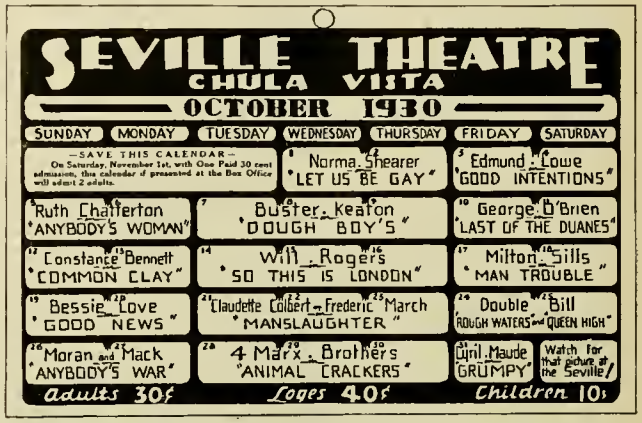
Program and House Organs Featured in Jerabeck's Selling

A whole raft of gags and suggestions have been handed to his fellow Club members by Randall Jerabeck in the latest contribution which he makes to the Club pages.



This live-wire showman, who has been following the Club pages ever since the organization made its appearance in the Motion Picture News, has included in his work a number of slants which were passed on at some time via the Club. For these gags, he asks that we give the persons responsible his thanks. But let's go. The first is an usher's card, a stunt that many members, no doubt, are familiar with. This card, with copy: "Dear Patron: I hope I may have the honor of seating you at each of these extraordinary attractions next week" (picture, play date and usher's signature) is handed out to patrons as they leave the theatre.

Jerabeck's heralds and programs show evidence of care in their make-up. They are attractively colored, especially an Easter program, which is tinted in blue, gold, brown and black, bordered with flowers, and carrying a head: "Wishing you a joyful Easter." A group of bunnies look at a large egg carrying an institutional plug. This program made a decided hit with the patrons, all of whom expressed their appreciation of his thoughtfulness to Jerabeck.

In the cut we are showing you can get a line of the sort of art work turned out for the chain by Robert Slanker, circuit artist. If you look closely you can see that the shorts—in this case Mickey Mouse—come in for a plug. The other piece of work was a cut-out for "Phantom of the Opera."

A gag that makes a considerable impression on the town—so much so that if it is a day late they phone and wrathfully inquire the reason—is the monthly calendar which is sent to every one on the mailing list. We are reproducing one of these calendars here, so that in the event that you may want to use a stunt of this sort, you can have something to work from. This calendar was made from a cut, the original drawing being made by the staff artist. All of the picture titles and play dates are hand-drawn, including the theatre slug. If you can have a local art student draw it up for a couple of passes, so much the better. It won't cost a fortune to have a cut made from the drawing, and you'll save plenty on the printing. At times the back of the calendar is used for plug-in co-operation with civic activities, for example, on Fire Prevention Week a notice was run requesting the co-operation of the townspeople in helping prevent fires. For the most part, the back is left blank. In order to enhance the effectiveness of the stunt, Jerabeck run a box announcing that on the end of the month the calendars, if presented at the box-office, will admit two adults for one price. Give this idea a little consideration, as it means something to any house.

We want to thank Randall for passing these along to us and we are sure that if he continues to display this kind of showmanship down in Chula Vista, the house is going to set a record for attendance. Keep us posted on your future work, Randall.

McKoy Passes On a Couple of Gags Of Value To Selling

"Doughboys" brought dough into the box-office of the Olympia Theatre in Miami, Fla., but it was not the picture alone that did it. Most of the success was attributable to the work turned out by James H. McKoy, the manager, and his assistant, Francis Falkenburg, a rising showman.

Foremost among the stunts used was the one of two doughboys sitting in front of the box-office all day Saturday, apparently paying no attention to any one, and peeling potatoes. One of the boys happened to be very talented and at intervals during the day he would suspend work and play several numbers on the ukelele and sing, too.

Another stunt that created a lot of interest and helped to publicize the picture was a walking ballyhoo. A young man, rigged out in an ill-fitting Army uniform, carried a 12-foot beaverboard gun on his shoulder. Both the sign on his back and both sides of the huge gun carried copy pertaining to the picture, theatre and play dates.

A window display was secured in which a pile of potatoes was seen surrounded by cut-outs and neatly lettered cards playing up the picture, etc. A card also announced that guest tickets would be awarded to the 10 persons nearest estimating the correct number of spuds in the window.

Listen, "J. H.," why don't you give us a picture of yourself and some dope on your career so that we can give you a regular introduction to start the new season off right.

We will have some more of their work to present in the near future; and we want to take this means of acknowledging the letters of Cecil Thorne of Pretoria and George E. # MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

ASSISTANT MANAGERS!

In order that we may dispel a wrong impression, we want all assistant theatre managers to know they are eligible for membership in the Round Table Club, PROVIDING their manager certifies as to the position they hold.

Many assistant managers have important duties in their respective theatres, such as publicity and exploitation directors, treasurers, etc. We therefore feel that their activities are many times just as important to the Club pages as the managers.

The reasons we make this one provision is that it is difficult for us to know whether an applicant who calls himself an assistant manager is really just that. We can check up on the managers but the managers must help us check up on the assistants and we would rather they expressed their willingness before their assistants joined the Club.

Local Stores Gave Free Show To Bunch Of Tampa Kiddies

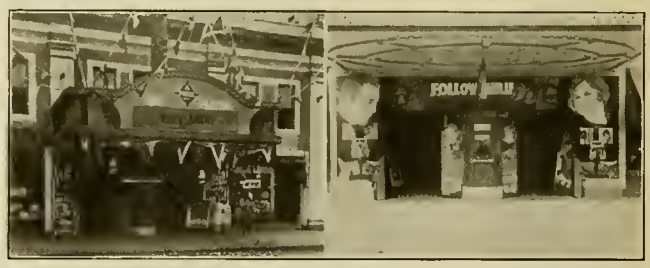
Get an eye-ful of the latest Paul Short stunt pulled at the Tampa Theatre in Tampa, Florida, by this live-wire showman whose work has often furnished us with many interesting and helpful suggestions that were passed on to the rest of the Club. This gag was worked with "Animal Crackers."

One of the local stores, through a tie-up, invited several hundred children as their guests to see the picture. The children gathered about noon and then sang in unison, "Animal Crackers" to the tune of "Hold that Line." This stunt created plenty of excitement for a half hour and caused sidewalk traffic to be paralyzed for nearly two blocks. We'd also like to call your attention to the novel decorations, in the form of boxes of "Animal Crackers," which Short has placed under the marquee. This slant had them talking, and it did plenty to sell them on the picture also, as it served to attract the eye to the rest of the display.

At 1:30 P. M. on opening day of picture, a parade of 70 new cars and trucks took place. All vehicles were properly bannered playing up the picture, theatre and playdates. The parade of cars was led by an orchestra on a truck. All cars in line made very good use of their horns throughout the line of march to gain plenty of attention. The line of march took the cars through the downtown business sections as well as Ybor City and other residential and suburban places.



With a campaign such as this, the picture was bound to go over. And click it did. Keep it up, Paul, and let us in on what else you are doing to sell your shows, also.

Morris Turns Out Excellent Campaigns On Every New Show

We haven't the full dope right on hand concerning the campaign turned out by Walter Morris at the Strand Theatre, Perth Amboy, New Jersey, for the World Premiere of "Only Saps Work" when the picture played his house, but we can tell you how he set about to announce the film; and when we receive the complete campaign we'll pass it along.

A special four-page booklet, printed in blue on good white stock, was distributed through the mailing list and on house-to-house deliveries to the residents of the town. The herald carried excellent copy, telling the people that they were to witness the first world premiere ever held in Perth Amboy. The herald carried the names of the stars and featured players, giving a little bit about their past performances. It met with favor wherever it was distributed.

When he played "The Spoilers," Morris made up a blotter novelty that carried copy: "What Could Be A Better Rule, Than For You To Make Your Plans Now To See (Picture, playdates, etc.)?" A small rule was imprinted at the bottom of the blotter. The blotter was distributed to banks, offices, hotels and restaurants throughout the city. As you can see, the "life" value of the blotter was enhanced by the ruler angle.

For another plug on the same picture, he bought a bunch of tags similar to those used by express companies. The tags were imprinted with copy: "Be Happy! Prosperity is here to stay. AN EGG like this would have sold for two dollars in Nome, Alaska, in 1900 for its lasting quality—Hen Eggs sold for $12 per doz. We bring you Life, Love and Adventure, as lived there in the Gold Rush days in (Picture, Playdates, etc.)." An imitation, glass, hen egg was attached to the tag. The eggs were secured, at small cost, from a local dealer in novelties, and were wrapped in bright colored paper.

They were distributed through the prominent local grocery stores and placed in each bag of eggs sold, three days prior to the opening. Plenty of laughs were occasioned when the stunt first made its appearance and through this angle the picture received enough publicity to sell it alone, even though Morris did cover the rest of the angles as well.

We are also showing with this story, a couple of fronts created by Jack Hodges, who handled the house before Morris. Look them over and see whether you can pick out a couple of slants that will help you with your art displays. Thanks, Walter, for keeping us up-to-date on your work. We are sure that you are going to continue your live-wire showmanship and we look to hearing of some more, because from the way you Jersey showmen in the Publix outfit are stepping, there are bound to be any number of valuable angles to be found in your work, which can be passed along to the Club.

Moon Handled the Greater Show Gag In Showman Style

Due to the corking campaign planned and executed by Russell B. Moon, director of advertising and publicity for the Fox New England Theatre, the circuit houses enjoyed unprecedented success along the business building, publicity, and good-will lines.

Tie-ups with the Saturday and Sunday papers of Meriden, Port Chester, Greenwich, Bridgeport, New Haven, and Waterbury, Conn., netted Moon special sections in which to announce the arrival of the Fox "Greater Show Season."

Full page advertisements, right on the front page, carried in bold type the announcement of the new season, with the other six and eight pages making up a section that carried the ads of the local merchants and pointed out the value of tie-ups with the theatre along this line. It also stressed the fact that "Greater Show Season," through the quality of the shows, would bring more and more people into town, thereby aiding business considerably. Interspersed throughout the advertising were stories regarding the production of pictures, stories of the activities of the executives and stars, as well as many new "personality" photos of the stars and feature players.

Moon also edited an eight page tabloid newspaper, printed on green stock, which was distributed to the patrons of the theatre during the celebration. A couple of pages from this paper are reproduced here, and you can see its effectiveness for yourself. It was called the "Fox Talkie News," and, as you will note, the "O" in Fox contained "The Last Word," the season's slogan. The rest of this paper carried fashions, editorial matter, cartoons, reviews, and feature stories of the players and their work. Thousands of copies were distributed by the theatres and taken home by the patrons.

These unusual ideas, together with many other stunts, made the Connecticut public conscious of the message Moon was endeavoring to convey, the result being that they all flocked to the theatre when the first film of the special season made its appearance. Being that much sold, they were ready to see the rest, too. Let's have some more of your work, Russell.

Benefit Performances!

Several weeks ago we mentioned the many valuable slants on tying up with the various local organizations for the purpose of promoting Benefit Shows in your theatre. We call attention to the profitable, as well as good-will angles in this idea.

Apparently many wide-awake showmen recognized the logic of our reminder and we have received quite a few interesting letters regarding this type of tie-up. While they vary a great deal in the way they were handled, they, nevertheless, prove that a friendly suggestion of any merit will be snapped up by showmen everywhere.

We were prompted by the fine reaction to again mention this idea. If you need help in the way of how to go about arranging such Benefit Shows, or want to know how best to figure the split in receipts, refer back to the issue of October 18th, or drop us a line and we'll gladly help.

Weiss Is Walloping Out Some Showman Homers At Florida

Just to give us a line on what he is doing, now that he is handling the job alone, Al Weiss, formerly of the team of Weiss-Perlberg, Inc., and manager of the Florida Theatre in Jacksonville, Florida, passes along some of his recent activities.

On "The Dawn Patrol" he secured an excellent tie-up with the public library, securing space in the institution for a panel with stills and reviews on the attraction. The library distributed 5,000 book markers and also displayed a half sheet art card in a prominent spot.

On "Good News" he secured a full page co-operative ad from the Florida Times Union—the first one that the paper ever consented to take part in. A two-inch streamer across the page carried the heading, "Good News For Jaxons." This helped to put the picture over to satisfactory receipts. On "Raffles" he pulled the key stunt that nearly always clicks. He had on hand, a lock, with five thousand keys, of assorted fits. But few of the keys would open the lock. On each key he attached a small shipping tag with copy: "If this key fits the lock at 140 East Forsyth St., Ronald Colman will give you a pair of passes to see "Raffles" at the Florida Theatre." The space on back of the tag was sold to a dealer in Yale locks and the cost served to pay for the printing of the tags. The windows at 140 East Forsyth Street were all whitewashed, with small apertures in the form of keyholes being left for people to peer through, and observe a cut-out inside of Ronald Colman busily engaged in cracking a safe. The stunt attracted much attention and caused a great deal of comment from everyone witnessing it.

Then Weiss had a good-will builder for "Doughboys." He announced that he was going to run a special matinee for children, under twelve years of age, who would bring doughnuts to the theatre. Three doughnuts entitled the bearer to a free admission. The doughnuts were given to the Salvation Army and it is interesting to note that over four hundred pounds of doughnuts were received. The announcement of the special matinees was broadcast at the weekly meeting of the Kiddie Club, and, in this manner, the message was conveyed to some 1100 children.

These activities seem to show that Al is going to carry on and endeavor to hang on to the record created by the incorporation when they were operating. It's oke by us, Al, only we want to be kept posted often on what you are doing.

"DIRTY BULBS"

Talking about keeping your theatre in tip-top shape brings to mind the thought that you ought to devote a morning or afternoon to cleaning all the electric bulbs on the outside of the theatre.

Maximum brilliancy can never be attained from your signs if the bulbs are coated with a winter's dirt and soot. And while discussing this subject, may we inquire when you last walked out of the theatre, on an evening, to the opposite side of the street to look over the front of your house?

We suggest you develop the habit. In fact, it's worth doing several times a week, just to get the patron's slant on what the front of the house looks like. Is it inviting? Are there a majority of lamps not burning? Perbaps the letters of your theatre's name sign is sidly in need of a coat of white paint. Maybe the attraction letters could stand a good cleaning (despite your weekly inspection).

These represent but a few of the angles that every wide-awake showman should make it a point to watch. Whatever else you may do, DON'T wait for one of your bosses to tell you that your theatre looks like a "dump." Such news generally spoils your appetite for dinner and jars the nerves.

Bevel's Displays Show Evidences of Careful Planning

One thing that L. W. Bevel takes a great deal of care in seeing that they are turned out the best he knows how, are the lobby displays and front art pieces that he designs for every new attraction at the Princess Theatre, Harriman, Tenn.

In the display that we are showing, you can see what he did with the brush on his recent "Prosperity Week." The background of this display was in dark purple, the lettering "Prosperity Week" in gold, with the dates in white. The still frames on either side of the beaverboard front were in green, also cut out of beaverboard. The center pieces in the foreground were colored red, yellow, green and orange. The one on the far left has the name of the theatre in metallics.

Give this color scheme a try by dabbing them on a piece of board, and see whether you think they would help to make your displays more effective. They clicked well for Bevel, perhaps they will do the same for you. Incidentally, the "Prosperity Week" went over very well for Bevel, he tying up the merchants and securing merchandise free of charge which was given away at the theatre. The merchants also plugged the week.

We want to thank Bevel for passing this along to us and we hope that he will keep us posted on his future work.

Craite's Kid Show Contained Parade Of Assorted Dogs

Dogs and more dogs were the order of the day when I. J. Craite, manager of the Fort Theatre, Fort Atkinson, Wis., set out to sell the opening day of his new serial starring Rin-Tin-Tin.

When he played "The Lone Defender," he announced that all children presenting themselves at the theatre with a dog would be given free passes to visit the matinee show.

There it stood. Passes for every kid bringing a dog. Two hours before the opening time, the kids started to trundle down the main streets with the animals. What dogs! Long ones, short ones, big ones, small ones, all intent on helping their young owners see a show for nothing. Passing the street ballyhoo that Craite was using—a police dog, led by a man carrying a banner—they would look at the police dog and sniff disdainfully, much as though it was a disgrace to witness one of the canine fraternity acting in such a low-down capacity as a theatre ballyhoo. Arriving at the theatre, the dogs barked their greetings to friends whom they had not seen from the time they were pups. In some instances, though, sad to relate, feuds were renewed.

Every pedestrian on the streets stopped to look at the strange procession wending its noisy way to the theatre. Following it up, they traveled to the house and after looking at the displays for a while decided to go in and see the picture at some time during the day. Craite's stunt was one of the most successful he had ever pulled, the second work more than paying him for the passes he gave away on the opening. The adults, too, responded nobly to the serial, seeming to get as much kick out of it as the kids.

Craite has been doing some good things along the showman line out in Fort Atkinson and we look forward to hearing some more about him and his work. Right, "I. J."?

Perry Persists In Garnering Space For His Theatre

That showman Fred Perry, who has been giving Binghamton, N. Y., some good stunts, pulled another one recently when he tied in with one of the local papers and grabbed off a flock of publicity for his house, the Capitol Theatre, by inviting the members of the paper sponsoring Junior Firemen's League to witness his show, as part of his contribution to Fire Prevention Week.

Headed by the Citizens' band of Binghamton, two motorcycle policemen, and several pieces of fire apparatus, the parade formed at 9 o'clock. The full membership of the league, 2,061, was in line, with the fife and drum corps of a local institution, and a squad of firemen. Banners were carried by many. The parade marched to the theatre, stopping there until the band had played a number, and then entering.

Inside the theatre, Perry led the boys in singing to music enticed from the organ presided over by Paul Loomis. After a session of singing, the National Anthem was rendered, at the conclusion of which the show was given. Plenty of publicity was the order of the day on this one for Perry. If you want to pull this stunt next year, file this away, as it may come in handy. Thanks, Fred.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Le Kander Used A Locomotive As A Plug For Picture

Playing a second run of "Thunder," C. G. Le Kander, manager of the Fargo Theatre in Geneva, Illinois, put the picture over to great results, for a second time, by one of the best street ballyhoos the town had ever seen, for a motion picture.

The train, in the photo we are showing, was the means through which Le Kander turned in a knockout week. The train, rubber-tired, was a replica of the old "Pioneer" the first train on the Chicago and North Western Railroad. The original pioneer stands on exhibition in the Chicago terminal of the Northwestern, and many thousands of people have seen it, a great many from Geneva and surrounding towns being numbered among them.

The locomotive was run by a regular train crew in uniform and work clothes. It visited all of the surrounding towns and also stopped for a time in front of the theatre, with a special card giving the dope on the stunt. Though the cut is a bit small, you may be able to pick out the officials who were present when the train entered the town. The gentleman in the derby hat is the vice-president of the Chicago-Northwestern railroad. The film, due to a great extent to Le Kander's stunt, broke and now holds the record for business getting at the six-year-old house. A funny incident came to light, when it was learned that so much comment was rife on the film, that the other theatres around the town played it and did exceedingly well on account of the publicity it had been given at the Fargo.

We want to thank Le Kander for the interest he is showing in the Club and we know that when he has some more ace showmanship of this sort to pass along, he will send it in to us. Are we right "G. E."?

Football Schedule Card Was Excellent Institutional Plug

Selling his entire month's attractions to thousands of football fans was accomplished at small cost with a printed pocket size schedule gotten up by Sidney Smith, manager of the American Theatre, Pittston, Penn. The front side of the program was given over to listing the season's games while the back side carried the American's coming attractions schedule for the next four weeks.

Smith reports that the schedule cards went like hot cakes, apparently every one in town wanting one.

On the front side of the schedule card, he printed this copy: "Keep this as a reminder of two important schedules, Pittston High School and coming attractions at the American Theatre.

Thanks, Sidney, for letting us see your latest. Incidentally, how about a proto of yourself when you send in your next contribution? Which we hope will be soon.

ALWAYS WEAR YOUR CLUB PIN

PAGING MORE "LOBBY LAFFS"

Dick Kirschbaum is again in need of suggestions for the "Lobby Laffs" series, and knowing how popular these cartoons are with our readers, we are broadcasting this request right off the Club pages.

If you stop to think for a moment or two, undoubtedly you will recall some funny incident that occurred around your theatre and could be converted into one of Dick's "Laffs."

"Keep Your Sunnyside Up" and let's all get some fun out of this series as long as Dick is good enough to do the cartooning for us.

Beckerich Is Using New Type Of Sign To Plug His Shorts

The photo we are showing will give you an idea of the new type of sign that Al Beckerich, manager of the Hippodrome Theatre in Cleveland, Ohio, is using as a special appeal to the kiddie trade.

Al, who may be seen at the left of the sign—the man on the right being Billy Darrow, publicity man for the house—must think a lot of the gag to put it in a one-sheet frame. These signs can be used either in this fashion or as a banner. They are made up of felt in solid colors such as red, blue, etc. Upon them is impressed in silver, and in gold letters, the copy and the star's name, with a picture of the player being placed in the center.

They are very attractive and can probably be procured from the nearest exchange featuring the stars whose names and pictures appear on the banner. A spot, trained on the one-sheet frame, or on the banner itself when it is in the lobby, is also very effective. The metal leaf letters catch the light and throw it back, causing the eye to fall upon the gleam. Study out the idea and if you think you'd like one for your house, use it. Listen Al, we'd like to hear from you more often. How about keeping us posted on your future work. Oke?

Special Supplement Was Landed By H. McCallon In Houston

A credit to his showmanship is the special section that Homer McCallon, manager of the State Theatre in Houston, Texas, turned out to plug his shows. The section was run with the co-operation of the newspaper and a nationally-known radio manufacturing company.

The special section, comprising eight pages, contained ads, stories and pictures, in which all of the dealers participating figured prominently, with the theatre coming in for a front page play. The section was one of the best that has been turned out in Houston in some years and it more than apprised the natives of the city that the State Theatre was right there with the shows.

Listen, Homer! We are hearing quite a bit about what you are doing down there. Suppose you keep us posted on your activities so that we can pass them along to the rest of the members of the Club. And at the same time, include your photograph and an account of your career in the show game.

E. Bair Used Frank Hill's Ad; He Gives Him Credit for It

The "All for One and One for All" spirit is in evidence again. This time the palm must be extended to E. E. Bair, manager of the State Theatre in East Liverpool, Ohio, for the instant acknowledgement—and we might say proud acknowledgement—of the use he made of a lay-out that Frank Hill of Walla Walla designed and which we used in our pages, not so very long ago.

"E. E." picked up Frank's ad and used it in one of his local papers. The ad was on "The Dawn Patrol," and we are reproducing it here in order that you may see the lay-out scheme. Bair, himself, is very proficient in the art of newspaper lay-out and we believe that it is certainly fine of him to use an ad run by his brother-member and see that he is given the proper credit.

Since he has been at the State and the American Theatre in East Liverpool, Mr. Bair has not been a bit backward in displaying showmanship that will click any place, and the success he is enjoying is the result of it. One of his latest features was the distribution of a quantity of handbills—the layout for which had previously been used in a newspaper ad—through the mailing list and house-to-house distribution. The handbill was headed: Painting The Show World Red (the red in red color). The rest of the handbill contained a list of the pictures as well as a little note from the management. With two houses in the town run by the same company, you may be sure that Bair had an imposing array of films to offer. This, coupled with the flash make-up of the handbill, sold the town.

We want to thank you again "E. E." for the way you are carrying out our Club spirit, and we are sure that the rest of our members—who would do the same—are right with us.

Consolidated Houses Are Using New Programs On Circuit

The group of showmen comprising the Consolidated Amusement Enterprises Circuit in New York City, have been stepping out again. This time they have inaugurated a circuit house organ, the first issue of which has just reached our desk.

It is made up in the style that is used by the bigger circuits such as Loew, Arkayo, and others. Four pages, containing newsy bits and picture on current and coming attractions, it is sure to be met with favor by the patrons of the circuit houses. One of the inner pages carries the program of the houses wherein the paper is distributed. The back page carries the circuit programs. There are two separate distribution points, downtown and uptown. The downtown program is carried in its entirety on those programs intended for the house; with the same procedure being followed for the uptown theatres.

As the issues run along, we are sure that there are going to be lots of new angles added to them, particularly so since Rudy Kuehn is supervising the work. We hope to see some more so that we can report on them from time to time.

Plugging a circus picture in Fort Plain, New York, Harold L. Richardson, manager of the Fort Plain Theatre proved himself to be a pretty good aerialist by swinging high and selling "Swing High."

Located in a town that does not permit him to use as many exploitation angles as a larger place would do, Richardson, nevertheless, turns out some mighty fine work. The special herald that we are showing is but one of the angles that he used to bring the show home a winner. The herald was a real circus throwaway, measuring about the size of a newspaper page. It contained many catchlines, copy, mats and other information relating to the feature film. It was printed in black on pink stock. When they first made an appearance on the streets of Fort Plain they caused plenty of comment, and you may be sure that they were read from top to bottom.

Another angle that helped sell the picture was the circus front, created by Richardson, which we are showing. The front materials were for the most part comprised of sign cloth, the banners, valance, etc., being of that material. The trapeze above the marquee (which unfortunately, the photo does not show) was a home-made affair. A cut-out of the star in the film was placed on the rung. Electric lights of various colors were placed about the trapeze. The cut-outs in the foreground of the front display were resurrected from the store room, re-lettered and re-vamped for the occasion and put into use.

Richardson's campaign went over very well, as he took great care in seeing that it should do so. We are glad to note that he is continuing his live-wire work at the Smalley house and we hope to hear from him again very soon.

Fourmet's Float Was A Classy Affair for Plugging Attraction

Due to his successful float, Al Fourmet is walking on air. The foregoing statement is thus phrased in order that you will pay special notice to the photos we are showing below and get a line on what this live showman and his house artist, Joe Pendleton, are doing at the Paramount Theatre in Abilene, Texas.

The town of Abilene recently held a Loyalty Day Parade (and not in honor of the big league pitcher this town has landed on one of the pennant winning ball clubs) that formed part of the celebration of the West Texas Fair. Fourmet entered his contribution, which consisted, as you will notice, of a truck covered with beaverboard signs plugging the week's attractions at the local playhouse.

The art work was nicely made up, all of the colors standing out very well, and, as a result, the float was the subject of many comments from the persons lining up watching the parade. At the finish of the parade, the float was driven all over town, visiting the fair every half hour. The small cost of the truck and driver—four passes—was more than made up in the wealth of publicity derived.

Thanks, Al, for letting us in on what you are doing to pep up your town from a showman angle. We want to get some more from you, too, so that we can chalk up your progress on our blackboard. Oke?

Legion Drum Corps Was Pressed Into Service by A. Tate

When Manager A. R. Tate of the Victoria Theatre, Jersey Shore, Pa., learned that the American Legion drum corps was going to stage a downtown parade on the opening night of his showing of "Anybody's War," he arranged that the corps wind up its march right at the front door of his theatre. The crowd followed them to the theatre and while the members were admitted as guests of the management, the ballyhooed audience paid its way in.

Tate also used cards which were tacked to all the electric light standards on the main street of the town, besides decorating his marquee with toy balloons painted black to represent Moran and Mack on which overseas hats were placed.

"Masked Phantom" at The Starland Broke Pole Endurance Mark

Hitting the bell ten times out of ten, Gene Bollin, manager of the Starland Theatre, Los Angeles, Calif., is keeping his house in the public's eye at a fraction of the cost that the big houses in the city pay for their ads in the Los Angeles dailies.

He pulled a stunt recently that they will always remember in the neighborhood. A man, billed as "The Masked Phantom," set out to break the flagpole sitting record established by "Shipwreck Kelly." Perched on a pole atop the theatre, he sat and sat, until the record was finally broken. All during the time the attempt to break that record went on, the newspapers carried daily stories.

The climax came two days after the record-busting feat. The Los Angeles fire department was called out to bring the Phantom down from his lofty perch. Newspapers carried the stories and the newsreel photographs ground away shooting the scene. To enhance the effectiveness of the stunt, Bollin put a 12-piece orchestra, dressed in convict costume, on the marquee to plug the current feature, "The Big House." A tremendous mob of persons was on hand the night the fire department was called out. The photos will give you a little idea of the size. The police department had to call out reserves to hold them back.

These stunts that Bollin is pulling are keeping his house right before the Los Angeles theatre-going public, and, as a result, he is doing a corking good business. We hope that he will keep us posted on his future work, as we are sure he is going to have some excellent slants on show-selling.

WHAT ARE YOU WAITING FOR?

COME ON, JOIN THESE LIVE WIRES!

WILLIAM K. SAXTON, if we were in Syracuse, N. Y., would need no introduction to anybody, so fine a rep did he establish for himself at the State Theatre. Bill has been a pretty active showman since he has been at his house and any of his press books will prove this. He has crashed the papers as many times as Tammany Young has crashed a gate. Let's have your biography, Bill, and a photo, so that we can give you a real introduction. Oke?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

DEAN C. DEMAREE manages the State Theatre in Omaha, Neb. He is proposed for the Club by W. H. Bergmann, making about the ninety-seven hundredth showman our live-wire Regional Chairman has proposed for membership. Well, Dean, being in Omaha, leads us to believe that you are right there with the show goods. So that's all for the present. But we want to hear from you on your next campaign. What do you say?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

PIERRE BOULOGNE is the manager of the Norva Theatre in Norfolk, Va. Since his stay at the Norva Mr. Boulogne has been doing some good work and we know that now he is a full-fledged member of the Managers' Round Table Club he is going to continue his activity and pass the work along to his fellow members so that they can see what he is doing to keep the house on the winning side of the ledger. Let's have it, Pierre.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

HERMAN G. WILSON is the Assistant Manager of the Bijou Theatre in Richmond, Va. He has plenty of competition along the showman line and it keeps him busy stepping along to make sure that the Bijou gets plenty of representation. And it does. Future work of Wilson's, which we expect to present on our pages, will prove this statement because we know that the showman managing the house knows his stuff. Keep up the good work.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

MIKE EDELSTEIN has been in this racket plenty years, and now that he is giving them something to talk about along the showman line at the Mt. Morris Theatre in New York City, we are sure that he is going to pass it along for the rest of his fellow-members to look over. And when you do Mike, give us a photo and some data so that we can give you a real send-off.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

DAVID J. LUSTIG is the publicity chief for the Manhattan Playhouses in New York. Through some oversight, or something or other, we found out that Dave had never signed on the dotted line that entitled him to a mention on this page. Well, he's signed up now, and, as most of his fellow-members know, he can turn out some excellent work. We look forward to having lots of it on our pages for the new season, Dave. What do you say about it?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

WADE G. LOUDERMILK is the Assistant Manager of the Rialto Theatre in Phoenix, Arizona. We understand that Mr. Loudermilk is of another profession, and is learning the show game from the front of the house up. Well, Wade, with a showman of the experience of your house manager teaching you the ropes it shouldn't be hard for you to get along. Let's know how you're doing.

GEORGE H. MINER is the manager of the Loew's Theatre in Yonkers, New York, and we'd like you to know that it is unnecessary for us to say that he is active up around that district. He's more than active, as the crowds in the house every evening will prove. And if that isn't enough, all we have to do is to ask some of the other showmen around his neighborhood. This showman seems to have annexed quite a rep for himself as being a square-shooter. Welcome into the Club, George, and don't be a stranger.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

ROGER R. DRISSEL manages the Columbia Theatre in Washington, D. C. From the accounts we have gathered concerning Mr. Drissel's work, we find that he rates 'ace high" in the showman standing of his town. Which is oke with us, Roger. Only send us in some of your stuff, too, will you?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

RAY M. BUTTERFIELD manages the Metropolitan Theatre in Leominster, Mass. This town, wherein Mr. Butterfield is located, has shown some mighty fine showmanship in the past, and, even now there's some good work being done there. Let's have your show-selling slants, Ray, so that we can present them to your fellow members through the medium of the Club pages.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

IRVING LIPNICK manages the Fox Terminal Theatre in Chicago. While he was at the Tower Theatre in Milwaukee, Lipnick's showmanship was a big feature. Now, with so much to draw from in the Windy City, it is a sure thing that he'll have some corking work to his credit as soon as he gets "wised"on the situation. Keep us posted on your activity, Irving, so that we can pass it along.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

T. M. HOROWITZ is the manager of the Paramount Theatre in Peekskill, New York. Mr. Horowitz has an excellent background which should serve him well in the show game. We are sure that he is going to be an active member and contributor of the Club and we hope to hear from him shortly. Let's go, Ted!

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

F. E. OWEN is the manager of the Capitol Theatre in Raleigh, N. C., that representative city of his state. Listen, "F. E.," we number some more showmen from down around your way on our rolls and you'll have to do some stepping to catch up with the showman lead they have been taking. As your first move in the campaign, how about a photo and some data on yourself so that we can give you an introduction?

THE Club is anxious to publish photographs of every member and would, therefore, appreciate receiving as many as possible for use in future issues of the Club columns. If you have not already done so, PLEASE send us your own photo at once. Thank you.

WHY IS UNIVERSAL INCREASING ITS ADVERTISING?

FOR THE FIRST TIME IN MANY YEARS ALL UNIVERSAL'S PICTURES ARE BETTER THAN any other pictures on the market. They are doing a terrific business everywhere for exhibitors.

THEY HAVE MADE UNIVERSAL THE EXCITED TALK OF THE TRADE.

YET IN THE FACE OF THIS SENSATIONAL SUCCESS, WE ARE INCREASING OUR advertising so much that it amounts to kicking the advertising budget out of the window.

WHY?

FOR THE VERY SAME REASON THAT YOU OUGHT TO BOOST YOUR OWN ADVERTISING AS YOU NEVER DID IN YOUR LIFE.

ON ACCOUNT OF SEVERAL MONTHS OF TOUGH TIMES, WEALTH IS BEING hoarded. The only way to bust open these hoards and get the people to circulate this hoarded wealth is to apply the pressure of the stiffest possible advertising campaign.

NO LESS AN AUTHORITY THAN ROGER BABSON SAYS SO IN THE CURRENT ISSUE of Collier's Weekly Magazine. He says "there is nothing wrong with the patient but poor circulation" and that the cure is an advertising campaign which will make mass consumption equal mass production.

THIS IS SO TRUE THAT IT IS A COMMONPLACE TO SAY IT.

UNIVERSAL IS INCREASING ITS ADVERTISING SPACE IN TRADE PAPERS, IN NEWSpapers and in every other form of advertising. Good goods deserve more advertising than any other kind, and they deserve it during a business depression more than at any other time.

BUY A LOAD OF POSTERS AND ADVERTISING ACCESSORIES. PLASTER THEM ALL over where your patrons will see them. Increase your local newspaper space. Bang it home to the folks that you've got the goods.

NOW IS THE TIME TO GIVE OLD MAN TIMIDITY A GOOD SWIFT KICK IN THE seat of the panties—and advertise and advertise AND ADVERTISE!

UNIVERSAL WINS 3 FIRST PLACES IN MOTION PICTURE ACADEMY AWARDS

NOVEMBER WILL BE THE BIGGEST MONTH IN TALKIE HISTORY !

. . BY S. R. KENT

IT'S always a good season for a good show. That was never so true as today.

People are spending money for entertainment carefully—but they are spending it. The grosses piled up by really outstanding attractions exceed even boom-time figures.

With this in mind, I said to Jesse L. Lasky, Paramount's first vice president in charge of production, some weeks ago: "If you could arrange your studio operations so that four or five of our finest pictures could be released in November, the benefit to theatres and to Paramount would be tremendous".

I said to the Harold Lloyd Corporation: "The industry needs Mr. Lloyd's new picture right now. Please bend every effort to a November 1st release for 'Feet First'". Both Mr. Lasky and Mr. Lloyd have come through magnificently.

Theatre men will rejoice with me in the fact that PARAMOUNT IS RELEASING BETWEEN NOW AND DECEMBER 1st, 7 OF THE GREATEST PICTURES IN THE HISTORY OF THIS BUSINESS:

HAROLD LLOYD in "FEET FIRST". In my opinion and that of everybody who has seen it, the finest Harold Lloyd comedy in many years. The first week's business at the Rialto, New York, is terrific. I believe Lloyd records all over the country are due to fall.

MAURICE CHEVALIER in "PLAYBOY OF PARIS". Did $14,000 above normally good business at Paramount, New York and held second week. This popular star's best liked attraction practically everywhere — and that means top money.

"LAUGHTER". With Nancy Carroll, Fredric March and Frank Morgan. A new type of strong comedy-melodrama handled in a new way by Director D'Arrast that seems to be exactly what the modern public wants. I have heard more trade and public advance comment on this picture than any on our program. It seems destined for sensational success.

GEORGE BANCROFT in "DERELICT". This star whom Variety's survey named the strongest box office draw in the business, comes back with a mighty wallop, in this action story of the sea. His strongest vehicle since "Underworld", beyond a doubt.

"MOROCCO". With Gary Cooper, the startling new star discovery Marlene Dietrich and Adolphe Menjou. So good that it was instantly picked by Grauman's Chinese Theatre, Los Angeles, to play at $2. A Josef von Sternberg production that is not only an artistic triumph and a big money maker but which creates a powerful new electric light name—Marlene Dietrich.

"TOM SAWYER". A perfect production of the greatest boy story ever written. Bringing back Jackie Coogan, with Mitzi Green, to the screen and millions of kids of all ages to the box office. You've been yelling for a big picture with strong juvenile appeal—here it is!

RUTH CHATTERTON in "THE RIGHT TO LOVE". You know the sensational results of Miss Chatterton's previous hit, "Anybody's Woman". Theatre Men who previewed "The Right to Love" wire me that it is in every way an even stronger picture.

That's SEVEN GUARANTEED BIG PICTURE SUCCESSES released within six weeks. We planned in that way, to deluge the public with more than their money's worth of great entertainment, to start the S.R.O. crowds coming and keep them coming.

Check what I've said about these pictures by seeing them at Paramount exchanges. Then BOOK THEM, PLAY THEM AND ADVERTISE THEM. The results will convince you that real quality pictures in quantity will bring smashing grosses today—and Paramount is the company that can supply them.

Schwalbe, Blank, Sablotsky, McGuirk In with Franklin's National Chain?

Ready to Invade the East

Hollywood—Harold B. Franklin's proposed circuit of theatres will be extended throughout the country. The former Fox West Coast chieftain is proceeding rapidly in lining up various houses and expects to be in a position to announce the component parts of the new circuit soon.

A number of independent chains on the Coast first are being lined up, it is stated, after which a steady eastward expansion is in prospect.

Jam in Columbia Studio Expense Is Ironed Out

Differences over the cost of production, reported to have reached serious proportions during the short time Harry Cohn was in New York, have been amicably ironed out by Columbia officials, it is understood, and everything is again under control in that organization.

Cohn's brief visit here is understood to have been occasioned by the insistance of Columbia's bankers that steps must be taken to trim costs without impairing quality. That is said to have been done, with general satisfaction to all parties resulting.

Jack Cohn left for Hollywood Thursday to pick up the reins of production while Harry again returns to New York for a stay of perhaps two months. During that period, Columbia's studio head will line up vehicles and talent for next season and meet circuit heads stationed in New York in order to improve his slant on theatre requirements.

Players Squawk When Asked to Die, Imagine!

Hollywood—Film extras have a new complaint. The $7.50-a-day players howl plenty if they work in a war or gangster picture and are among the first to be killed. It seems that the longer you live in the picture the more salary you draw. Thus the cause for complaint.

RKO After Australian Houses? Scott Says No

Sydney—Bill Scott, Australian chief of RKO, has returned after his tour of America and England. He denies that his company is interested in theatre expansion here.

Zukor on Way to Coast Studio to Help Trim Costs

Adolph Zukor left for California Thursday to see to it personally that cuts in studio overhead, made mandatory upon Ben Schulberg when the latter was in New York a few weeks ago, are rigorously observed.

Paramount, like practically all other major companies in the industry, has been subjected to the scrutiny of its bankers who have passed on the word that costs must be slashed and quality improved. The economy move has been further influenced by the slump in general theatre attendance throughout the country.

Clarke Charges Plot in Dividend Passing Rumor

Propaganda is being circulated to the effect that Fox Film would pass its next dividend, but it is untrue, states President Harley L. Clarke. Raids on the stock forced it to 30⅛ on Wednesday, prompting Clarke's statement. He said earnings are running ahead of last year and the regular $4 dividend will continue to be paid.

Buddy's Heart Secrets

London—Charles "Buddy" Rogers created a stir in feminine hearts here by telling an interviewer that he hasn't married because "women in general frighten me." Buddy added:

"In Hollywood they are all so lovely, chic and wise-cracking. Somehow I don't think I should fall for a film actress."

However, Buddy intimated that Greta Garbo is a wonderful creature.

Original First National Franchise Holders Seen as Backbone of New Circuit

Banding together of some of the original 26 First National franchise holders as allies of Harold B. Franklin in the formation of a new national theatre chain is being discussed. Impetus is being given to these inside reports via the fact that the former president of Fox West Coast does not intend to confine his operations to the Pacific Slope, as first appeared to be the plan.

Harald B. Franklin

The first step will be the coalescing of several independent circuits on the Coast, with Principal Theatres as the nucleus in Southern California for the proposed nation-wide string

Fox West Coast is now operating the Principal houses under short-term leases, the theatres beginning to revert to their holding company in the spring of 1931.

Colonel Fred Levy, who is interested in Principal Theatres with Sol Lesser and the Gore brothers and who is a former First National franchise holder, has holdings in Kentucky. It is considered a reasonable conjecture that he may throw his fortunes in with Franklin.

Blank Expected to Join

In Iowa, Abe Blank, another member of the former First National group, has been steadily adding to Central States Theatres, which operate in small towns in that territory. Reports link him as a likely candidate for the Franklin plan.

Harry O. Schwalbe, former secretary and a power supreme in First National, is now interested in close on to 20 houses in Philadelphia and eastern Pennsylvania towns, as well as in Baltimore. Reports from the Pacific Northwest persist that Claude Jensen and J. H. Von Herberg, quondam First National sponsors in their territory, are returning to exhibition on a large scale.

Abe Sablotsky and John McGnirk, the latter once a short-term president for F. N., are also active in the theatre field. This return-of-the-native movement, in some cir-

IT'S THE HEAVY GUNS THAT WIN WARS

THE President of the United States has a message fraught with importance for the thinking elements in the film industry. If you skim surfaces as you read, pass this up. If you analyze as you go, pay some attention to this:

"Advertising is one of the vital organs of our entire economic and social system. . . . The purpose of advertising is to create desire, and from the torments of desire there at once emerges additional demand and from demand you pull upon incrasing production and distribution.

"By the stimulants of advertising which you administer you have stirred the lethargy of the old law of supply and demand until you have transformed cottage industries into mass production. From enlarged diffusion of articles and services you cheapen costs and thereby you are a part of the dynamic force which creates higher standards of living.

"You also contribute to hurry up the general use of every discovery in science and every invention in industry. It probably required a thousand years to spread the knowledge and application of that great human invention, the wheeled cart, and it has taken you only twenty years to make the automobile the universal tool of man."

Advertising Accelerates Circulation

ROGER W. BABSON, whose standing requires neither explanation nor eulogy, says in the current issue of Collier's Weekly:

"Just as we refer to the speed of an engine by saying that it makes so many revolutions per minute, we can describe the rapidity of circulation of money by saying—roughly—that it turns over twelve times a year.

"When, however, that rapidity is increased and money circulates faster, then business picks up and becomes better and better. As the circulation of money slows down, business falls off also and becomes poorer and poorer. Some superhuman hand on the throttle speeding up or cutting down circulation could make or unmake prosperity with almost perfect control. Why cry for a superhuman hand, however, when we have already available the very human hand of advertising?

"Advertising is ideally fitted and competent to accelerate the circulation. It is the most effective known force for accomplishing this speeding up of money—currency and deposit—and thereby giving us more business at times when more business is the nation's greatest need."

NOW read what A. H. Johnson has to say in a recent issue of "The Annalist":

"The present combination of circumstances almost forces American business men to focus their attention on merchandising. Production alone will not solve the problem; distribution will not solve the problem, although there are many economies in distribution that may be effected, just as there were economies in production. The answer from the standpoint of the individual manufacturer of branded articles lies in his ability to convince the consumer that he should spend a share of his diminished supplementary or even of his primary income for this manufacturer's product rather than for a competing product or competing brand.

"The manufacturer who recognizes this and acts upon it should find himself in a stronger position than the manufacturer who curtails his efforts to reach the consumer."

And As For Motion Pictures

MR. HOOVER'S remarks before the Association of National Advertisers, weighty words in themselves, find substantiation in what Babson and Johnson believe. In this industry, Carl Laemmle has shot his advertising budget to new high levels because he believes good pictures deserve more advertising than any other kind, business depression or business prosperity notwithstanding.

Recently Radio demonstrated what could be done by shooting the works on Amos 'n' Andy. Significant harbingers, all of them.

Scratching At Untapped Wealth

THE emotional excitement, the selling stimulus that can be stirred up in merchandising pictures have only been scratched.

Sporadically, meagerly and with stint, sales copy means nothing. Cumulatively, aggressively and intelligently conceived, it sways the profit sheets for producer and showman alike because its message induces the enthusiasm that sells more tickets.

Think it over. KANN

Binney, Wharff Fraud Charges Dropped in L. A.

Hollywood—Charges of fraud and misrepresentation against Josh Binney and Robert E. Wharff, local promoters, have been dropped, and the official investigation into their activities closed.

The district attorney's office, says Deputy District Attorney Whitaker, has been unable to find sufficient evidence to warrant prosecution. The investigation was closed with the understanding that the promoters will return the money invested in their film enterprise by persons who became dissatisfied.

Several persons had requested an inquiry, charging they had paid money for stock in the film enterprise, on the promise they would receive film employment, which, they said, was not forthcoming.

Fitzgibbons and Robson At Odds Over Manager

Halifax, N. S.—Differences between J. J. Fitzgibbons, director of theatre operations, and Clarence Robson, eastern general manager of Famous Players Canadian Corp., were noted in connection with the opening of the Capitol here. Fitzgibbons asserted there was no definite arrangement for the appointment of Tom Daley, formerly of Toronto, as manager of the Capitol. Newspapers already on the street carried the announcement by Clarence Robson of the appointment of Daley as permanent manager of the theatre. Daly, a former Halifax exhibitor, arrived in the city a few weeks ago to look after the opening.

Ames Stayed Out Until 2:30; Missus Is Annoyed

Hollywood—Robert Ames, the actor, actually stayed out one morning as late as 2:30 and then refused to tell his wife where he had been.

This, among other charges, was produced as testimony in the action brought by Mrs. Helen Merrile Oakes Ames against her husband for divorce. Mrs. Ames won.

Decentralization Plan Seen as Advantageous to Gross and Personnel

Philadelphia—A brand new set-up in big league theatre operation under which the national circuits would be decentralized into zones vested with authority to function without burdensome and long-distance headquarter control is in the ozone.

Quite as important as any deliberation made on the M. P. T. O. A. convention floor was this off-the-record discussion of circuits and their futures. Probably, the M. P. T. O. A. didn't even know it was going on.

Present at the convention, however, were a number of theatre operators identified with national chains. While nobody would risk home office wrath by permitting direct quotations, several men, whose showmanship experience qualifies them to talk with authority, advanced the decentralization plan.

One operator drew an analogy between the scheme and the War Department, which divides the country into zones with a major-general in actual charge answerable to the War College at Washington. Each zone, he explained, handles detail and is directly responsible for its administration.

In a broad way, it was pointed out, this system prevails today in circuit management. Actually, these show-wise experts maintain, the system is more theory than practice. They pointed out that, under a decentralization plan, the division manager would be enabled to build up permanent good will through his house managers, whom he would control and distribute in his own zone, as against the shifting process now in vogue which overnight may move one manager from Maine to Mississippi.

Zone Booking Advantage Cited

If it were possible to make the division head sufficient of a czar to give him a voice in booking, the opinion prevails, grosses would shoot up because judicious spotting of star values and types of productions would be far more effective than routine dates assigned by bookers sitting at chain headquarters.

Whether or not the chains will go for the idea is admittedly something that hangs in the balance. If the circuit heads listen to the men who voiced their own opinions to Motion Picture News, they will.

Soft Music

Hollywood—Those optimistic song writers who believed that the tide would turn and they again would be sitting pretty here, dashing off song after song, have at last given up hope and are bound for New York and tin pan alley. However, they have not been wasting their time. During their spare moments they have composed a theme song for themselves—"California, Here We Go."

Hughes Gets Aller For His New 'Lab' In Los Angeles

Hollywood—Howard Hughes does not intend to confine his laboratory activities to Multicolor, but will enter the black and white field, planning to open soon a $1,000,000 lab for such output. The plant will be in charge of Joe Aller, whose contract Hughes has bought from H. J. Yates of Consolidated Film Industries. Hughes' Multicolor plant can operate the year around with a new type air conditioner.

New Radio Laboratory Is Planned by Garbutt

Hollywood—Frank Garbutt, Jr., formerly with Paramount, is going ahead with plans for a new Radio film laboratory to be located near the Radio studios.

Peace in St. Louis If Cancellation Both Ways

St. Louis—Musicians have agreed to accept the compromise offer of local theatres to employ 100 men, provided they are given the same right of cancellation as reserved by the theatres. This agreement is embodied in a statement issued. The one-way feature of the cancellation clause is said to be the chief stumbling block in the strike which has been in progress since September. Negotiations were broken off recently, when the theatres' compromise offer was refused.

Gloria Drops "Rockabye" Plans Musical as Next

Hollywood—Gloria Swanson has exercised a woman's prerogative and changed her mind about producing "Rockabye." Instead, she has called off work, and paid off the cast and Director Tay Garnett. The star's next picture will be a De Sylva, Brown and Henderson production.

"Smilin' Thru" Off U. A. List, Probably for Good

Hollywood—United Artists has indefinitely "postponed" production of "Smilin' Thru." That's as far as the studio will go, but the odds along the boulevards are that U. A. will never re-film the former Norma Talmadge vehicle with Joan Bennett, who was slated for the lead.

INSIDERS'

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK and members of United Artists probably will find themselves in a paradoxical position as a result of their broadsides against Fox West Coast, which they brand as a monopoly stifling independent effort. Schenck probably will be the target of some embarrassing questions and a counter attack which may find him vulnerable, if the theatre firm decides on combating Schenck through the press, which seems to be the present battleground.

As an instance, West Coast might feel persuaded to inquire whether the circuit is a chameleon, since it was formed and for a long time operated by Sol Lesser and the Gores, now Schenck's associates, who today are on the other side of the fence, with Schenck himself serving on the board of directors. True, the circuit was not as large as at present, but its general system of film buying was said to be about the same as today. West Coast has always been tough.

Another little detail, which may be difficult of explanation, is that some of the United Artists Theatres are operated by the Fox West Coast chain, in the profits of which U. A. participates.

Then, too, there is that matter of past United Artists policy, with the company's stars, riding the crest of the wave of box-office popularity, holding out for plenty. The days of "The Three Musketeers," "Robin Hood," "Way Down East," "The Gold Rush" and other attractions are still comparatively recent, and may serve to stir up some "the shoe is on the other foot now" arguments. The clink of coin then was the keynote, with the artistry factor somewhere in the background—but in the background.

The fight will be an interesting one, particularly in view of the fact that Brother Nicholas M. Schenck is on the other side of the fence, officially, at least, by virtue of the Fox-Loew hook-up. Strangely, too, is the fact that United Artists and Loew's are in partnership in some theatres.

However, the real punch will come, so far as exhibitors are concerned, when they are quoted prices on "City Lights," which may serve to show whether the United Artists stand is one for independence, or what.

Those "Blues"

Harry M. Warner's generous gesture, offering to open his Philadelphia theatres on Sunday and turn the proceeds over to the unemployment fund, strikes an unresponsive chord in the heart of the Rev. Dr. William B. Forney, executive secretary of the Philadelphia Sabbath Association.

The reverend doctor wants to know, if such permission is granted, whether Warners will donate proceeds of their theatres in towns which have no "blue" Sabbath restrictions, and why Warner doesn't stage a benefit on a week day, turning the net over to the fund. Then he concludes with the statement that a Sunday show can be authorized only by the legislature. Even his intolerant attitude cannot take away from the spirit which prompted the Warner offer. But then, what could one expect?

Propaganda

Charge of Harley L. Clarke, Fox president, that propaganda is being circulated to the effect that the company would pass its dividend recalls the reported activities of an individual several weeks ago against a certain company.

This individual is alleged to have sent out a story to various cities declaring the financial report of the company in question was falsified and urging stockholders to unload. It seems that he had been selling the stock short and wanted a lot dumped on the market so he might cover his sales. At the time it was hinted that a government probe of the particular individual's manipulations might be undertaken.

At any rate, Clarke has been quick to deny the dividend-passing report, and says the $4 rate on Fox Film will be continued. His statement bristles with optimism over the immediate outlook for the future.

Warners, as well as Fox, have been hard hit by the rumor-mongers. Some of the reports circulated about Warners' financial standing and affairs have been part of a deliberate plot, it is charged, to beat down the price of the company's stock.

Some time ago, the company requested an investigation by the New York Stock Exchange of the alleged action of certain Wall Street cliques, who passed the word along that a bankruptcy action was imminent, with consequent drop of the stock. This suit was quickly squelched when it came to court, and a probe of its motives started.

Al Lichtman

Report that Al Lichtman may be ending his association with United Artists caused considerable discussion since its publication last week. There are to be conferences on the Coast between Lichtman and Joe Schenck, which probably will determine Al's future. Arguments over negative costs and grosses are said to have precipitated a jam in the United Artists ranks, a jam emphasized when Schenck came East recently for new financing.

Meanwhile, there is a whisper, hardly audible as yet, that a few months will find Lichtman in the Warner fold. That would be an interesting development in a business accustomed to quick moves.

Girding

There is a real battle looming in the laboratory field, with Howard Hughes, in characteristic fashion, planning to land in the picture with both feet. Hughes has a big slice of Multicolor and now is opening a lab, for the development of black and whites. Radio, meanwhile, is preparing to open its own laboratory in Hollywood.

The raw stock situation, too, promises to become more interesting with RKO in reputed control of Pathe, and John J. Raskob and the DuPont interests heavily interested in Warners as well as RKO.

Do you hear that famous merger song again?

Scavengers

It's pretty hard to believe that such ghoulish tactics could be resorted to as those outlined by S. George Ullman who testified that Rudolph Valentino's funeral was exploited for publicity purposes in a mistaken idea this would increase the demand for the dead star's films.

Forty press agents and 1,500 policemen were hired to make a show of the last rites for the star. When Valentino died, Ullman said, the star was $500,000 in debt, but through the handling of the estate, including the advertising funeral, a profit of $700,000 has since resulted.

Valentino's funeral of four years ago was one of the most revolting pieces of exploitation in the industry's history, a bit of scavenger work which never should be permitted to be duplicated.

Another Deal

Radio Pictures has a deal practically set for sale of its product to Publix under a blanket contract calling for Publix outlets, wherever such arrangement does not conflict with RKO houses.

Lee Marcus, distribution chieftain, and Charles Rosenzweig, general sales manager, have been sweating it out with Bill Saal of Publix. Closing of the deal is expected any day now. Between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 is said to be involved.

This is another emphasis of the new industry set-up which resulted from the Paramount-Warner jam. The battle between those two big firms has been a blessing to other companies who have profited both ways as a result.

About Face for Chains

One of the few significant developments at the M. P. T. O. A. peace party in Philadelphia this week was the opinion expressed by Sid Kent that the national chains, whether they like it or not and they probably won't, will be compelled to turn back small town operations to their original owners.

When Kent talks, he usually says something. That's what makes his observation one to conjure with. Particularly so when you remember that his company is the largest chain operator in the nation.

Kent emphasized the truth that the personality equation which has been one of the most formidable bulwarks the independent showman has had to lean on is an elusive something which circuits have been unable to annex.

It makes a very considerable difference in house management, as the chains are learning more and more. Everybody, of course, has known this to be the truth except apparently the chains themselves. One of the reasons—and there are many—is directly traceable to long-distance operation from New York headquarters. What looks swell on paper, goes haywire in actual application.

Another of Kent's slants should bring good cheer to the troubled minds of independents. Without them, the business can't get by, he said. The leaders of the indsutry must see to it that some provision for their continuance in the field is made. That's Kent's idea.

Well-Named

"The City of Brotherly Love" was a swell place in which to hold the M. P. T. O. A. convention. You never saw such a fraternal atmosphere. Everything was great. Everybody had a good time. Even the trade and newspaper men who covered the generally uneventful proceedings had a couple of wreaths thrown at them.

Of important business accomplishment there was pitifully little unless an occasional dissertation on service can be so described. The real problems of the exhibitor were touched upon by only by Kent. It was his show all the way.

Have You Heard

—what film star is proving somewhat of a dud as a legit attraction?

—who is the former notorious bicycler who now champions fair play between exhibitor and distributor?

—who was the company department head who talked out of turn about his chief during the M.P.T.O.A. love fest?

—what distributor circuit — really large — was recently caught bicycling and why wasn't the charge pressed?

—whose franchise plan is being shoved into the discard and why isn't any noise being made about the funeral?

—who was the distributor representative, sent to a foreign country, who quickly amassed a fortune which he couldn't possibly have done on straight salary?

—what counter move is Paramount planning in Canada to offset that impending government probe?

TEN years ago their names began creeping into the headlines with clock-like regularity. Bearing their flag of independence, they had banded together. Their steadily mounting strength found them expanding and solidifying their position.

One by one, however, they found the offers made them too attractive to resist and, as good business men, they sold their holdings, until the Old Guard was about gone. Their friends followed in their footsteps, until all the original band of 26 franchise holders had passed from the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, with most of them divesting themselves of all their holdings in the theatre field as well.

Now they're coming back, and back with a speed which again may make them headliners in the industry. Abe Blank in Iowa, Jensen & Von Herberg in the Far Northwest, Abe Sablotsky and John McGuirk in Pennsylvania, Sol Lesser in California, Col. Fred Levy in Kentucky.

These veterans of the exhibition field, whose showmanship made them leaders in their particular zone of operations, are responding again to the call of the films. Another national federation of these showmen is in the offing, with Harold B. Franklin seen as the welding force to bring them together.

Franklin is working swiftly on the Coast, so the story goes, and is finding ready response to his proposal to build up a national chain of independents. He sees, it is said, in the familiar names of the old leaders, a rare opportunity for localized circuit operation, bulwarked by the buying power of a national organization.

Franklin's plan is said to be in the embryonic state. But it has possibilities, which may rival those which prompted the original confederation more than a decade ago.

True; Also a Bit Sad

Uneasy rests the head of a certain incompetent who today holds a big job by the grace of friendship and politics. Uneasy, because the bankers are wise to what's going on.

The other day, one of the downtown boys took a quick course in the parlance of the trade, called the executive down, fired some elementary questions at him and waited to see what happened.

It was an amazing spectacle. Even the ABC's were foreign to the fellow on the mat. Yet he is charged with the conduct of a vastly important department in a nationally operated organization. The housecleaning that has been on the way has taken on a new impetus as a result.

Expensive

The economy wave is continuing to play havoc with song writers in the various studios, following the decline of filmusicals. M-G-M is the latest to put the skids on its music department and the company figures this will lop 25 grand off the weekly payroll. Or $1,300,000 a year.

THE INSIDERS

Smiles Ahead for B. O. in Michigan, Butterfield Says

Detroit—Grosses at Butterfield theatres throughout the state are on the increase, which Col. W. S. Butterfield accepts as a "positive sign that the public has lost much of its fear and business is on the upward trend."

The circuit operates 80 theatres in 30 cities of the state, outside Detroit, so may be taken as a barometer of conditions throughout Michigan.

Several of the automobile manufacturing plants have begun to lay their plans for the return of part of their men to work, which the circuit feels is a healthy sign, as they usually lay off men during November and December, not putting them back to work until some time in January.

Butterfield now is mapping plans for a 1,200-seat house at Holland, Mich. The firm recently opened the Bay at Bay City and the Lansing at Lansing. Both of these were rebuilt.

Claim 5 Cent Shows Unfair

Detroit—Independents here are disturbed over Saturday morning five cent kid matinees, which they assert is unfair competition. The independents say they must buy films on a contract specifying a ten cent minimum admission charge, while the chains buy on franchises which contain no such provision.

Theatre Ad Rate Raise Is Battled by Loew's

Loew's is calling upon house managers to advise the home office immediately whenever any of their local newspapers attempt to raise advertising rates. The firm says that there are instances of publishers who believe that theatres are making heavy dough, and are trying to offset decline in other lines by raising the ante on theatrical advertising.

"Tol'able David" in 5 RKO Keys This Week

Five simultaneous runs in RKO ace houses are scheduled this week-end for "Tol'able David." They are: Mayfair, New York; Keith's, Boston; New Keith's, Syracuse; Palace, Rochester, and Albee, Providence. Later, a Coast-to-Coast day and date showing will be held, starting Dec. 13. Previously, it had been reported that Columbia was dickering for the Central for a $2 run for the picture.

Gloria Sued for $45,000

Hollywood—Maurice Cleary, agent, has sued Gloria Swanson for $45,000, which he claims due him as commissions on a contract with United Artists he said he negotiated for her in 1925.

William Le Baron Joseph I. Schnitzer

Le Baron Stays; But Nut Still a Headache at RKO

Hollywood—While Hiram Brown and Joseph I. Schnitzer still are in conference on the Radio lot, William Le Baron is set as production chief, as exclusively forecast last week by Motion Picture News.

Hiram Brown

There has been severe criticism of costs, but LeBaron will have the support of the New York executives, especially in view of the fact that they are greatly pleased with "Cimarron," now in the final stage of production.

No more independent productions, such as those being made by Charles R. Rogers, are planned in future.

When Is a Divorce Not a Divorce? Ask Mrs. Rinaldo

Hollywood—Duncan Rinaldo, one of the leads in "Trader Horn" which M-G-M has been sweating over for years and years now, is divorced, but the former missus apparently has a different idea. She has appealed to Superior Judge Robert H. Scott for an order compelling the actor to give her counsel fees so that she may reopen the divorce action, which was originally heard about a year ago. She contends Rinaldo "frightened" her into the proceedings against her will, using the argument his screen career would be hampered if it became known he was married.

It wasn't so long ago that Mrs. Rinaldo filed suit for $50,000 against Edwina Booth, who appears in the same picture with Rinaldo, charging Edwina had alienated Duncan's affections. This Miss Booth has denied in her answer to the action.

Noonan Escapes Honor Camp

Hollywood—Charge of felony has been filed by the district attorney against Jack Noonan, brother of Sally O'Neill and Molly O'Day, for alleged escape from the sheriff's honor camp where he was serving a year's term for receiving stolen property.

Admission Price War in Antipodes Panicing Theatres

Sydney—Local exhibitors, frenzied by depressed industrial conditions, have been thrown into a state of panic by the removal from contracts of the minimum price clause.

For years exhibitor associations fought for the stipulation in contracts of minimum admission rates. After setbacks from the distributors, they finally succeeded in their endeavors only to lose it two years later. The result then was that showmen unaffiliated with official organizations adopted cut-throat tactics and concessions and reduced prices spread like influenza.

Reinclusion of the clause restored the business to normalcy; and it is feared that the disposal of it now will start old practices anew. In fact, the major circuits have already started mailing out coupons. At one city house, a patron may walk in on presentation of a receipt from a clothing store proving that he has purchased at least half a dollar's worth of goods.

R-K-O Building In 2 N. Y. Towns

Radio-Keith-Orpheum is going ahead with its upstate New York building program and has completed plans for its houses at Albany and Schenectady. John Eberson has completed plans for the Schenectady house, to be built on State St. by M. Shapiro & Son of New York. The theatre will seat 2,500 and will be completed in May or June.

Shapiro & Sons also will build the Albany theatre, which will be at Clinton Ave. and N. Pearl St.

Paramount's Survey in Australia Is Completed

Portland—While denial has been made that Paramount was dickering for an interest in Union Theatres, Australian chain, Ed Wall of the real estate department recently returned from making a survey of the Antipodes houses for Paramount.

Portland—Stage units are being abandoned in the program of economy adopted at the Portland Paramount.

In Tax Suits

Hollywood—Olive Borden owes Uncle Sam $119.29 and "Barney" Glazer $13,319.24 in additional taxes, according to the Collector of Internal Revenue Welch, who has filed income liens to collect.

18 as Starter

Los Angeles—Eighteen theatres for key cities in the territory west of Chicago are planned as a starter in the United Artists building program, according to D. J. McNerny, company executive. One-third of the projects will be started by January, he declares.

Schenck Confab May Determine Lichtman Status

Future status of Al Lichtman as vice-president in charge of distribution of United Artists is expected to be determined at conferences with Joseph M. Schenck and other company members to be held next week on the Coast. Lichtman left New York Thursday for conferences at the studios.

Al Lichtman

Argument over negative costs as compared with grosses is said to be behind the reported difficulties now existing between Schenck and Lichtman. Unless they are ironed out, it is said, Lichtman will leave the company Jan. 1, either to produce pictures on his own or to accept another sales assignment.

Percentage and Overage Are Hit by Indiana Unit

Indianapolis—Indiana exhibitors are opposed to guarantee and percentage, they emphasized at their meeting here. The organization has changed its name to Allied Theatres of Indiana, in line with the organization plan to have all regional units carry the Allied name. Work of Allied States Association and Abram F. Myers, president, was praised.

Chevalier to Make 2 in N. Y.

Maurice Chevalier, who returns from France around the beginning of the year, will make two more pictures in the East. The first will be directed by Ernst Lubitsch.

On Way East

Hollywood—Will H. Hays, Arthur Hornblower, Jr., M. A. Schlesinger, J. Boyce Smith and David Hochreich are en route to New York.

Clarke "Has Beens" Wisecrack Goads Fox W. C. Foes Into Action

Los Angeles—Offensive of United Artists against Fox West Coast Theatres, launched a week ago with a fanfare of trumpets, already has struck a snag, with the result that Harold B. Franklin is not to be associated in the theatre building campaign against the circuit, which Joseph M. Schenck and his associates term an "arrogant monopoly."

Franklin not only has denied that he will be associated with Schenck and Howard Hughes in development of a circuit to buck the West Coast chain, but says the move of United Artists and its members in making public their feelings against the circuit is "a grievous mistake," especially at this time.

Smarting under the "has beens" crack of Harley L. Clarke, Fox president, in replying to United Artists' initial "war" declaration, its stars have begun a series of personal appearances to acquaint the public with their side of the fight. The first such appearance was at the Alhambra, where Al Jolson and Eddie Cantor opened the series of onslaughts against the circuit's "selfish attitude."

The battle started last week when United Artists broadcast a "declaration of independence" stating that Fox was attempting to dictate the rentals it would pay for films, which rentals were deemed unjust. A boycott on Fox theatres was declared.

Clarke Answers Charge

In reply, Clarke declared that United Artists apparently believed old time standards still prevail in the industry, asserting the company demanded prices for its pictures regardless of possible profit to the theatre owner. He said his firm offered to buy United Artists' pictures on the same basis it buys those of other companies, flat rental or percentage.

"Much as we should like to add to the income of the famous old time actors composing the United Artists," he declared, "we can do so only on the basis of the demands of the theatre-going public."

Schenck in rebuttal has declared Clarke is evading the issue and with Mary Pickford has asserted that if the standards Clarke intimates he is introducing in the industry are new standards they hope the old ones prevail. Schenck charges the Fox West Coast circuit with overbuying in order to freeze out independents. These, he said, are shelved. Charlie Chaplin also has issued a statement attacking the "monopoly."

Net of U. A. Theatres Drops to $869,361 in 1930

United Artists Theatre Corp. earned $869,631 after interest, taxes and provision for depreciation and amortization for the year ended Aug. 31, a drop of $244,101 from the net of last year, which was reported as $1,113,732, which included the profit realized from sale of minority interest in the P. C. T. circuit of Great Britain.

U. S. Action?

Los Angeles—If evidence of a violation of the Sherman anti-trust act is submitted to his office, U. S. Attorney McNabb said he would take appropriate action, authorizing an investigation and reporting findings to the Department of Justice.

Schenck Denies U. A. Asked Fox Exorbitant Split

Hollywood—Terms for its pictures over the Fox West Coast circuit agreed upon by United Artists, which he says the circuit later repudiated, "were identically the same as we have made with Paramount, Loew's and Warners," Joseph M. Schenck told Motion Picture News. United Artists, he said, "never insisted upon any exorbitant percentage split."

Joseph M. Schenck

"We will build adequate theatres which can be run with low overhead," he said, "so that our own pictures and those of producers who will want to play their pictures in our theatres can get such returns that will make it possible for ourselves and others to continue to produce pictures.

"We have no desire to overseat any situation," he continued, "but it is absolutely necessary for us to protect ourselves against the arbitrary and destructive methods used by the Fox West Coast circuit."

Luther Reed, Director, Finds One Not in Script

Hollywood—Write this one into the script:

Jocelyn Lee, it seems, is hunting evidence to use in a cross complaint against Luther Reed, director of "Rio Rita" and "Dixiana," for divorce. She, therefore, hired a private detective to keep tabs on Luther's movements.

Enter J. F. Hudson, an attorney, into the picture as an innocent, if unharmed victim, of circumstances and the foibles of private detectives. It was the Hudson domicile, not the Reed residence, that the detective turned his spyglass on. And Hudson, hearing the prowler, reached for the family revolver, nabbed the detective and called the police. It was then that the "dick" broke down and confessed he was on a gumshoe job for Miss Lee.

Here's an Actor

The outstanding figure in "Renegades," in which Warner Baxter and Noah Beery supply the competition, C. Henry Gordon delivers a performance that may properly be described as brilliant.

As the hard-hitting, but courteous, captain in the French Foreign Legion, Gordon is biting, satirical, sentimental and piercing. That's saying plenty for any man's performance, but this stage actor, new to talkers, conveys that and more. His work is something to be remembered.

Daylight Saving Killed by Theme Songs on Coast

Hollywood—Defeat of the daylight saving plan in California has given the business a taste of the power it can wield in influencing public opinion, and the music is sweet. Knowledge of the weapon that the trade can wheel into line if and when it becomes necessary is one of the big topics of conversation in the film colony today.

The idea first started when it was discovered that Standard Oil planned to spend more than $100,000 on a campaign to get the daylight pact over. Knowing this plan would hurt the theatre industry, as well as the farming interests, Harold B. Franklin launched the campaign against the plan and with the aid of important men on the coast, and in the east, put over the opposing plan.

West Coast Theatres donated $50,000 to the campaign and Sidney Kent, Nicholas Schenck, Adolph Zukor, James R. Grainger and others donated about $10,000 each for their companies. Offices were opened and the fight started. Louis B. Mayer and Harry Chandler were important in helping get legislative and newspaper interests in the campaign.

Jeff Lazarus had charge of the campaign for the theatres, while Jules Brulatour gave 5,000,000 feet of film free for trailers.

Remembering the crack by Francois Villon in "If I Were King," which mentioned something about not caring who makes the laws for the country, if he can write the songs, Franklin, while head of Fox West Coast, had a group of theme songs written for the daylight savings fight which the theatre interests waged and won by a vote of three to one.

Theme songs were not the only medium which was used to win the battle against the change in time. Every major studio had special short subjects made with big stars appearing and gave these free for the campaign. These and heavy advertising in papers and billboards helped to veto the idea.

Unknown on Radio Lot

Hollywood—Radio is up to its old tricks of signing unknown girls with no professional experience. Rochelle Hudson is the latest "discovery" with William LeBaron listed as "discoverer." The youngster is 17 and hails from Oklahoma. Only previous experience is in amateur shows.

Einfeld Publicity And Ad Chief of Merged W.B.-F.N.

S. Charles Einfeld, known to friends as Charlie, has stepped up the ladder and now carries the monicker of director of publicity and advertising for Warner Bros.-First National-Vitaphone.

S. Charles Einfeld

The shift places A. P. ("Abe") Waxman, until now bedecked with a similar title for Warners, in charge of special exploitation, which means he will spend most of his time traveling the country on assignments handed out by the home office.

The Warner staff, now housed on the third floor at combined company headquarters, will move to the fourth floor, where the First National publicity and advertising crew now holds sway. Einfeld said on Thursday that the major individuals in both departments will be held, making a total of about 15 all told. There will probably be some trimming in the office force necessary to keep the amalgamated departments operating.

A. P. Waxman

Einfeld, the new boss, has been part of the First National family for many years, working under several department heads, including C. F. Chandler and Jerome Beatty, and succeeded the latter when his contract ran out several years ago.

He ranks among the topnotchers in the publicity and advertising racket, although primarily his duties in the picture business have revolved around preparation of copy.

Exactly how Waxman's new job will affect David ("Skip") Weshner is something yet to be worked out. Weshner is in charge of exploitation and advertising at all Warner theatres except those in New York and on the Coast.

Sydney Fox, N. Y. Stenog, Lands 5 Year Job at "U"

Hollywood—Formerly a stenographer in New York and a last season's rave among Gotham's critics, Sydney Fox's first assignment under a five-year Universal contract will be opposite Lew Ayres in "Mississippi."

Miss Fox played one of the leads of "Lost Sheep" in New York last season. It was her first theatrical venture, but it went over with a bang.

Tom North Out

Chicago—Tom North, special representative for Pathe headquartering out of Chicago, has resigned.

Film Business?

P. L. Thompson, director of public relations for Western Electric, while in England took occasion to check on the amount of advertising being spent by his company in various British papers. Of the advertising manager of the one in which the most was being spent, Thompson inquired the paper's circulation.

"Oh, we never give out that information," was the quick rejoinder.

"But I must know," returned P. L., "I want to find out what I am buying. I don't want to buy type and space; I'm buying readers. How many readers have you?"

"Oh, a jolly lot," came the reply.

Must Have Silents, Australian Houses SeekGov'tSupport

Sydney—Faced with the possibility of a complete cessation of silent importations next year, exhibitors will ask the Federal Government to consider the complete abandonment of import duties on silent prints.

Hope is expressed that American distributors, given free entree with silent copies, will continue to service this market, thus eliminating the position confronting the unwired showman today—that he must wire up or walk out.

Exhibitors in their confab with Acting Prime Minister Fenton will point out that 10 cents a foot duty on silent product definitely kills this field as a commercial proposition; that of the 900 exhibitors running silent films few can afford to install sound, otherwise they would have done so already; and that continuance of such drastic imposts will close up many theatres that would ordinarily manage to exist, and entertainment taxation accruing from those houses will be accordingly lost.

Special Columbia Force to Sell Foreign Talkers Here

Columbia Pictures Distributing Corporation has been organized by Joe Brandt to sell foreign talkers to American exhibitors. A special sales force, operating out of Columbia exchanges, will handle the product. Number of pictures is not yet set, but operations are slated to begin about the first of the year.

U. S. Sues Mogler Widow

St. Louis—Suit for $1,000 has been filed by the government against Mrs. Adele Mogler, wife of the late Joseph Mogler, State Senator and theatre owner, who was murdered by robbers in the Mogler theatre in North St. Louis December 5. The government seeks to collect on a forfeited bond signed by Mogler for John Lewis of Jefferson County, Mo., who was indicted on a charge of violating the national prohibition law.

Gravy Licked Up, Producers Getting Headaches Over Foreign Talker Mess

Attempt to Hold World Dominion Saddles Industry with Many Millions

Dark clouds are strutting the financial horizon of the industry unless some sanity is injected into operations in the foreign field. A number of important executives religiously advance the thought.

Refusing to talk directly for publication, off the record these analyists of trade problems see in the rapidly increasing production of foreign language talkers a policy that is saddling the business with additional millions in negative cost in an attempt to hold a revenue that formerly constituted the "gravy."

Eight companies have made or have scheduled 193 foreign talker versions of American talkers in German, French, Spanish, Italian, Dutch, Polish, Swedish and other languages. One company, Universal, plans to spend $750,000 on ten Spanish talkers in its efforts to hold the Spanish-speaking markets. M-G-M has made several foreign talkers on the Coast that have cost $150,000 each. The total runs into several millions, at least, for the entire industry.

Expensive Experiment

Students of the foreign market confidentially express themselves as dubious of what they describe as an extremely costly experiment; yet, even where the inclination exists to steer clear of this type of production, several foreign sales managers state that they are compelled to join the procession because of their competitors.

In Spanish-speaking countries there are approximately 4,000 theatres, with about 500 wired. The German-speaking markets include 8,000 houses, of which 1,200 or thereabouts are wired. In the French-speaking countries, the number of theatres is 4,500 as against 450 wired. Italy has 1,300 houses and 175 that are wired.

It is maintained that, on paper, it might be possible to come through with a profit. Against this, however, the disturbed executives point out that American-made foreign talkers, with few exceptions, have flopped abroad. As another argument, they point out that American stars, exploited and built up overseas, are now practically out of the running because of linguistic limitations.

A third factor revolves around the $500 a reel royalty which Western Electric collects on every talker made under the license, regardless of the language. This item, in itself, runs into a substantial figure and adds materially to the overhead. Therefore, the worry.

What Trade Is Doing

Columbia is proceeding quietly with its plans, officially admitting only one, "Madonna of the Streets," in Spanish. Others are planned in that language, with production to be concentrated in Hollywood.

The same watchful waiting attitude is being maintained at First National. To date, three foreign language versions of American talkers have been made on the Coast, one each in German, Spanish and French. There will be more, but how many more depends on developments.

Fox is committed to a schedule of ten talkers in Spanish, of which six have been completed in Hollywood. In Paris, seven French talkers are on schedule; also six German talkers and three Italian.

M-G-M has been talking about production abroad, but so far foreign versions have been confined to the Coast. Nineteen features in French, Italian and Spanish are scheduled and three or four in each of those languages already finished. The German group will embrace 12, with one-third finished. Arthur M. Loew, head of the foreign department, is en route to New York from the Coast. Plans concerning activity abroad will then be further discussed.

Paramount Leads

Paramount is more heavily committed to foreign talkers than any other company or combination of companies in the industry. At Joinville, near Paris, the 104th feature is currently at work. Nine have been finished in French, seven in Spanish, five in Italian, three in German, five in Swedish, two in Polish, three in Czech, and two in Hungarian. Pictures like "Paramount on Parade" have been turned out in all of these languages and, in addition, in Dutch and Jugoslavian. In Hollywood, four in Spanish and three in French have been shot with plans for additional pictures from time to time. Bob Kane, who handles the Joinville studio, is here from Paris, having returned with Eugene Zukor and Mel Shauer to discuss future activities with home office executives.

Pathe's experience has been somewhat different. The company declares it has found synchronized versions of its Hollywood product are acceptable abroad and has, therefore, abandoned plans to "dub" in or produce in foreign dialogue.

A French version of "The Royal Bed," formerly "The Queen's Husband," represents Radio's total activity in this direction. The studio on the Coast has received instructions to sidetrack any discussion of foreign talkers.

Tiffany is in status quo, with nothing done and nothing definitely planned.

United Artists, states Arthur W. Kelley, is doing nothing at this time and no definite plans are in the making.

"U" Spending $750,000

Universal has spent $75,000 each on Spanish version of "The Cat Creeps" and "East Is West." Ten in this language are on schedule, but actual production will be limited to one picture at a time, "Dracula" being the third. In other words, Universal's bid for Spanish-speaking trade will cost the company $750,000 in production alone, the sales costs adding considerable to that figure. Other activities on the Universal lot include a French version of "The Boudoir Diplomat." A few German pictures are now being made, but later the company will make ten in Germany in association with some local producer.

Warners are gearing their activity in consonance with First National. Two each in German, French and Spanish have been produced in Hollywood. Beyond that, nothing with definite plans to be made as conditions warrant.

Criticism in the Raw

Hollywood—It happened at one of those Beverly Hills house parties. One of the male stars had primed himself too much with a forbidden liquid and was entertaining the rest with imitations of actors.

"Isn't he marvelous?" gurgled a girl celebrant. "Why, he's as bad as the people he imitates."

Butts Butts In

Hollywood—Buster Keaton has received a letter of protest from the director of the Harrison Cove vocational school in Martinsburg, Pa. It seems this worthy is actually named Elmer Butts and objects to Buster satirizing the ancient and honorable name of Butts.

Ripley is reported seeking Elmer for his next "Believe It or Not."

House Plans Western Policy

Roswell, N. M.—E. C. Trieb of Pacific Theatre Corp., is installing RCA Photophone equipment in the Capitan, which will function as a western pop price house. He also has the Princess here and the Cavern, Carlsbad.

Sherman Negotiating

Harry Sherman, president of Majestic Pictures, is negotiating for the players who are to play the three leads in "The Price Mark," which will be his company's second picture. He leaves New York soon for the Coast to start production.

"Bring Back the Kids"

Universal Wins Plagiarism Suit; Industry Victory

A victory for the entire industry is Universal's view of the dismissal of the $3,000,000 suit brought against the company by Anne Nichols, charging that "The Cohens and the Kellys" was a plagiarism of her "Abie's Irish Rose."

Carl Laemmle

Had the claim been upheld, Universal says, fields of production on both screen and stage "would be tremendously circumscribed," for it would have made possible the copyright of type plots and type situations, prohibiting use by any but the copyright owner except under license.

Universal spent nearly $250,000 defending the suit brought in March, 1926, only $10,000 of which can be recovered as counsel fees. Decision in favor of Universal was handed down in May, 1929, and decision on appeal on Nov. 10. Universal was defended by Siegfried F. Hartman, its former general counsel, who brought into the case ex-Governor Nathan Miller as trial attorney.

This is the third case of industry importance fought and won by Carl Laemmle. The first was the fight against the patents company, which resulted in dissolution of General Film, and the second the Grace Humiston case in 1916 in which Laemmle established that a newsreel was entitled to all the privileges of a newspaper.

'U' Spends More On Ads; Laemmle Asks Exhib Aid

Universal is increasing its advertising as a means to help general economic conditions and is urging all exhibitors to "boost your own advertising as you never did in your life." The policy, says Carl Laemmle, literally means "kicking the budget out of the window."

The only way to get hoarded wealth into circulation is "to apply the pressure of the stiffest possible advertising campaign," Laemmle believes, and intends to increase trade, newspaper and all other forms of advertising. He asks exhibitors to plaster posters all over and to increase local newspaper space as their contribution in the campaign.

New Liberty Bank Head

John J. Mulligan is new president of the Liberty National Bank & Trust Co., of which the Setay Co., headed by H. J. Yates, is the largest stockholder. He succeeds Robert W. Daniel. Setay also owns a large block of stock in Consolidated Film Industries. Mulligan formerly was vice-president.

To Foreign Lands

Amedee J. Van Beuren, Pathe producer, is planning to send a cameraman and sound recording equipment around the world, photographing unusual locations and incidents in foreign countries away from the beaten path of tourist travel, for the purpose of accumulating an up-to-the-minute library. The expedition is to be ready within 90 days, and Elmer Clifton, who directs the Vagabond series, with Tom Terriss, will accompany the expedition as director.

Canada Widens Scope of Probe Into Chain Buy

Ottawa—Decision has been made by the Federal government of the passing of an order-in-council for the enlarging of the scope of the authorized investigation of Famous Players Canadian Corp. and various film distributors under the Combines Act and for the holding of sessions of the commission in various cities to obtain evidence.

The order-in-council provides for the engaging of experts to assist Peter White, K. C., who was previously appointed commissioner in charge of the inquiry. The commission is authorized to look into various complaints of independent exhibitors that the corporation and associated companies are making it difficult, if not impossible, to book pictures on a reasonable basis; also that Famous Players has shut out stage road-shows and that the corporation is engaged in bringing executive and other employes and stage acts from the United States who might otherwise be engaged in Canada. Resentment has arisen over the bringing in of performers for stage shows in Montreal and Toronto when artists are available in those cities, it is stated.

Union Operators Return To Work in Minneapolis

Minneapolis—One man in the booth of independent houses here is provided for in settlement of the operators' strike with union operators back on the job Monday. This is a complete victory for the 22 houses which have been operated on a non-union basis since their demand for a one-operator basis was refused in September. The fight has been a bitter one, many of the theatres suffering stench bomb outrages, and the front of one sprinkled with bullets during the struggle. All of the theatres concerned were picketed. The new scale provides for $47.50 for theatres playing from 7 to 11 P.M. daily, and 2 to 11 P.M. Sunday; and $50 for houses playing from 7 to 11:30 daily and 2 to 11:30 Sunday.

Photophone Sets For U. S. Navy in $589,848 Award

RCA Photophone equipment is the sound reproducing equipment choice of the U. S. Navy, with 300 sets to be installed aboard ships and at land stations in a contract involving $589,848. The company's bid was submitted by C. J. Ross, executive vice-president.

C. J. Rass

Twenty first-line battleships, 60 cruisers, 120 destroyers and a number of shore stations are to receive RCA Photophone sets under the contract. Installations will start in April. RCA Photophone recently was awarded contract for installations in 60 Army posts throughout the country.

With the installation of the equipment, a complete system of personal training, general information and cultural education will be adopted. Ross says the experiment will do much "to establish the utility of sound pictures for training and educational purposes." He believes demonstration will be watched closely by educational institutions, many of whom already are equipped with sound apparatus.

"Big House" Gets Half Million in Broadway Runs

M-G-M's "The Big House" grossed $481,843 in 19 weeks on Broadway, according to Motion Picture News estimates. At the Astor, 1,120-seat house, where it played 17 weeks two-a-day at $2 top, the picture got $325,482; while it grossed $152,361 in two weeks at the 4,700-seat Capitol, playing two weeks on a grind policy at $1.50 top.

Other recently completed runs are "Old English," getting $165,339 in nine weeks playing two-a-day at the 1,490 seat Warner at $1.50 top, and "Outward Bound," which got $88,809 in five weeks playing two-a-day at $1.50 top at the 3,700-seat Hollywood. "Outward Bound" since has moved to the Warner.

"Big House" Depicts U. S. Prisons Only, Censors Say

Toronto—Censors here took a neat rap at conditions in some prisons in the United States. Before granting approval for the public consumption of "The Big House," the Ontario censors required the insertion of a special subtitle (impressively silent) to the effect that the story depicted certain penitentiary conditions in the United States, but that there was no suggestion that the feature represented prison life in any other English-speaking country.

Horwitz Trick Tactics Seen as Forcing Publix to Buy Out His Theatre Holdings

Legal Threat By Allied on Two Counts

Washington—Reported extension of new protection schedules to include the five-year Tiffany and Radio franchises, and action of Radio in moving "Check and Double Check" to "B" houses for so-called extended runs, after the regular RKO key runs, before making the film available to the regular second runs, are being investigated by Allied States Association. Legal action is threatened in both instances. Effort is being made with the new zoning schedules to supplant the protection provided for in the five-year franchises, it is charged.

Organists Used To Draw Kiddies In Milwaukee

Milwaukee — Since the musicians' union has agreed to allow exhibitors in neighborhood houses to hire organists without the necessity of featuring a four-piece orchestra, the organist is again assuming his post in a number of the outlying theatres in the city.

Organists are being featured at Fox's Tower, Oriental, Uptown, Modjeska and Garfield theatres here as well as Warners' Downer and Venetian theatres. These organists are being used to advantage to promote kiddie business and play an important part in the special Saturday matinees for kiddies featured at these theatres.

Community singing programs are being used to plug the kiddie business and it is expected that if this feature meets with success, other outlying houses, both chain and independent, will again put on organists, especially insofar as most of the theatres are equipped with organs.

Thrill Film Comeback Held Due to the Press

A longing for action and thrills is being created by the press of today and pictures with action, punch and imagination must be supplied if this demand is to be filled, declares John R. Freuler, president of Big 4 Film Corp., New York. This year, he predicts, the pendulum will swing even further toward action pictures, which "came back with a rush" last season.

All type houses are reacting to the development he has found in making a survey of the situation, asserting that circuit as well as independent houses are welcoming the return of outdoor films.

There is a growing vogue to adapt best sellers and to develop plots along the lines of characters headlined in the press, he asserts.

Miller in Big 4 Film

Hollywood—Walter Miller, veteran feature and serial star, has been signed by Big 4 to appear in "Hell's Valley" in support of Wally Wales.

Horwitz, Censor Ally, Stubs Toe Playing "Ingagi"

Houston—Will Horwitz, crusading independent whose stand for censorship has aroused the resentment of the film industry generally, stubbed his toe locally when he played "Ingagi." The local showman, who a week later became president of Allied Theatres of Texas, came in for a severe panning at the hands of the Houston Chronicle, which termed the playing of that film an "affront to public decency," due to its theme and alleged falsification.

Horwitz's sobbing has been that he was forced to play pictures of which he is ashamed, due to block booking, but he can't advance that claim for his "Ingagi" showing, as that film was booked independently and separately and so was booked by Horwitz's choice.

Sues in Theatre Sale

Des Moines—Corn Belt Theatres, Inc., of Oskaloosa, is being sued for $3,000 commission claimed by D. H. Richey, theatre man there, for putting through the sale of the theatre to F. F. Kellum of Fort Dodge. Bruno Pierce, H. S. Life and James Bartholomew, officers of the Corn Belt Theatres, have not paid him the commission they agreed to do, says the petition.

Loew's Buys Buildings

Loew's has purchased the buildings housing Loew's Grand and Loew's Burnside, both in the Bronx.

A Puzzle

Omaha—Whether special arrangements on protection must be made by distributors with members of Allied Theatre Owners of Iowa served out of this city, is a puzzle here. Protection schedules have been adopted by distributors and the Nebraska and western Iowa organization, as M. P. T. O. A. unit, but the Iowa Allied unit has turned thumbs down on the schedules as pertaining to its membership. The Allied group also has blocked zoning of the Des Moines territory.

Ulterior Motive Suspected in Censorship, Protection, Taxation Outbursts

Forcing the sale to Publix of the remaining 50 per cent interest in his theatres is the reported "nigger in the woodpile" in the censorship, protection and taxation bombasts of Will Horwitz, recently elected president of the Texas exhibitor unit. The radical leader, who is calling upon the public to back him in a move to foist censorship upon Texas, is regarded as using the office of the state unit to further his ends.

At the convention, Horwitz advocated state censorship, but the members took no action on his suggestion. They did agree to back him in a conspiracy action against Paramount and other distributors, if conspiracy is discovered.

Myers' Repudiation

After the convention, Horwitz started his blasts, declaring Abram F. Myers had pledged him Allied States Association's support in securing review boards in every state which did not have a proper censorship. Myers gave the lie to this claim in a statement in Motion Picture News.

Horwitz joined the Texas unit but a few months ago, his membership declared, due to the protection fight in which he was engaged at Houston. Observers in Texas doubt that he can command the support of his membership in his pro-censorship campaign.

Tampa Patrons Demand Talkers in Taste Change

Tampa—The Prince, a house on upper Franklin St., which has held to silent films until this week, has gone talker. J. E. Ramos, the manager, said, "When talkies first arrived people would come up to the box office and say, 'What you got, talkin' pictures?' and I would say, 'No, sir;' and they would drop down their 15 cents and say, 'Good.'

However, the tide seemed to have turned, as the sound was perfected and now Ramos says talkers are demanded, so he installed sound on film equipment and distributed 1,000 passes to introduce the new policy.

"Business is getting better every day," said Ramos, who still sells his talkers at the same old 10 and 15 cent prices.

Protection Highlight Of Ohio Meet Tuesday

Columbus—Gov. Myers Y. Copper, Gov.-Elect George White and Sen.-Elect Robert F. Bulkley, Harry M. Warner, C. C. Pettijohn, Col. W. S. Butterfield, Hal Roach, and Oscar Hanson will be among principal speakers at the convention here Tuesday and Wednesday of the Ohio exhibitor association. Protection is scheduled to be the highlight of the annual gathering.

It was at last year's convention here that the groundwork was laid for the 5-5-5 meetings, which resulted in the drafting of the proposed standard contract.

Portland Socks Dirty Pictures; Joy Promises Art

Portland—This city is the only one of the nation where there is a general agitation against the quality of pictures. Col. Jason S. Joy, director of public relations of the producers' association, is authority for the statement, made to the joint committee of the censor board and representatives of ministerial associations, in commenting on the petition signed by 13,413 persons and calling for better pictures.

He gave the association and others assembled in the city hall at a meeting called by Mayor George S. Baker for a frank discussion of pictures an outline of the work undertaken by the Hays organization to clean up the industry. He stated that the work of their organization in censoring is a matter of judgment, and that no two persons always agree on what is objectionable and what is not.

Further, Col. Joy stated that the quality of the pictures had improved 50 per cent under the Hays code and that state censor boards reported that eliminations had been reduced 50 per cent since the code became effective last March.

As the result of the meeting, where both sides were given an opportunity to present their arguments for and against pictures it was decided that censorship would be further tightened in Portland, and that the Hays code will be strictly enforced as far as all pictures that come to this city are concerned.

Among the chief objections brought out at the meeting in addition to the salacious scenes that were declared to ruin many otherwise good pictures, were those directed at billboard advertising done by the motion picture theatres.

Chester A. Lyon, who was the instigator of the long petition in which was incorporated the Hays code, and which he stated the committee heartily endorsed, also suggested that vulgar songs and stories be banned from the stage in Portland.

Among the signers of the petition and who took an active part in the meeting for the reformers were Chester A. Lyon, Most Rev. Edward D. Howard, archbishop of Portland in Oregon; Rev. H. M. Ramsey, Rabbi Meyer Rubin and representative Parent-Teacher Association members and several school principals.

Old 1st National Franchisers With Franklin Circuit?

cles, is held to hold significant possibilities in the development of Franklin's circuit.

While president and general manager of Fox West Coast Theatres, Franklin extended that chain as far eastward as Illinois, and in that program he is said to have gained a keen analysis of various situations in the territory concerned. Thus, proposed acquisitions, not considered propitious at the time, now are under consideration, it is said.

Denies Schenck Hookup

Franklin has denied that he is connected with Joseph M. Schenck in the proposed chain. It had been reported at the time of the United Artists—Fox West Coast break that Franklin would be aligned with Schneck and Howard Hughes in a chain to battle Fox West Coast. Although there may be no direct tie-up, it is quite likely that the Franklin-operated houses will have an in on United Artists products.

Rebuilding Rochester House

Rochester—With contracts awarded, work on building a new front and installing new furniture and equipment in the old Victoria, downtown house, preparatory to its reopening as the Apollo Thanksgiving Day, was begun this week. The work will include a new lighting system and readjusted acoustics. Western Electric sound equipment is being installed. Bert Kelly is manager and Maurice H. Kuhn is owner and recent purchaser.

"Morocco" in Chinese

Hollywood—"Morocco," featuring Gary Cooper and Marlene Dietrich, will go into Grauman's Chinese on the termination of the "Big Trail" run.

G. E. Short Held Over

The General Electric subject "The Electric Ship," is in its second week at Warners' Strand, New York. This subject will also play the Beacon for one week.

Returns to Pathe

Brown Turns Tenderfoot

Hollywood—Joe E. Brown's next vehicle for Warners will be "The Tenderfoot,"

Fox Movietone Skit Spurs "Buy Now" Campaign

Fox Theatres are boosting prosperity with a four-minute Movietone sketch, "Words of Wisdom," containing a dialogue skit between an optimist and pessimist. The skit was shown at the Roxy, where it was reported well received. The chain feels that if $1 additional is spent each week by every grownup of the nation a $50,000,000 spending fund would be provided and end the business depression.

Prints are being sent to all theatres of the circuit, which have been ordered to promote and back prosperity campaigns. A special radio speech for managers now is being prepared.

Union Seeks Country, Suburbans in Antipodes

Washington — Union Theatres now is reaching out to the country districts in New South Wales, it is reported from Sydney, Australia, to the M. P. Section of the Department of Commerce.

Recently the company has acquired four houses at Cessnock; three at Wollongong; two each at Bulli, Kurri, and Maitland, and one each in Thirroul, Corrimal, and Bathurst.

The chain now controls nearly 40 theatres in New South Wales alone. Union Theatres is undoubtedly carrying out a definite program but the present depressed conditions may have something to do with its progress in view of the fact that many independent exhibitors are facing financial difficulties which may be causing them to consider offers. Further reports are to the effect that Union Theatres may take over some Sydney suburban houses.

Des Moines—A. H. Blank, head of the Central States Theatres, which controls a chain of Iowa theatres, none of which are located in Des Moines, is backing an indoor golf course, located at Seventh and High, a block above the Paramount and Des Moines theatres. Tickets which admit to the golf courses are attached to the programs offered at the Publix houses, the Paramount, Des Moines, Strand, Garden and Palace. Ten cents is also asked for with the ticket.

Mickey's Morals

Motion picture producers have had a tough time with censors ever since there have been motion pictures, but you wouldn't think that Mickey Mouse had his censor troubles, too, would you? But he has, and serious ones, at that.

Mickey Mouse has no Will Hays morality clause in his contract, but Walt Disney, his creator, makes him lead a model life for all that. He never drinks whisky, for example, nor smokes cigarettes, and Disney sees to it that he does nothing which would insult national dignity any where on the globe.

Recent censorship rulings reveal how highly moral Mickey Mouse's life must be. One cartoon was banned in Ohio, for example, because a sedate cow, one of Mickey's playmates, was portrayed reading a copy of Elinor Glyn's "Three Weeks." A German censor banned one cartoon because an army of cats wore German helmets, and this was deemed offensive to national dignity.

M.P.T.O. Names 7 Unaffiliates to Board Of 10 to Belie Claim of Hays Dominance

Independents to Confer With But Will Not Be Ruled by Big Chain Interests

By RED KANN

Philadelphia—To set at rest report and implication that it is dominated by the Hays association, the M.P.T.O.A. at its annual convention here gave seven of its ten directorial posts to unaffiliated exhibitors. This compares with a 5 to 5 ration of affiliated and unaffiliated exhibitors on the outgoing slate.

M. A. Lightman

M. A. Lightman, who was re-elected president by pre-arranged schedule, is responsible for the change in the line-up. He construes the step as a definite indication that he and his board will operate the association as they collectively see fit, conferring with affiliated theatres who admittedly supply the bulk of the dues that make the organization go 'round, but not necessarily bowing to affiliates' wishes.

The new directors listed in the independent division are William Benton, New York; Ed M. Fay, Rhode Island; Jack Miller, Illinois; Fred Wehrenberg, St. Louis; Ed Kuydendahl, Mississippi; Charles E. Williams, Iowa, and M. E. Comerford. The affiliates are Fred Desberg, Ohio; Jack Cohen, Philadelphia, and Major E. L. Thompson, New York. Desberg is tied in with Loew's, Cohen with Warner-Stanley, and Thompson with RKO.

Convention Tame Affair

The Philadelphia convention was a very tame affair in the eyes of veterans who have followed exhibitor organizations throughout the years. A number of talks on service were given, the uniform contract was adopted, perfunctory resolutions on perfunctory matters passed and that's about as far as it got except that it was distinguished by its orderliness, calm and backslapping.

Except for Jack Miller's tirade against the electrics on service charges, everybody and everything appeared tinged with rose-colored glasses. As a matter of fact, the convention was more of a personal tribute to Mike Comerford than anything else and, while the sentiment was all for recognition of a pioneer exhibitor, some questioned if score charges, high rentals and labor troubles weren't of more particular concern to the exhibitor body at large.

Attendance Light

The meetings were not heavy in point of attendance and lighter than that in point of actual exhibitors, Philadelphia and Pennsylvania towns contributing many times more than the rest of the nation combined.

In addition to Lightman's re-election, Charles W. Picquet, North Carolina; R. R. Biechele, Kansas, and Frank C. Walker,

Smoking A Peace Pipe?

"Bunk, and more bunk" is the manner in which President Lightman nailed a report which credited his organization with a plan to include only affiliated exhibitors in his organization, with Allied concentrating on independents.

The yarn is said to have resulted from a conference held by certain exhibitor leaders who developed the idea as a means of amicably solving all problems of chain and independent owners. The charge that M. P. T. O. A. could not faithfully protect the interests of both factions without constant friction is declared to have influenced formulation of the plan.

Ballyhoo Passe, Films Need Guts, Vincent Asserts

Philadelphia—Ballyhoo exploitation is no longer an important phase of exhibition, according to Walter Vincent, Pennsylvania chain operator, who told theatre owners assembled here at the M.P.T.O.A. confab that the picture now is the only important factor in bringing dollars to the box-office. The public's education in picture-going will not permit hoodwinking by elaborate ballyhoo, he said.

"Less frivolous nonsense and more guts in pictures is needed," Vincent declared, pointing out that lack of good drama and decency is killing off child attendance and causing enormous losses at box-offices. "Sound has not turned children out of theatres, but obscenity has," he said, "and

Says Horwitz Began Censor Move on Protection Peeve

Philadelphia—Will Horwitz, described as "the law suit fellow," is sponsoring censorship for Texas because he wants to and can't play pictures 40 days ahead of Houston independents whose admission scale ranges from 35 to 40 cents as against his 5 to 15 cent theatres, according to C. C. Pettijohn.

The other independents squawked, Pettijohn said, and Horwitz lost his protection as, in the Hays counsel's opinion, he should have.

The convention passed a resolution condemning Horwitz's action.

Taking a Bow

"Congratulations, 'M. A.,' on your decision to again accept the presidency of the M.P.T.O.A.," was the Motion Pictures News' salutation to the exhibitor leader a week ago, "the story's already in on the presses."

"That's a hot one," was Lightman's rejoinder, "I only made the decision a half hour ago."

Erpi Pan A Miller Move to Prevent Loss of Members?

Philadelphia—Reports that Jack Miller's dissatisfaction over treatment he says has been meted out to him by "Erpi" on service charges determined the M. P. T. O. A. to adopt the resolution calling upon the electric to explain so that the Exhibitors' Association of Chicago would not defect to Allied, provided one of the few, real "hot" yarns of the convention.

Miller told Motion Picture News there was absolutely no foundation for the report. "I never was and never will be interested in bargaining for anything I think is right," he said. "I don't do business that way. We have never considered joining Allied."

Inside rumblings of the "trade" were closely held, but the report nevertheless seeped through. Efforts made by "Erpi's" delegation here to squelch the resolution are understood to have been successful only in having it toned down.

Miller's tirade against the electric provided the only external explosion of the entire convention. When the resolution was read, he secured the floor and let loose.

"The Western Electric crowd has turned into a bunch of order takers," he said. "They charge anything they like for parts

Warner Receipts Pledged To Help Philly's Jobless

Philadelphia—As a relief measure to aid the unemployed of the city, Harry M. Warner stands willing to turn over the entire Sunday proceeds of his 72 local houses to any committee designated to handle the matter, provided independent operators here come through in identical fashion.

The head of the Warner organization made this promise in reply to a plea made by Albert Greenfield, prominent local realtor, that the theatre owners co-operate to relieve the situation of those out of work. Greenfield made it clear he was not aiming at abridgement of Pennsylvania's famous and irksome "blue" Sunday law, except for one day.

Dark Mystery

Philadelphia—The serious and somewhat surprised expression of Mike O'Toole, M. P. T. O. A. secretary, when he opened a wide legal-sized envelope caused wonderment aplenty as to the contents, particularly because the sender was Gabriel L. Hess, Hays office attorney.

The markings on the envelope further intensified the speculation. They included:

"Personal! Positively! Important! Confidential!"

Buying Power Has 'Unfair Advantage' Convention Told

Philadelphia—Admitting that "those with great buying power" have taken unfair advantage in purchasing film, via protection, Charles C. Pettijohn told the M. P. T. O. A. conventioneers here that, under the national zoning plan now extending rapidly throughout the nation, every house in the country will be enabled to play product not later than seven months after completion of its competitive first run.

Today, Pettijohn admitted, many theatres were running pictures 14 to 16 months behind the first run, thereby losing patronage because pictures no longer reached them fresh out of the can.

He said it was his opinion three things mattered in the business:

1. What pictures can the exhibitor get?
2. At what price?
3. When?

He answered his first question by stating the number depended upon companies and their programs; the second he said was up to the buyer and the seller and, by way of replying to the third, cited his views on the benefits of the zoning plan.

Myers Plug Censorship? Jack and Charlie Say No

Philadelphia—They may sit on the other side of the fence, but the fair-mindedness of Jack Miller and Charlie Pettijohn in clearing Abram F. Myers of the statement that the Allied leader backed the Horwitz move to foist censorship in Texas occasioned a lot of extremely favorable comment at the M. P. T. O. A. convention this week.

Philadelphia—The M.P.T.O.A. folded its convention Wednesday afternoon without decision as to its 1931 convention city.

However, Charles Picquet, one of the vice-presidents and a Carolina man, is angling for the pow-wow to be held in Pinehurst. Picquet will probably win.

If Small Operator Flounders, The Big Fellow Flops as Well, He Declares

Philadelphia—"This business will be a foolish business if it doesn't see to it that the independent is kept alive. No retailer can hope to enjoy the same buying privileges as the wholesaler, but the leaders of the industry must make up their minds to give the independent a break. They cannot prosper at the expense of the small man who is unable to protect himself."

Sidney R. Kent

Highlighting a forceful address crammed with highlights, this significant opinion expressed by Sidney R. Kent got over with exhibitors assembled at the national M.P.T.O.A. convention more impressively perhaps than anything else Paramount's general manager had to say.

He said that good pictures, bought at the right price, were the big thing in the business. Touching on industry tradition of the squabbles between exhibitor and salesmen, Kent declared this was entirely a normal condition. "When the fighting stops, I don't want to own anything in this business," he put it.

Touching on independent versus long-distance chain operation, a popular corridor topic at the convention, Kent conceded that the circuits have found the necessary personality equation for the operation of theatres in bulk lacking. He, therefore, predicted that many of the small theatres now operated by national circuits will revert to independent operators.

Back to Small Towns

"Production changes," he said, "are throwing trade back to the small towns. People today won't travel 60 miles to see pictures. They prefer to stay at home where they can see the same type of show in their own town. This is different from the situation prevailing a year ago. Then I didn't see much chance for the independent and said so. Today, the picture is changed; the picture is bright and will become greater."

Swinging into the economic condition of the business, he said:

"We will continue to hold public confidence if we show progress. Tough times make you think saner. This industry is now experiencing a physic. It's good for it. It's the best it has ever had. It will help us correct and change production, not in quality, but back to the fundamentals that meant success."

Kent's predictions for production were these:

1—He sees the return of personalities, backed by big books and vehicles.

2—Next year will be a tough year for specials. Next year will see waste elim-

When "A" Means "No"

Philadelphia—In taking a crack at Will Horwitz for advocating censorship for Texas, the official draft of the M. P. T. O. resolution scoring the Houston exhibitor read, in error:

"RESOLVED, That we are definitely certain that he in a way expresses the opinion or desires of the theatre owners of Texas or others in the theatre business in that state."

Just an instance where the typewriter slipped.

Decision On Express Cut In Two Weeks

Philadelphia—Decision on reduced express charges will be made within a week after industry leaders meet regional vice presidents of the American Railway Express Co. in New York on November 19 to battle for lower rates on films returned to exchanges.

Basing their argument on the plea that returned prints temporarily cease to be a live commodity after usage on a booking, exhibitor chiefs of the M. P. T. O. A. will seek to cut the theatre field's annual express bill by $1,650,000, on the basis of a 75 per cent reduction for returns.

J. H. Butner, of Educational's Atlanta exchange, is the author of the plan which will be presented to the railway chiefs. Butner will attempt to prove that total earnings from theatre express transportation will be greater with the cut because thousands of exhibitors now using parcel post and local truck deliveries will be in a position to afford the express route, thereby jumping the company's grosses.

Total daily express bill of the industry now is $10,000, it is understood.

Contract May Be Okayed In Time for Jan. 1 Use

No date has been set for putting the proposed standard contract into effect, although ratification may be completed in time to put it into use Jan. 1. The document was ratified at the M. P. T. O. A. Philadelphia convention, and so far has been approved at the Michigan and Texas units of Allied States Association. The agreement will be retroactive on 1930-31 contracts, it is stated.

Unwise to Chill Houses In Summer, Exhibs Told

Philadelphia—The growing reaction to chilled theatres in summer is jeopardizing business at theatres, H. E. Bunosed, Carrier engineer, told exhibitors at the convention here.

"A Bunch o' the Boys Were Whooping

By JAMES P.

PHILADELPHIA—It was Harley L. Clarke, personally, so the story goes, who influenced the "suggestion" made to MPTO leaders that Harry C. Arthur be elected to the board of directors' post left vacant by the resignation of Harold B. Franklin. And Harry was NOT elected!

Entering downtown Philly, delegates were greeted with the blinding rays emanating from an electric sign built on the north side of City Hall, which read: "Welcome, Motion Picture Owners of America." There were those who wondered if elimination of the word "theatre" was accidental, the relationship with the Hays organization being what it is.

From the social sidelines there were many escapades, all of which must go unexplained. For instance, there were:

The newshound who was shaved by another newshound.

An unexpected call from the wife of a prominent exhibitor.

The pre-convention meeting where an aide-de-camp of the convention committee was framed solely for the amusement of fellow delegates who were nursing a pet peeve, etc.

Freaks of the convention: Pat Garyn, sales chief of National Screen Service, wearing a carnation in his lapel which bore the tag: "Advance to Better Business with Advance Trailer." Advance distributed the flowers to all delegates. Pat tried to dodge, but eventually succumbed.

Another not-on-the-program situation developed when it was discovered that the executive headquarters of MPTO was dispensing refreshments supplied by Allied.

Clinton Weir, "pop" MPTO confederate, confined to New Rochelle, N. Y., hospital, sent a wire to the boys in explanation of his absence.

Edward Kuykendahl is from Columbus, Miss., a small town, but Ed packed more punch in his discussion of exhibitor problems than many of the so-called big-timers from New York and Chicago.

Kuykendahl told the boys of the early days of amusements, back when E. V. Richards was

FRED WEHRENBERG JACK MILLER

"head bandit of the circus world," and Jack Miller's Windy City could not boast of a "machine gun industry."

The record shows that when Charlie Pettijohn talks at exhibitor conventions he usually wows 'em. Here in Philly he staged a repeat. His dope on the seriousness of the tax situation made an impression on the gang, such as it was in point of numbers.

Six hundred were expected, according to M. P. T. O. press agentry, but the figure dwindled to 350 two days before the convention and got off to a total attendance of about 125. Not all of these were exhibitors, either.

An interested spectator: Mabel Parkhouse, aide-de-camp and secretaire de luxe to Charlie Pettijohn.

He can't stay away. Pete Woodhull has no direct affiliation with exhibitor politics, but the former president of the M. P. T. O. A. felt the lure irresistible. He was one of the most popular figures at the convention.

J. R. GRAINGER SPYROS SKOURAS

Oscar Hanson may be the general sales manager for Tiffany. And Tiffany may be selling franchises okayed by Allied, but that didn't prevent M. A. Lightman of the M. P. T. O. from giving Hanson a royal hand. Even permitted carte blanche in his talk. A nice spirit.

Who do you think was the spotlight in one of the on-the-sideline groups here? Harry O. Schwalbe. Time was when Schwalbe was the big gun at First National in the days when—Now he's operating theatres in Baltimore, Philadelphia and eastern Pennsylvania towns.

Funny slant is this: Schwalbe, who once fought Adolph Zukor so bitterly, now operates the Arcadia in Philly as a first-run. And it shows Paramount pictures.

Some of the famous Mastbaum hospitality that prevailed in the days when Mine Host Jules was alive still pervades the friendly carcass of Abe Einstein, now part of the Warner theatre organization in this section of the land. Abe hobnobbed plenty with the newspaper boys and the newspaper boys liked it.

The official badge of the convention was constituted a pass for all of the Warner theatres in town.

Sunday night First National showed "Little Caesar," Monday night, Fox put on "Just Imagine." Special for the delegates in each instance.

Tiffany practically stole the social aspects of the gathering. Behind a long table in Oscar Hanson's suite was a lavish display of food, and something that wasn't lemonade. It was open house for all comers. There were plenty.

We wonder if Pete Woodhull is interested in cloaks and suits? He made a strong plea for a "Buy Now" campaign and insisted that the boys start the ball rolling by purchasing an extra clothing supply.

It looked like the Motion Picture Club transposed en masse to the Benjamin Franklin, what with Charlie Steiner, Sam Sonin, Arthur Hirsch, Lou Geller, Morris Kutinsky, Louis Blumenthal and Al Lichtman having dinner at one big table.

The light artillery was doing heavy road work in Pat Garyn's suite early one morning when the house 'phone rang with a request that "Mr. Darwin" and his guests be a bit more reasonable. From that point on, Pat had to put on an evolution-of-man act.

The town staged an Armistice Day parade early Tuesday morning. The blare of trumpets and drums helped to scout lazy delegates from peaceful slumber.

Electrical Research brought 'em in from all points of the compass. Among those present were Frank Rogers, central division manager headquartering in Chicago; Fred Warren and Stanley Hand from New York; Ben Piermont, who does this and that for Charlie Bunn, the general sales manager in New York; W. E. Woodward of the Philadelphia exchange; A. M. Moran of Pittsburgh; C. S. Bestar of Charlotte; Bob Long, special representative with headquarters in Washington—and Walter Eberhardt.

Tentative plans place Frank Walker, Ralph Picquet, Fred Desberg, Jay Emanuel and Dave Barrist on a committee to develop a "Buy Now" campaign with Chambers of Commerce throughout the country. One wit suggested that President Lightman appoint a second committee to determine what the public could use in place of dough to follow out the dictates of the drive.

Warners and M-G-M had the newspaper concession, furnishing copies of New York and Philadelphia sheets each morning. Pathe had a paper privilege, too.

*On Tuesday, interest began to lag considerably, with newshounds at the press table wishing for a touch of fireworks as Sydney Cohen and "Al" Steffes knew them years ago. Echoes of that famous Thacher decision were heard when Lightman, in discussing the trials and tribulations of the 5-5-5 committee before it adopted a standard contract, stated that members of this committee were considering abandoning their work because of Thacher's court verdict declaring arbitration illegal.

Lew Pizor bangs a wicked gavel, as evidenced by the dent which he made in the speakers' table when calling the convention to order. Or maybe because of the fact that a good old plumber's round-headed hammer was used in place of a gavel.

When Pizor isn't attending conventions of the parent body, he steers the course of the M. P. T. O. of eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey and Delaware.

George W. Elliott, executive secretary of Quaker Town's Chamber of Commerce, welcomed the boys on behalf of the city. He paid the industry a neat compliment for its generosity in aiding public benefits. Which more than reminded one financially-bent exhibitor that a benefit for theatre owners would certainly be in order.

Frank C. Walker, the legal mind of the M. P. T. O. A., is no mean orator.

A word of commendation to Abe Einstein, Pizor, Barrist, Emanuel and George Aarons, home town boys, for their efficient handling of arrangements.

Walter Vincent, a good looker despite his silvery hirsute adornment, modestly admitted that he "loves all women and hoped all women would love him." What a man! And right out loud, too!

Stiff competition was in evidence between rival equipment concerns who fought like the hammers of some place or other to kidnap theatre owners for parties.

Ned Stevenson, popular prexy of Visugraphic, did not mince words in telling producer-distributors that they promise too much in attempts to collar accounts for industrial films.

Small Town Must Get Break, Warns Southern "Vet"

Philadelphia—The industry must cater more to small towns if it expects to stem the tide of adverse legislation, in the opinion of Edward Kuykendahl, Mississippi delegate to the M.P.T.O.A. convention, who is active in fighting successful fights against censorship and taxation in his state.

Kuykendahl, who delivered what many declared to be one of the few constructive messages at the exhibitor convention, explained that between 80 and 90 per cent of adverse legislation emanates from small communities, or through individuals from small towns, who, lacking the sophistication of big towners, resent smut in their entertainment.

He urged, as did other speakers including Charles C. Pettijohn, that the industry abstain from its policy of publishing box-office grosses, fabulous salaries and enormous sums represented in merger deals. This is vital, it was pointed out, if the industry is to avoid heavy tax burdens.

South Resents Race Mixture

Kuykendahl advised producers to steer clear of mixing whites and negroes in films, declaring that bitter resentment is harbored by southern whites when colored folks are indiscriminately mixed in scenes with whites.

"No cheating" by either side is the secret for amicable relations between distributor and exhibitor, in the opinion of the Mississippi delegate. When differences arise between these factions, adjustments can be brought about if both parties use intelligence, fairness and honesty, he believes. These fights should be held closely within the trade so that further public disapproval will not be brought about through newspaper accounts, he said.

Six essentials for successful theatre operation were offered to exhibitors by Kuykendahl, including:

1. Keep on good terms with and merit the confidence of the local newspaper.
2. Develop good will of schools, principals and teachers. Don't cheat on them, because if you do and they find out, you're licked.
3. Become interested in boys' work; clubs, bands, athletics and school offer splendid opportunities for developing a tieup.
4. Develop good will of ministerial associations and women's clubs.
5. Take a definite stand, win or lose, in politics. No one will respect or play ball with a fence-rider.
6. Work hard to develop your theatre, along general lines to the point that it becomes an asset to the community.

Films Aiding to Restore Prosperity, Asserts Hays

Philadelphia—Will H. Hays is satisfied with the present condition of the industry and believes that "by its own soundness" the business is contributing "to the restoration of public confidence and of national prosperity." He so informed the M.P.T.O. convention via a letter addressed to M. A. Lightman.

Bad Breaks—and How!

Philadelphia—The big electrics had been tipped off that they were to be put on the spot at the M P T O A confab for alleged excessive service charges. Western Electric mustered sales executives in the East, who stormed the portals of the Benjamin Franklin hotel in an effort to influence leaders of the exhibitors unit to pigeon-hole and prevent the squawk from ever reaching the floor. The move was unsuccessful and a resolution was passed condemning "Erpi."

RCA went unmentioned until Walter Vincent. Pennsylvania chain operator, offered an amendment to include the "Erpi" competitor which led many insiders to wonder what fancy political strategy had been brought into play to put RCA on the same spot.

Vincent hasn't a single RCA installation in his string. Why he socked alleged high charges of RCA when he pays them to Western Electric is a matter which caused speculation aplenty.

Misrepresented Posters Putting Films on Spot?

Philadelphia—"Posters have done more harm to create pro-censorship feelings than any other phase of the business," U. S. Congressman William P. Connery, of Massachusetts, told exhibitor delegates to the MPTOA convention.

Sensationalism angles on billboards and in theatre fronts not only causes resentment because of vulgarism, he said, but makes people believe they have been cheated when they find no trace of the poster representation on the screen.

"Keep posters clean and avoid this misrepresentation and the American people will kill off all moves toward censorship," was the advice of the congressman. "The public wants clean pictures," he declared, "but they do not want 'namby-pamby' films."

"I will fight censorship as long as I am in the congress of the United States," he concluded.

Film Dirt Socked In M.P.T.O. Tirade

Philadelphia—Obscenity in talkers and a slap at producers who inject too much sex and vulgarity in pictures, were socked during sessions of the M.P.T.O.A. convention here.

M. A. Lightman, president; Ed. Kuykendahl, of Mississippi; Charles C. Pettijohn, of Film Boards of Trade; Miss M. Close, Pennsylvania chairman of the Federation of Catholic Alumnae, and others delivered scorching tirades against this trend in talkers. Practically all made pleas to producers to deviate from this policy and to avoid jeopardizing the box-office success of pictures in small communities.

285 Votes Cast At Convention In Proxy Plan

Philadelphia—What the M. P. T. O. A. lacked in numerical strength was made up in point of votes. At least, that is the way the credentials committee of the organization figured it out.

Votes on hand totaled 285, based on the congressional unit system, with 17 film zones, covering areas in 25 states, represented. Unrepresented territory, because of distance from the scene of action, was construed to be covered by delegates associated with theatre organizations having holdings in all of the states, the committee declared.

| STATE | REPRESENTATIVES | VOTES |
|---|---|---|
| Arkansas | J. F. Norman | 7 |
| California | Jack Cohen | 11 |
| Connecticut | Ed. S. Levy, Geo. Browning, J. L. Schuylman | 5 |
| Delaware | Benjamin Shindler | 1 |
| Florida and Georgia | Willard C. Patterson | 16 |

| Kansas | R. G. Liggett | 8 |
| Maryland | J. Louis Rome | 6 |
| Michigan | J. R. Dennison | 13 |
| Mississippi | Ed. Kuykendahl | 8 |
| Missouri | R. R. Biechele (8); Fred Wehrenberg (8) | 16 |
| Nebraska | Charles E. Williams | 6 |
| New Hampshire | Joseph Miller | 2 |
| New Jersey | William Goldman | 12 |
| New York | W. A. Dillon, F. C. Walker, C. H. Cohen | 43 |
| No. and So. Carolina | Charles Picquet | 17 |
| Ohio | Fred Desberg | 22 |
| Oklahoma | M. A. Lightman | 8 |
| Pennsylvania | M. E. Comerford, Jay Emanuel, Lieut. Gov. Arthus James, C. T. Hopkins, Senator Frank J. Harris | 36 |
| Rhode Island | E. M. Fay | 3 |
| Tennessee | R. N. Williams | 10 |
| Virginia | Ike Weinberg | 10 |
| 24 States | 33 Representatives | 285 Votes |

Too Many Shorts, Not Too Many O.K., Goldburg Says

Philadelphia—Too many shorts are being produced, but not enough good ones, Jesse J. Goldburg, general manager of the Van Beuren Corp., told the M. P. T. O. A. delegates in making a plea to give the shorts a better break.

"Don't take the heart out of the salesman. He doesn't come to you on a false enterprise or to mislead you," Goldburg said, declaring further that short subjects were an influence which built good will for the theatre and should be encouraged. "If you want a test," he told his audience, "advertise that you won't show short subjects in your house for thirty days and see what happens."

Exhibs to Work With MPTO on Public Wants

Philadelphia—Exhibitor chiefs of the M. P. T. O. A. will meet with producer interests in an attempt to develop machinery for ascertaining public likes and dislikes to various types of entertainment before production is actually launched.

Heretofore, check-ups have been made on pictures distributed with the sales sheets used to guide producers on future releases. It is planned to change this policy so that studios may have on hand details of the trend of public opinion, using the information to map production plans.

It Was a National Convention—But Pennsylvania Sent 80% of Delegates

Seventy-three Out of 127 at Meeting Hailed from Local Houses in "Philly"

Philadelphia—By official count, Philadelphia contributed 73 exhibitors to the approximate 127 theatre operators present at the annual pow-wow of the M. P. T. O. A., which wound up late Wednesday afternoon.

From surrounding Pennsylvania cities and towns came 21, which means that the other 47 states kicked in with approximately 33 exhibitors, many of which were officers of affiliated state M. P. T. O. A. units.

In fewer words, it was a national convention, but the attendance, neither in point of number or distribution was what a national convention of exhibitors might be expected to be.

Side-line watchers and salesmen for equipment and film concerns far outstripped the actual number of exhibitor delegates. One hundred fifteen equipment and film representatives and 30 news and tradepaper men were in attendance, or a stronger contingent than the exhibitor group by 17.

MPTOA Becomes MEC

Philadelphia—High and low, and particularly the high, paid tribute to Mike E. Comerford, pioneer chain operator, at the exhibitor convention this week. It was pretty much a Comerford party from every and all slants.

Sideline Watchers Swamped Total Number of Theatre Owners in Attendance

WHAT THE CAMERA CAUGHT AT DINNER WHICH CLIMAXED

Philadelphia—They saw, they ate and listened from eight o'clock Tuesday night until one fifteen Wednesday morning at the M. P. T. O. A. banquet, which highlighted the national convention held here this week. The list of speakers drew sales managers from New York, who made the trip expressly for this function.

On the dais may be glimpsed Charlie Pettijohn telling Sam Dembow something that Sam apparently was eager to get; Mike

VERY few knew until Tuesday night that that fighting "devil-dog," General Butler, was a bosom pal of Lon Chaney. When that popular player passed away recently, Butler made a request to his superiors for use of a plane for a cross-country hop to Hollywood to attend the funeral. The general was turned down, but paid his last respects to Lon by sending a special marine guard of honor from Los Angeles.

Chaney, incidentally, was a sergeant marine on the reserve list and on several occasions, stated General Butler, turned down an officer's commission.

A study of facial expressions of those on the dais revealed a wide assortment. For instance: Nervousness of Al Lichtman, sternness of Mike Comerford, contentment of Charlie Pettijohn, humanness of Major General Smedley Butler, loveliness of Jean Harlowe, forcefulness of Sidney Kent.

"Off the Record"....

WHEN General Butler arrived, Stanley Hand of "Erpi" thought he was watching Fred Warren, his colleague, so close is the resemblance.

"Good grief," exclaimed Stanley when he saw the general enter the hotel lobby, "Warren has made a terrific boner. He apparently thinks the banquet is a costume affair and is all dressed up like a war horse."

If some pharmaceutical genius discovers a remedy for "leather-tongue," exhibitor delegates will inscribe his name on the roll of honorary membership.

IF you don't think Congressman William P. Connery of Massachusetts is a pal of the picture business, guess again. "Bill," as his film friends know him, is also plenty liked by the entire congressional district which he represents. When he runs for reelection, the codfish state Republicans don't bother to name opposition.

Connery's fluent knowledge of French amazed listeners at the MPTOA banquet. His sense of humor is on a par with Irish Eddie Dowling, both of whom ran neck-and-neck for story telling honors—after Con McCole. Con, incidentally, kept the exhibs and their friends in stitches for an entire hour with his sensationally funny yarns and wit. Sid Kent dabbed his eyes more than once; Jimmy Grainger turned near-apopletic with laughter and Harry Warner chewed right through the end of a Corona as the hee-haws convulsed him.

THE NATIONAL M. P. T. O. A. CONVENTION AT PHILADELPHIA

Comerford, as he thought out his opening address; Pete Woodhull, thinking of some fast ones to pull; M. A. Lightman, smiling for the photographer; Albert M. Greenfield looking important; Al Lichtman, as well as Jimmy Grainger, and Eddie Dowling.

The vacant chair flanking Lightman was later filled by Sidney Kent, who was answering a telephone call as the camera did its stuff. A few minutes later Governor Pinchot, Major General Smedley Butler and Mayor Mackey of Philadelphia entered.

TUESDAY night's banquet was nothing short of an oratorical sensation. For interest, entertainment and humor it excelled any event in exhibitor history of recent years.

Seating arrangements at the banquet were handled so inefficiently that Jay Emanuel, chairman of the arrangements committee, found himself seated 17 tables from his wife.

Insiders wondered about Sam Katz when Sid Kent said that small town theatres could not be operated successfully by $50 a week chain managers.

What started out to be the social highlight of a national exhibitor meet developed into a concentrated personal tribute to M. E. Comerford when a majority of banquet speakers delivered eulogies to "Mike."

Harry Rathner made the hop in New York just for the dinner on Tuesday night.

. . . . So They Say

JEAN HARLOWE, at the banquet sat between Al Lichtman and James R. Grainger of Fox, which prompted one wit to remark: "Good-bye, United Artists. Jean will be a Fox star before the banquet is over."

And Leo Brecher forsook the Big Town to hear what Sid Kent had to say about the future of the independent exhibitor. Kent was optimistic. Brecher wasn't disappointed.

Morris Kutinsky was very, very busy. The T. O. C. C. crowd wondered why, but all that Morris would say was he was looking over a piece of property.

MAYOR DARBY of Scranton, who attended the banquet as a tribute to Comerford worked for MPTO Secretary Mike O'Toole back in the days when Mike was a respectable newspaper editor.

General Butler, of the Marines, expressed a likeness for pictures and stated that his devildog camp at Quantico, Va., shows three different features every night of the year, a total of 1,095. The statement gave Pettijohn plenty to think over as evidenced by Charlie's attempt to find the general's secret of successful operation of triple-featured programs when double bills in the industry cause more grief than Will Horwitz's newspaper ads in Houston newspapers.

Warren Nolan, of United Artists' home office publicity staff, escorted Jean Harlowe from New York for the banquet. And was it a pleasure!

inated because sound has now been defined and classified.

3—Bigness in production will mean nothing unless backed up by story and personalities.

4—Cost will mean nothing if quality is there.

5—Producers are returning to the silent technique and will use sound as an embellishment. Dialogue will be trimmed and will be used only where necessary and the background, sweep and action which figured so importantly in the silent picture blended into talkers.

Kent said mechanical limitations, or what producers believed to be the limitations because they didn't know better at the time, were responsible for the dropping of action in favor of stories which used small companies and that because of this so many stage plays were made into pictures. He also blamed this condition for the drift toward sophistication on the screen, the loss of kid patronage and the breaks in bad taste which have been made in many talkers.

Covers Six Subjects

He preluded his talk with a concise statement covering six subjects. Of wide film he said he thought the business should proceed cautiously, to avoid hurling anything into the theatres' lap unless the public demanded it. The cost of sound has to be amortized, he continued, and closed the subject by declaring the industry cannot afford wide film, and the time for it has not yet arrived.

"Who can say what will happen in this scientific age?" queried Kent in taking up television. "It's coming, but is yet some time off. As an industry, we will welcome anything for which there is a public demand, but we must not force it. I see television as an aid when it comes."

His views on talkers for the home were also definite. "Those selling pictures to theatres have no right to encourage competition for those theatres. Home talkers, when ready, call for specially-made films," he stated.

It is Kent's opinion that the use of color depends on its perfection, which he declared had not yet been reached. "It is a great thing if it is not overdone," he added. "It can apply to certain films. I would use all color in pictures only as an exception. Color should be used to enhance values only."

Attempting to write a uniform contract is "a post-graduate course in patience," Kent said in discussing the results of the 5-5-5 conferences. He thinks the new form is the best so far drawn, at the same time admitting it is not perfect.

Compliments Leaders

"The contract is a step in the right direction and will get better in the future as we learn to sit around a table and talk rather than agitate and bull it out," he remarked.

He paid a compliment to M. A. Lightman for his efforts and said the M.P.T.O.A. had not been backward in presenting its demands. He also paid a compliment to Abram F. Myers and Allied. "I have heard harsh things about Allied, but they played ball in the contract matter," he concluded.

Kent, who stole the convention of the M.P.T.O. of Ohio at Columbus almost a year ago to the day, played a repeat here. When he walked into the convention hall on Tuesday afternoon advance word of his impending address brought in all the stragglers. Whe he finished, the hall emptied itself by almost two-thirds.

At the dinner that same night, sandwiched in a long list of speakers—and most of them were unusually good—Kent was in anything but an easy spot. But, by unanimous opinion, he again came through with a smash talk that sent him out of the banquet as the star of the show.

He told the gathering this was his first attendance at a national exhibitor's convention in his 15 years in the business and said he had stayed away heretofore because he did not believe such conventions to be useful.

He doubled back on a lot of ground covered during the afternoon. He did, however, touch on kid patronage and said he believed the swing toward action pictures with sound backgrounds would automatically solve the problem for the exhibitor.

Other speakers had touched upon clean pictures. This gave Kent an opportunity—and he seized it—to point out that all producers preferred to make that type of production but that it was the public which didn't come through with the proper support.

Headaches

Philadelphia—Proof that producers don't always find the path an easy one was offered here by Sidney R. Kent and Harry M. Warner, when they gave the M.P.T.O.A. convention a real insight into production worries.

Arguing that producers prefer to make clean pictures, but that the public won't support them, Kent declared "Old Ironsides" cost Paramount $2,500,000, that its gross was $1,100,000 and its loss, therefore, $1,400,000.

Warner said "Disraeli," a critics' rave, has lost $300,000 in the United States to date.

Ballyhoo Passe, Films Need Guts

until these vulgarities are eliminated they will not return."

Producers were put on the spot in no uncertain manner by Vincent, for their lack of foresight in not catering to kids.

Miss M. Close, Pennsylvania chief of the Federated Catholic Alumnae, who followed Vincent on the rostrum, declared that kids don't want juvenile pictures, but insist upon a more sophisticated type of screenfare.

Miss Close stated that her association was favorably inclined toward the industry's production and advertising codes of ethics, but that wilfull violations in the latter were being made in Philadelphia territory, pointing out "distasteful" advertising and publicity in local sheets on Universal's "Lady Surrenders."

and the exhibitor, not being a radio expert, falls for it.

"When sound machines went in, we were told the $20 to $40 service charge would be reduced as more machines were installed. Today, the saturation point has been about reached, but the charge hasn't come down any.

"All I've heard at this convention so far is a lot of talk about ideals. We're not doing a thing about the big fellows who are trimming us. Now Western Electric is chiseling whenever it gets the chance. I paid $14,000 for my machine and was told I was paying for research at the time. If Western Electric serviced me and gave me all the parts I require for the next five years, it is my opinion there would still be plenty of profit in that $14,000.

"I believe in cooperation. If I didn't think we get somewhere by sitting around and talking to producers, I would have gone Allied a long time ago. I don't want to see this resolution passed only to call up six months later and find that maybe something was going to be done about it."

Several efforts to reach Charles W. Bunn, of "Erpi" for views on what his company proposes to do about the M. P. T. O. A. resolution failed. It is generally reported, however, that Jack Miller's stand that no reductions in service charges have been made is not correct, the company having slashed its scale three times in the last two years.

New York, were returned to the vice-presidency; Harry C. Arthur, New York, was added, while Sam Dembow of Publix succeeded Willard C. Patterson, Publix's district manager in the Southeast. Fred Wehrenberg of St. Louis succeeded E. M. Fay of Rhode Island as chairman of the board; Jay Emanuel of Philadelphia was re-elected treasurer and Mike O'Toole of Pennsylvania, secretary.

Pioneers' Removal Decried by Warner

Philadelphia—Removal of a number of the pioneers of the industry from the exhibition field has been a regrettable, although inevitable, development of the industry in the chain expansion so necessary to the industry's growth, H. M. Warner declared in addressing the M.P.T.O.A. delegates at convention banquet.

There should be co-operation between chains and independents for the common good, Warner asserted, although he did not amplify his statement concerning independents' ejection from the industry.

COLOR and SOUND

Philadelphia—In taking a fall out of Will Horwitz, Houston exhibitor who is urging the public in his city to support a bill for Texas censorship via paid newspaper copy, Charlie Pettijohn at the same time threw a "heau geste" in the general direction of Abram F. Myers.

"Without knowing," he said, "I venture to say emphatically that Myers never declared he was in favor of such a plan, as Horwitz asserts in his newspaper ads. It is inconceivable that Myers could have done so."

Myers last week telegraphed Motion Picture News from Washington that his support had never been extended to Horwitz's campaign.

Most of the gang went on spending orgies after business sessions. And were some of them sick when they lined up in front of the cashier's cage for their hotel bills!

Even interests close to the Hays' outfit publicly take exception to each other's statements.

During his address to exhibitor delegates, Charlie Pettijohn, Film Board chief, made a colorful plea for a united stand in battling approaching taxation. The industry cannot stand the slightest additional financial burden, Charlie stated, and chiefy because of business depression and the fact that a $500,000,000 bill was dropped into the laps of all branches when the changeover to sound was made.

Harry Warner, several hours later while making an address at the banquet, attempted to lighten Pettijohn's remarks with regards to the big sound bill and stated they should be discounted.

Harry Warner, however, came in for a severe trouncing Wednesday morning when Missouri MPTO President Van Hyning socked Warner—and socked plenty hard—because of alleged admission that savings from merging Warners-First National, and throwing hundreds into unemployment, was to be diverted to theatre acquisitions, and therefore, further stifling the small exhibitor.

Generally, Philadelphia's spirit of "brotherly love" was the keynote of the canfab. Much to the disappointment of the boys who like nathing better than a red hot scrap.

Fred Wehrenberg, who succeeded Ed Fay as chairman of the board of directors, hasn't missed an M.P.T.O.A. meet since they started.

Ed Kuykendahl's trip from Columbus, Miss., where he operates an independent house, was his first north of the Mason-Dixon line in twenty years.

Amortizing Slowly

Philadelphia——The industry spent close to $500,000,000 in its turnover from silent to sound pictures, Charles C. Pettijohn told the M. P. T. O. convention this week.

"But what is not generally understood is that the amortization is not a matter of one year. The period ranges from 10 to 20 years on some companies' books."

Shades of yesteryear were lifted when Abe Sablotsky and J. J. McGuirk were ushered to the banquet dais. They sat at a far corner of a table, almost unnoticed. A few years back they were big guns in Stanley until the Warner deal resulted in eviction of both.

The pair now run an opposition chain with Al Boyd, concentrating on suburban and small town houses.

Philadelphia business was represented at the banquet by Albert M. Greenfield, Warner theatre and real estate representative in the Quaker City. Greenfield, who financed many of the town's biggest picture houses long before Warners secured control of Stanley, sold his first site to Sigmund Lubin, and later scouted for sites for Harry Davis, Jules Mastbaum, for his new boss Harry Warner, and as he put it: "many other so-called big timers in the picture business."

Machine-Like

Philadelphia—The report of the credentials committee had just been read. The chair had asked for some one to move its adoption. But only silence from the floor.

Then, Mike O'Toole in a stage whisper, to M. A. Lightman:

"Where's your man?"

Just then Dick Biechele upped and came through with the necessaries. The seconds followed in quick order and the "ayes" faster than that. Dissenting voices—oone.

Just to prove that there are na hard feelings between business rivals, Irving Lesser, of De Forest, sat at the same banquet table with four "Erpi" sales chiefs including Stanley Hand, M. Woodward, Ben Piermont and Frank Rogers. However, a committee member placed at the same table two women representatives of the Catholic Women's Alumnae. Probably to preserve peace.

Incidentally, wonder if Rogers is still interested in a certain i. o. u. for fifty bucks?

Pete Woodhull would insist upon a long-winded discourse on Jersey politics.

Tribute was paid to the memory of Denny Harris, former Pennsylvania theatre operator, who passed away a few months ago.

Try to imagine the impressiveness of a banquet dais about a block long seating Governor-elect Gifford H. Pinchot, Mayor Harry A. Mackey, of Philadelphia; Mayor Darby, of Scranton; Major General Smedley Butler, boss of the marines; Congressman Wm. P. Connery, Jean Harlowe, "Jimmy" Grainger, Al Lichtman, Eddie Dowling, M. E. Comerford, Sidney R. Kent, Harry M. Warner, M. A. Lightman, J. David Stern, publisher of the "Philadelphia Record"; Harry L. Knapp, chairman of the state board of censors; Albert M. Greenfield, Pete Woodhull, Con McCole, Sam Novero, Sam Dembow, Charlie Pettijohn, J. David Stern, Lew Pizer, and a couple judges.

Philadelphia Western Electric spent plenty to rig up a sound installation in the convention auditorium of the Benjamin Franklin. A truckload of equipment with its staff was brought down from New York.

No word of appreciation for "Erpi" co-operating in the rig-up was forthcoming during any of the sessions, and to pile insult upon injury, the M P T O A passed a resolution condemning the company for excessive service charges.

The climax, however, came at the banquet when a short circuit caused terrific noise in the sound system during showing of a song trailer.

Missouri President Van Hyning admits that he's a "hard-headed Dutchman." Score charges is the toughest financial millstone now tied around the necks of exhibitors, he said.

No convention report would be complete without a word about M.P.T.O.A. President M. A. Lightman and his dynamic personality. He's got a world of boosters.

The last batch of convention delegates on the speakers' platform included Fred Desberg, of Loew's Ohio Theatres; Joe Dennison, Col. Butterfield's ambassador from Michigan; and Nebraska M.P.T.O. President Charlie Williams.

Unknown to anyone in the convention hall at the closing session on Wednesday afternoon, a well known film executive was sitting on the sidelines awaiting an opportunity to spring a discussion which would cause shame to plenty in producing-distributing ranks.

The entire meeting was rapidly winding up when it became evident that a strong desire had developed to rush through a motion for adjournment, and the film executive junked his plan which called for a lengthy talk, for fear the prolongment would be received coldly.

If this guy had gained the floor, the sensation seekers would have been given enough "heat" to satisfy them for the next month, at least.

Nebraska MPTO President Williams got plenty dirty in his talk of the prevailing spirit of harmony. "The most peaceful, harmonious and constructive meeting in the history of the association," was Williams' declaration descriptive of the confab.

Williams compared the serenity of the Philly confab with the exhibitor conventions of olden days when, so he said, "Al Steffes paced frantically up and down the convention hall, flourishing a blackjack in one hand and something in his hip pocket."

Not the First Time

Philadelphia—Walter Eberhardt figured on a quick trip over the road, started from New York at 6 in the morning and arrived at 1. He was traveling in a friend's car when the distributor head went wrong between Elizabeth and New Brunswick.

"Why worry?" said Walter. "This won't be the first time we've had trouble with distributor heads."

Placid Course of M. P. T. O. Conclave Reflected in Tenor of Resolutions

Crack at W. E. and RCA on Service Charges and Horwitz Slam Alone Stand Out

Philadelphia—The conventions of yesteryear are no more. The political machinery of the M.P.T.O.A. demonstrated to oldtimers that the days of fireworks and sensational "bombing" had passed forever.

Aside from the resolution asking Western Electric and RCA to explain the why and how of the present cost of service charges and another condemning Will Horwitz of Houston for publicly advocating censorship in Texas, the rest of the resolutions fell into innocuous and perfunctory channels.

The text conveys the idea:

Emphasize 30-Day Notice On Substitute Releases

WHEREAS, the relationship between the distributor and exhibitor is founded upon a contract, and,

WHEREAS, in the negotiation of said contract, the distributor agrees to deliver and the exhibitor agrees to accept a picture or pictures with specific stars, stories and directors, and,

WHEREAS, before the contract between the distributor and exhibitor is completed an agreement is reached between them regarding the license fee to be charged for said picture or pictures, based upon alleged value and drawing power as outlined in the advance notices, press books, and contracts, and

WHEREAS, the exhibitor relies entirely upon the distributor to deliver the product purchased by said exhibitor; therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED: that it shall be the duty of the distributor to notify the exhibitor, at least within thirty days in advance of National release date, of any substitution which said distributor shall make;

Now, therefore, be it further RESOLVED: That the secretary of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America be instructed to send a copy of this resolution to the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association, and likewise to each and every producer and distributor of motion pictures.

To Probe W.E. and RCA on Cost of Scores and Parts

RESOLVED, by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in convention assembled that we take cognizance of the complaints which have been made to the board of directors about the service and parts charged to theatre owners by the Western Electric Co. and RCA.

RESOLVED, that it is our purpose to fully protect the interests of the theatre owner in this relation and to that end we direct the president of this organization to confer with the proper parties in this relation with a view to having the matter in dispute adjusted.

Favor Railway Express If Rate Drops 75 Per Cent

WHEREAS, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America recognizes that the most desirable method of transporting motion picture films and the disc records that are necessary when sound is so recorded is by railway express;

AND WHEREAS, the only reason that railway express for the transportaton of films and records is not universally employed is its excessive cost in comparison with other means that offer;

AND WHEREAS, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America appreciates that for years the railway express was practically the only means of such transportation in use and that during those years and more recent years the service rendered by the railway express has always been prompt and reliable; be it

RESOLVED, that the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America assures the railway express companies that if a reduction in rates on film and record shipments returning to film exchanges from exhibitors amounting to 75 per cent of the present rate is granted it is the conviction of the organization that there will immediately result such an increase in the number of exhibitors employing railway express exclusively for film and record shipments as to make the greater volume of business more than offset the loss of revenue due to reduction in return rates;

THAT the organization undertakes to induce all its members, in the event of the reduction, to designate railway express as the medium of transportion of films and records booked to them;

THAT the organization will impose upon all its members increased attention to the obligation to make shipments to exchanges by very first possible express after the period for which films may be booked to them shall have expired;

THAT the organization petitions that the reduction asked be granted, not only because it is a fact that no actual loss of revenue to the railway express companies, but rather a gain, will result, but also because of the business depression which has so seriously affected the motion picture theatres of the country and the material relief a rate reduction would afford.

Sock Horwitz for Move To Foist Texas Censorship

RESOLVED, by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in convention assembled that we deplore the action of William Horwitz of Texas in urging the establishment of a censor board in that state because of some difference of opinion between himself and some producers;

RESOLVED, that we are definitely certain that he in no way expresses the opinion or desires of the theatre owners of Texas or others in the theatre business in that state, but, on the contrary, that all interested in our industry in Texas are opposed to official censorship, knowing its defects and the impossibility of operating with talking and sound pictures predominating;

RESOLVED, that we are opposed to any censorship of pictures except as the same may be properly and judiciously exercised within the industry and pledge to the theatre owners of Texas all aid within our power to prevent the imposition of censorship on the industry in that state.

Officially Deplore Death Of D. A. Harris, Pittsburgh

RESOLVED, by the motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in convention assembled:

THAT we deeply deplore the death of D. A. Harris, a former national board member of this organization, a member of our contract committee and always prominent in the work of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and home unit;

RESOLVED, that a minute be made on the records of this convention expressive of our sorrow at the untimely death of Mr. Harris and his removal from a sphere of usefulness and the peformance o tasks for which his great ability so well fitted him;

RESOLVED, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased.

Endorse Comerford Plan To Better Theatre Service

RESOLVED, by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in convention assembled that we heartily recommend the proposition submitted to this convention by M. E. Comerford to extend the service work of our national organization through the formation of the Pennsylvania Economic Association;

RESOLVED, that we believe it will be much to the advantage of all in the motion picture business to make the theatres leading community institutions in the development of industrial and other worth

Strong for Washington Centennial Production

RESOLVED, by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in convention assembled that we heartily recommend the purpose of Congress and patriotic and other bodies to properly celebrate the bi-centennial of George Washington, believing the same will arouse a measure of real patriotism in all parts of our country;

RESOLVED, that we believe this nation-wide celebration of the Washington bi-centennial will so center public attention on the wonderful qualities of Washington, his broad tolerance and complete recognition of the civic and religious rights of all, thus tending to re-shape opinion in such quarters as now deviate from these real American policies;

RESOLVED, that we cooperate in every way in the fitting and proper celebration of the bi-centennial, one phase of which is the making of a motion picture descriptive of the life of Washington. That we endeavor to have this picture historically correct so as to make it valuable as a screen text in colleges and schools after the same has had the proper theatrical showings.

Several Endorse Service and Others Prove to Be the Conventional Kind

Special Films for Holidays Favored by Organization

RESOLVED, by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in convention assembled that we approve of the project presented by President M. A. Lightman to have topical pictures presented illustrative of the different phases of our national life as well as home topics. He particularly instanced Mothers' Day.

Convention Speakers Named in Resolution

RESOLVED: By the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in convention assembled that we are truly grateful to Governor Pinchot, General Smedley Butler, Mayor Harry Mackey, Congressman William P. Conney, Albert M. Greenfield, Harry M. Warner, Sidney R. Kent, Eddie Dowling, C. C. Pettijohn, Con McCole, Hary A. Knapp, George W. Elliot, Lt. Gov. Arthur James, Oscar Hanson, Frank Conklin, Joseph Cunningham, Dr. F. S. Irby, A. C. La Rue, J. S. Parkinson, and others, who favored our organization and the motion picture industry generally by addressing us in convention and banquet.

RESOLVED: That the secretary be instructed to write to each person indicated and express to them the thanks of our national officers and members for these courtesies.

Exhibitors Urged to Give Unemployment Shows

RESOLVED: By the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America that we heartily commend the proposal made by Albert M. Greenfield at the convention dinner that Sunday performances be given in the different theatres to relieve the distress incident to unemployment and the very gracious offer made in that connection by Harry Warner to turn over the seventy-two (72) theatres in the Philadelphia territory to that purpose, coupled with the announced disposition of other theatres owners in the territory to follow in line.

RESOLVED: That we urge the exhibitors generally to do everything in their power to relieve the unemployment situation and help in every way to stabilize industrial and other situations.

Plug for Philly Crowd Which Handled Confab

RESOLVED: By the Motion Pictures Theatre Owners of America in convention assembled that we extend our sincere thanks to Chairman Lewen Pizor, of the Philadelphia committee of arrangements, to Abe Einstein, chairman of the press committee, and the many excellent members of their committees for the commendable way in which the work entailed upon them for this convention was performed.

RESOLVED: That the success of this convention was to a large extent due to the efforts of these exhibitors for which the delegates here are particularly grateful.

Gov.-Elect Pinchot Thanked For Attending MPTOA Banquet

RESOLVED: By the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in convention assembled that our thanks are due and are hereby extended to Governor Pinchot for his very gracious act in coming to our convention dinner and bringing us a message of good cheer and helpfulness.

RESOLVED: That as his presence with us entailed personal sacrifice because of the strenuous campaign through which he just passed that we are particularly grateful to him and his official associates and that a letter to that effect be sent to Governor Pinchot from our national office.

Cut Nut to Bone To Get Seattle House in Black

Seattle—After several weeks of indecision on the part of coast and local Publix executives, the new policy for the Seattle Paramount theatre was decided upon two days before its inauguration.

Intent upon eliminating, if possible, the losses that the house has suffered almost every week during recent seasons, it has been decided to cut operating costs to a minimum, reduce admission prices, and operate on as much of a "grind" policy as will be consistent with the calibre of the house.

As a result, the theatre is inaugurating a new price scale of 25 cents, 35 cents and 50 cents, effective every day in the week. Matinees formerly 50 cents will be 35 cents now, and evening top will be 50 instead of 60 cents. The 16-piece orchestra will be entirely dispensed with, there will be no organ specialties, and, as newspaper ads report, "the entire show is on the screen." Publix stage units will no longer appear here.

This marks the fourth change of policy since the house opened a little more than two years ago. Originally it offered films and Eastern Publix stage units. Then it dropped the stage fare and featured films and musical specialties. A few months ago the policy changed again to accommodate films and Coast stage units. And now comes the present plan.

Its success will be carefully clocked by Leon Levy, new division manager for the Northwest, who has just arrived here to replace Robert Blair, recently appointed Los Angeles city manager.

Knill Back With Warner

Denver — Fred Knill, manager of the Paris at Santa Fe, and previously assistant manager of the Warner exchange here, has returned as a salesman. He replaces C. C. Caldwell, who has bought the Palace at Lovington, N. M.

Finnegan Heads Union

Cleveland—Oscar Scheck, for many years president of the local Theatrical Employes' Union, last week declined re-election. Bill Finnegan was elected president.

Saturation Point in Sight; Both Distributors and Theatres Hurt by Practice

Double-featuring, discouragement of which distributors sought in zoning plans, is on the increase throughout the country, having reached the saturation point in many spots. Exchange men are concerned over the spread of the practice, which is more rapid in recent months, due to the lack of good pictures.

The public has been educated to double-featuring to the extent that even a strong attraction has a hard time getting by on its own when it hits the neighborhoods. As a consequence, shorts are taking it on the chin, being crowded out by the double-feature gag.

The shoe pinches two ways. The distributor is penalized because the exhibitor insists upon minimum rentals, and the exhibitor is hurt because the two-feature policy runs up overhead. Circuit and affiliated houses as well as independents are double-featuring to a point where a shortage of product is felt by many competition houses.

To date, the practice has increased business at exchanges, as, obviously, it has resulted in an appreciably greater number of films being played. In spite of this, however, it has had practically no effect on the exchange's net because of the factors noted.

Double-featuring houses report an increase in the number of telephone inquiries as to the starting time of one or another of the features being played. Observers declare this to be the most significant evidence of a waning of interest in the double bills. It indicates, they say, that patrons are tiring of sitting through the abnormally long, freak programs, and are interested in seeing only one of the two features offered by the house.

Reaction Seen

A certain portion of the public will inevitably react to a bargain offering of this kind by evidencing suspicion, it is also pointed out. These persons believe that something cheap is being pawned off on them, and that both, or at least one of the features, is, of necessity, a flop that wouldn't have been spotted double if it was good enough to play alone. For these reasons, persons of this type avoid a double feature house entirely and come to regard it eventually as a warning.

The difficulty of spotting two good features on the same program and at reasonable cost to the house is also a danger not easily avoided. Dyed-in-the-wool film goers who sit through even one feature which does not satisfy them forget the bargain angle and feel that they have been "taken." If the same experience is encountered often enough they come to look on these double feature house as a "gyp joint" and avoid it.

Because of this reaction, distributors are confident the pendulum will swing the other way in favor of single features. If it does, there'll be a jam on playdates, they feel.

The double-feature issue was a big stumbling block in the Chicago zoning negotiations and with give-aways led to dropping of the proposed clearance schedules.

'Non-Union Union' Asks Injunction Against Rivals

Kansas City—Sound Projectionists' Association, the "non-union union" operators, has filed a petition in the Federal District court asking for a restraining order against the International Alliance of Theatre Stage Employes and Moving Picture Operators of the United States and Canada, Inc., to prevent them from intimidating members of the non-union group.

According to members of the Sound Projectionists' Association, threats have been made against them, some of whom have been told they will be "taken for a ride." The non-union association declares in the petition that union men have thrown stench bombs into certain theatres employing non-union operators in an attempt to get the projectionists to resign.

The petition also asks for a restraining order against the local chapters of the International Alliance in Kansas City and St. Joseph, Mo., and asks that damages in the amount of $10,000 be assessed against the defendants because of alleged interference with the operation of the St. John and Baltis theatres in Kansas City and the Rialto in St. Joseph.

Some time ago it was rumored that the non-union group would retaliate stench-bombing of non-union houses by placing stench bombs in union houses. The last theatre to be the victim of a stench bomb was the Baltis, but as yet no retaliation has been attempted. No date has been set for a hearing of the petition.

Franco-German Control?

Paris — Development of a Franco-German combine aimed against American films is behind the purchase of control of German Emelka by a syndicate headed by M. Albert Kohan. Production of talkers in both French and German is planned. Other French firms are to be asked to join the group, which is said to control 70 per cent of the French market. Meanwhile, French production activity is being increased rapidly.

Two New Talker Houses Planned For San Diego

San Diego, Cal.—One dark house here may be reopened and a stock theatre turned ever to talkers if deals under way are completed.

Showing of Spanish talkers and presentation of roadshows in the Balboa is planned by Harry Hartman, southern division manager for Fox. Under the plan, the foreign language talkers will be shown three days a week, and road productions booked out of Los Angeles to fill the rest of the weekly program.

The Balboa has been closed for almost a year. Hartman's plan is the result, he said, of many requests by Spanish residents here for talkers in their native tongue. The Savoy is the other house involved.

After a run of five years, Fulkerson and Marsh, producers, plan to close. Details of the proposed move have not been announced, but the producers say they plan to lease the house to Los Angeles theatre men for film productions.

If the deal goes through, the Savoy Players will go to a house in Hollywood to continue their productions, Lawrence Marsh, producing director, said.

A movement is under way by many prominent civic organizers to sell enough season tickets to finance the company in a longer stay here. The announcement of the proposed closing has aroused many San Diegans, as the Savoy is the last house here where stage plays are offered.

Marquee Billings Being Used to Sell Fox Mirror

Fox Theatres is plugging sales of the Screen Mirror, fan publication and house organ. The magazine was originated by Fox West Coast Theatres. It is being sold in all houses of the chain, lobby displays, window cards and even marquee billings being used to plug the magazine.

Distributors and Circuits Do Quick About-Face to Avert Probe, Is Charge

Independent exhibitors profess considerable amusement over the about-face attitude of distributors and affiliated circuits in computing the amount of rental grosses which independent theatres contribute.

The inside is said to be that the distributors and affiliates had a government whitewash about set, as a result of their claims that the market is open, when the repeated statements made at the contract deliberations at New York and Atlantic City that independents supply only 15 per cent of the rental gross got the government "all het up."

Some independents were quick to seize this advantage, asserting this proved that the industry was 85 per cent trustified, by distributors' and chains' own statements. This precluded any clean bill of health, as was reported planned.

A Two-Way "Pickle"

Then the about-face, with articles appearing in some of the trade journals, which independents believe were inspired, showing that the percentage of independent rentals is much greater than the 15 per cent figure, running as high as 40 to 45 per cent.

Independents see in this maneuver another advantage, now insisting that although affiliated circuits represent about 60 per cent of the rentals, they practically dictate the exhibition situation through zoning schedules.

Orchestra and Flesh To Return at Tampa

Tampa—The Tampa is going to have an orchestra again, a symphony of 17 pieces, and "flesh and blood" acts will be added to the programs from time to time, states Paul Short, managing director. A symphony orchestra was a feature of the house from the opening until talkers arrived.

Rockett Supervising Four

Hollywood—Al Rockett, associate producer at Fox, has been assigned supervision of four pictures, "East Lynne," which Frank Lloyd will direct; "The Painted Woman," to be directed by Irving Cummings; "The Modern World," which Chandler Sprague will direct, and "Three Girls Lost," to be directed by Sidney Lanfield.

Executive Slams Salary Slashes as "Foolhardy" Act

A well known executive, commenting on the curtailment and wage-slashing fever which is ravaging its way through certain quarters of the industry, has this to say for publication without use of his name:

Might the economic observations of one who has been connected with the motion picture industry in every branch, from a time shortly after its christening, be expressed in connection with the reported curtailment rampage of overhead? It might seem incongruous for one as lowly as I am in the general scheme of things to voice an opinion on an economic question as great as that in the alleged depression of business and the reduction of salaries. In my various activities, it has been necessary for me to learn where curtailment may be made in production as well as distribution expense without interfering either with efficiency or merit of our productions.

Prosperity in the country generally, and in any industry specifically, can come only through the circulation and not the hoarding of the dollar. It is basically true that a dollar spent finds circulation that brings profit and comfort in an endless circle.

Business depression, hard times and panic follow only when wealth is hoarded and money withdrawn from circulation. Prosperity comes only from circulation of a country's wealth. A country's resources are only to permit of consumption and circulation, consumption of the resources and circulation of the wealth.

As a concrete example, if an individual is worth a million dollars and the cash is locked in a vault, it earns nothing, does him no good and prevents others from themselves earning money from or out of that million dollars capital.

The moment we reduce salaries only to conserve cash, that moment we take that much money out of circulation, thereby reducing the purchasing power of the individual, which in turn affects the earning

"Life of Party" $17,000, $19,000 2nd Week in L. A.

Los Angeles—Warners' "Life of the Party," day and date second week at Warners' Downtown and Hollywood, continued to display great strength, getting high rating for the town with $19,000 and $17,000 respectively. Amos 'n' Andy slipped $5,000 in its third week at the Orpheum, turning in $16,000 for its third stanza.

Cooler weather and Armistice Day helped business all over town, with the Criterion and State doing well. "The Big Trail" took a spurt, being due to fold. The Pantages did just average on "Madam Satan." "Her Wedding Night" slipped to $4,500 at Grauman's Egyptian.

Show Business to Take Care of Own, Brown Says

Hiram S. Brown, president of Radio-Keith-Orpheum, attending the New York emergency employment committee meeting, notified that body that now, as in the past, the theatrical business will take care of the unemployed, the aged and the unfortunate of its own profession. As a matter of history, the people of the theatre have not only "taken care of their own," but in service and in contribution have accomplished more unselfish charity in behalf of others than the members of any other profession or business. Already there are over 5,000 artists of the stage and screen enlisted as volunteers at benefit shows for the needy of other walks of life during November and December.

Musicals Out, Newspaper Says

Cincinnati—The fact that there has been an excess of screen productions adapted from or based on operettas and musical comedies, on which the public has been fed up, has been the subject of animated discussions by various local groups for the past several months.

Commenting on the situation editorially, the Cincinnati Enquirer, in a recent issue, says under the captain of "All's Quiet":

"Just now we seem to be going through one of those intermediate periods in the motion picture industry when everybody just marks time and waits to see what the other fellow is going to do. Truth to tell, the industry has a man-sized job on its hands, for it must entertain some 50,000,000 or so film patrons and seems to have exhausted every possibility of novelty."

"The big mistake the producers made—a mistake that they made on many previous occasions—was to ride a good horse to death. So eager were they to get immediate returns on sound pictures when they first came out that they exploited the new medium indiscriminately, and to its own disadvantage as well as to theirs. Hence, we went through that nerve-racking period of Broadway pictures dealing with some phases of theatrical or night club life and in dragging in song numbers in every other scene. Fired by the success of "Broadway Melody," Hollywood turned out dozens of films on the same pattern until now the very patient public is fed up and indifferent."

Wunder, in East, Revises Midwest Good Will Tour

Conferences are under way in New York between eastern members of the Academy of M.P. Arts and Sciences and Clinton Wunder, executive manager, prior to the latter's goodwill tour of the Middle West. Wunder has revised his speaking schedule, which now is as follows: Nov. 19, Memphis; Nov. 20, St. Louis; Nov. 21, Omaha; Nov. 23 and 24, Minneapolis; Nov. 25, Milwaukee.

$46,445 Big for 'Doorway to Hell' 3rd Week Slated

Smashing business done by "The Doorway to Hell," Warners' surprise picture, was the feature of Broadway this and last week. The film, which got $46,445 in its first stanza, is going big in its second week, and will be held for a third, the first so honored since the Strand went talker.

Harold Lloyd's "Feet First," coming in last week, showed strength, grabbing $55,200, and is off to a good second week. The Amos 'n' Andy film at the Mayfair slipped considerably during the week, not even the attraction of a new theatre being sufficient to land it in the big money which characterized its first week. "Du Barry" at the Rivoli was weak and is being pulled Friday in favor of "Morocco" after a two-week session. Anna May Wong flopped with "The Flame of Love" at the Cohan, with the current war picture, "Suspense," seemingly doing considerably better this week. "The Cat Creeps" is showing strength at the Globe and will be held over.

"East Is West" Gets Top Dough In Omaha-$14,400

Omaha — After "milking" the town for nine days with "Check and Double Check," the Orpheum came through with a 90% rating with five days of "East Is West." Receipts came to $14,400. Signor Friscoe's marimba band on the stage helped things along, but the picture did the biz.

"Scotland Yard" at the State first half hit 110%, doing $2,475. All this was in face of the annual Ak-Sar-Ben live stock and horse show which claimed an attendance of 25,000 persons. Night sessions of the horse show hit the major houses, all admitted.

At the Paramount, "Laughter" hit par for $8,500. Another 100% week was hung up at the World with "Monte Carlo," with takings at $11,000.

"College Lovers," last half at the State, dropped to 80% at $2,000. With openings of the week-run houses on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, the final four days at this house always finds the going tough.

Nabbed in Theatre

Rochester—False sense of fearlessness which police said impelled them to flash on the lights in the auditorium after they are reputed to have broken into the Grand, downtown sound house, last week led to the arrest of Robert Elwell, 18, and Lorn Hafter, 16, both of Rochester, when they were found hiding behind machinery in the projection room by police.

Amos and Andy Take Low Spot In Indianapolis

Indianapolis—Four of the five first run houses took in average grosses while the Circle, featuring "Check and Double Check" in its second week, dropped to 90% by taking in only $9,000. "Africa Speaks," though fairly well exploited, brought in no more than an average number of patrons. Fred Stone's road show, "Ripples," at the English theatre, might have been partly responsible for the ordinary week, for "Renegades," "Little Accident," and "Billy, the Kid," all better than average productions, which were shown at the Apollo, Indiana and Palace, respectively, along with the Circle and Lyric presentations, should have attracted more people to the theatres.

Halperins Quit Liberty Company

Hollywood—Difficulties with M. H. Hoffman and Herman Gumbiner have led to a split between them and Edward and Victor Halperin, with the latter pulling out of Liberty Prod. Hoffman is to continue producing Liberty pictures, while the Halperins will make their own productions. Hoffman was vice-president of Tiffany until President L. A. Young bought out his interest.

Lee Gets Liberty 20 Distribution Abroad

Arthur A. Lee, president of AmerAnglo Corp., New York, has acquired distribution rights in the foreign field to the 20 pictures on the Liberty Prod. schedule. These are: 12 "Broadway Playhouse" and eight "Victory" productions. The first picture to be delivered under the contract is "Ex-Flame."

Critics Lukewarm But A. & A. Smash O. C. for $17,000

Oklahoma City — Although local critics were not overly loud in their praise of Amos 'n' Andy in "Check and Double Check," the theatre-going public stormed the box-office so that a $17,000 gross was chalked up for the Publix Capitol, a feat which has not been seen here since the days of war picture road shows. The rating was 215%. The exploitation was aided by tie-ups in advertising with all city merchants. Three radios were given away in contests for the best impersonations of the comedians.

"Laughter," with Nancy Carroll and Frederic March, packed in $8,500 and 110% at the Publix Criterion. "Last of the Duanes" with George O'Brien grossed $8,800 at the Warners' Midwest for 112%. "Matrimonial Bed" with Frank Faye and Lilyan Tashman grossed $6,000 for 95% rating.

Labor Row Settled; Fox Vaudeville Back

Eight Fox theatres in New York and Brooklyn will continue playing vaudeville as the result of a settlement between the theatre corporation and the musicians' and stage employes' unions.

The settlement affects 70 union musicians and 28 stagehands, in addition to the players, in the Academy of Music, Star and Audubon Theatres, Manhattan; Cortona Theatre, Bronx; Savoy, Walker, Ridgewood and Republic Theatres, Brooklyn.

The management of Fox Theatres Corporation served two weeks' notice on the musicians, but a settlement on the original basis was reached before its expiration. Consequently there has been no interruption in the vaudeville bills.

Capitol Celebrates 8th Radio Anniversary

The Capitol, the first theatre in New York City to broadcast, will celebrate the eighth anniversary of its activities on the air Sunday evening. Major Bowes is arranging a special gala program to commemorate the happy occasion.

Paramount's Birthday

'White Cargo' Is High in 'Casey' On $15,312 Take

Kansas City—"White Cargo" at the Pantages took top honors for the week in Kansas City, giving the house $15,312. Average business for this house is $10,000, which means the picture rated 153 per cent. A number of street ballyhoos, which included Hawaiians doing the hula-hula on street corners, helped to arouse interest in the feature.

The Mainstreet held over "Check and Double Check" for a second week, but as the house this week changed from a Saturday to a Friday opening policy, the Amos and Andy attraction played only six days of the second week. But even with the knocking off of a day the picture managed to give the house $15,400, or a rating of 120 per cent.

The two Publix houses each rated 110 per cent with "Playboy of Paris" at the Newman and "Renegades" at the Royal. The Chevalier feature grossed $13,750, while the Royal took in $4,950 with "Renegades."

"Scotland Yard" failed to give the Midland more than a rating of 90 per cent, which means $13,050. The Uptown grossed $5,400 with "On Your Back," or a 90 per cent rating.

John Short, stage hand at Loew's State theatre, was elected to succeed McCaffery, who has become organizer for the Cleveland Federation of Labor under Harry McLaughlin.

Hoodoo?

Washington—Little theatre operators probably will get either a laugh or an idea from this. John J. Noonan, pioneer capital exhibitor, has acquired the Little here and plans to change its name after wiring. The reason is that Noonan discovered there are 13 letters in the name "Little Theatre" and he is superstitious.

$11,000 Wages Of "Virtuous Sin" In Providence

Providence—Interest from the fan angle centered around the film debut of Spencer Tracy in "Up the River," which grossed around $11,000 at the Majestic. Tracy formerly was leading man in the last Albee stock company and was a big favorite here. Local critics raved about his cinema efforts and asked for more of him.

Gilbert was fairly well received at Loew's State in "Way for a Sailor," which did $19,500, O. K. for normal week. "The Virtuous Sin" hit $11,000, which is so-so.

Amos 'n' Andy in their second week at the RKO Albee polled $7,500, while the little Victory, with "The Cat Creeps," knocked 'em for $9,000.

"Billy," Realife, Get $25,000 in Cleveland Run

Cleveland—The big interest locally this week was the first showing of "Billy, the Kid" with Realife projection at the Stillman. Business went over the average of a first week at this house, which plays a continued run policy. Curiosity boosted patronage, but it was generally conceded that the picture would have done well on its own. Other downtown first-run houses concluded the week with average business, and slightly under average. "Check and Double Check" proved a disappointment. Reason assigned is that "Amos 'n' Andy" are not relayed over local broadcasting stations, and therefore have not a large local following.

Publix Pulls Ad Copy When Paper Tilts Rate

Tampa—Publix pulled all advertising out of the Tribune, morning paper, this week. The five theatres operated by Publix have been large users of space, and outside of the Park, independent house, are the only regular theatre advertisers. As a consequence it is their advertising that has built up the Tribune's film section. Monday this section had but a five-inch single-column Park ad and a two-inch single-column for the Garden. Tuesday the Park was the lone occupant of the section, and has been all week. The reason of the pulling out by Publix was a tilt in rates established by the Tribune Nov. 1.

Football, Races, Election, Lower Baltimore Takes

Baltimore—Patronage at the majority of first run and residential theatres fell off considerably here during the week, causing complaints from many exhibitors.

The reasons were various, including the election, the food show for 6 days with an attendance estimated at 100,000, the opening of Pimlico race track and the Navy-Ohio football game, pulling about 45,000 persons.

Despite the opposition, however, Loew's Century came back strong with the return of the stage show-orchestra-organ policy. The picture was "A Lady's Morals" offered with the Loew-Capitol unit "Pastels" and the gross rose to $25,200 for the week from the $14,000 it had previously sunk to. Judging by the old 100% estimate, this represents a 120% business for the week.

"The Big Trail" was offered at the New and the management expected to hold it for several weeks, but it seems Baltimoreans are thumbs down on westerns, no matter how lavishly and spectacularly produced, and while the gross was estimated at $10,500, or 105%, this was not considered large enough to warrant holding it another week. It was pulled out and "The Dancers" followed. Critics agreeded it was excellent as a spectacle.

During its second week at Warners' Metropolitan "Little Accident" went over excellently, showing a gross estimated at $5,500, which rated 92%.

The attitude of the public was variable about "The Virtuous Sin." It was generally conceded to be fine, but something hit the box-office. However, the gross was around $14,500, representing about 83% of the normal 100%. The opposition from the legitimate and one burlesque house in Baltimore is negligible.

'Check' Tumbles To 86% in Third Cincinnati Week

Cincinnati—After the shattering of all-time records last week, both in point of aggregate gross and for two individual houses, it is only natural that more or less reaction would be experienced this week, and some of the intake records compare somewhat unfavorably with those of previous weeks. However, with the exception of the RKO Capitol, showing second week of "Check and Double Check," where receipts went to 14% below normal, all houses registered 100% or better. The Amos 'n' Andy holdover virtually amounted to a third week showing, since the picture double-headed at RKO Capitol and RKO Palace on the national release the week previous.

RKO Strand grabbed the percentage honors for the week with "O, Sailor Behave." The popularity of the stars, Olsen and Johnson, who appeared in person at RKO Albee a few weeks ago to the biggest business the house has had in many moons, undoubtedly attracted a large number of the team's admirers. Besides, a special Saturday morning kiddie's matinee, at which an episode of "The Indians Are Coming" was featured, in connection with which a gigantic tie-up with a large local department store was staged, helped the returns.

'Whoopee,''Check' Run Close Race In Minneapolis

Minneapolis—"Check and Double Check" again walked away with honors and top dough, getting $26,000 in its second stanza at the Hennepin-Orpheum, after doing $28,000 the previous week. Its chief rival was "Whoopee," which was strong at around $9,000.

With Cantor's opus held for another shot in the Publix holdover house, Amos 'n' Andy move into RKO's holdover spot, replacing "The Pay-off," which subbed for "Africa Speaks" at the RKO Seventh Street. The Seventh Street is a popular house, having once housed principal Orpheum attractions, but has not been doing so well until the recent policy of RKO which manifestly opened it with the African talker to get it clicking for the reception of "Check and Double Check" should it go over with a bang, as it has.

Advent of legitimate attractions at the old Metropolitan, now under the management of Mrs. L. N. Scott, widow of the veteran owner, and at the Lyceum, which has housed only occasional attractions for several years, caused no heavy ripples in picture seas. The offerings, "Topaze" and Shaw's "The Apple Cart," received much attention from civic organizations interested in the drama as such, but both houses having lost their following among hoi polloi through inactivity had to depend on the theatrical intelligentsia for their patronage and the rest of the world went on undisturbed.

Football is fading into the background with final high school games winding up the coming week and Minnesota's last home game out of the way. Minneapolis' popular Symphony Orchestra, however, provides a new hurdle for the business with weekly offerings at the university and with special young people's symphonies announced.

Women of Ottawa Flock to "Office Wife" for 125%

Ottawa—Stag pictures were the rule, but there was one exception that cleaned up for fair—"The Office Wife" at B. F. Keith's—which had appeal for both sexes. Making a play for the 5,000 stenographers in the civil service and the same number of wives at home, Manager Joe Franklin raked in $4,400 for the three-day engagement, which represented 125%—high spot of the year. "Half Shot at Sunrise" for the last half hit $3,800, for 95%. "The Big House" started off with a bang at the Regent, doing a turnaway business, and was fairly steady for the rest of the week for 95% on a $4,800 gross. The Centre failed to keep up its hot pace with "The Gorilla" and slipped to 90% with a gross of $2,500. "The Silent Enemy" was popular with juveniles at the Imperial.

"Double Check," "Whoopee" Pull Toronto's Coin

Toronto — "Whoopee" and "Check and Double Check" were on everybody's lips in Toronto. Loew's continued its winning stride with the first week of "Whoopee" and Manager Jules Bernstein had counted $22,000 at the end of the six days, making 125%. The second week of the Amos 'n' Andy film vehicle at the Tivoli registered a total of $14,000, which meant 115%. On the other hand, the Imperial hasn't been doing so well with its stage shows and "Up the River" gathered $16,000, for 90%, which sounds almost like a flop. Harry Fox, the stage comedian, pulled up the returns at Shea's Hippodrome and "The Last of the Lone Wolf" did not help so much, despite the fact that Lytell once went to school in Toronto. Shea's receipts were $15,000, or 95%. "All for Mabel" at the Uptown failed to click and the receipts were less than $5,000 for three days, equalling 85%.

Montreal—"What a Widow" held the center of the popularity stage in Montreal, drawing $13,000 at the Princess for 110%, as compared with less than par for the Famous Players' houses which played an off tune. The Capitol was off with "Three Faces East" and a stage show with $14,000, or 85%, while Loew's was in a slump, getting $13,000 (85%) with "The Big Fight" and five acts. "White Hell of Pitz Palu" at the Roxy was a hold-over on the boost that it was a European special, drawing $2,200 in a 550-seat house.

"Lincoln," "Du Barry" Vie for Low at Denver

Denver—Two houses went below the previous week in box-office takings while two did exceptional business. The Tabor, reopened by Harry Huffman, had standouts every day.

The Paramount, which opened Aug. 29, came close to its low with "Abraham Lincoln." "Madam DuBarry," two weeks previous, holds the low for this house with $10,800.

The Tabor, with excellent exploitation, had sell-outs repeatedly on "The Big Trail." The principal feature of the exploitation was a covered wagon of pioneer days, with an old timer in the seat, parading the streets. It was the reopening of the Tabor, after having been remodeled and redecorated.

"Check and Double Check" needed no exploitation for its week at the Rialto, having come direct from the Paramount, where it made a new high. In fact, no time was given for a campaign, as it was sent to the Rialto at the last minute. Standouts were the rule at both houses.

Ted Mack, Denver's own m. c., is back at the Denver and his presence is helping the grosses there. The picture was weak, but the takings went up. Stage show was lively.

"Liliom" was a disappointment at the Aladdin. Folks either did not like it or competition was too strong.

"Whoopee" Is Top With $10,000 in Oklahoma City

Oklahoma City—Theatres went on the up and up here last week in one of the best weeks of the season. Publix is continuing exploitation of "Greater Talkie Season," while Warners are featuring "Harvest Season."

Eddie Cantor's "Whoopee" took the cake last week by rolling $10,000 into the coffers of the Publix Criterion for 125 per cent. The Capitol, a Publix house, showing "Billy, the Kid," came in for $8,500 and 110 per cent, while "Scotland Yard" at the Mid-West took in $9,000 and 115 per cent. The Warners' Empress took $7,000 (95 per cent) on "Dancing Sweeties."

MacDonald and Harding Draw In Des Moines

Des Moines—The lure of the screen is proving strong and the film fans are returning in numbers to the theatres. Popular players were on the bills this week, with Ann Harding in "Girl of the Golden West" at the Des Moines receiving its keenest competition from Jeanette MacDonald in "Monte Carlo." The stars at the Des Moines won some new friends evidently and business held up well, rating 140%. "Maybe It's Love" on the first three days at the Paramount played to average business. The Strand is trying out a new policy in showing the first episode of the serial "The Indians Are Coming," with the feature "Renegades." It's a little early in the run to tell, but the management believes the serial will build up a new line of patronage. Business slightly above average for the first four days.

182,810 See Amos 'n' Andy in 3 Texas Keys

Dallas—Final figures of attendance at the Texas runs of "Check and Double Check" for seven days simultaneous runs in RKO houses are as follows: Dallas, 61,010; San Antonio, 68,000; Houston, 53,800.

Figures in dollars and cents were withheld information. The week's business was by far the greatest ever done by Majestic theatres—now operated by RKO Southern Corp.

In Dallas, after a week's run at the Majestic, the film was taken to the RKO Capitol further down on Elm Street, where it started playing as a "continued" first-run. The Capitol did a tremendous business, being held over for a second week.

20 Grand, 140% A. & A. Picture's 2nd Seattle Week

Seattle—Amos 'n' Andy, in their second week at the RKO New Orpheum, again took the lead among first-run houses of this city for the seven days just concluded. "Check and Double Check" piled up a gross of almost $20,000 for a rating of 140%, topping all other local theatres by several thousand dollars.

The two big Fox houses were second in the running. The Fox had "Billy the Kid" for its feature, and took about $12,500 for a rating of 120%, while the Fox Fifth Avenue did about $13,000 with "The Dancers," which was hurriedly put on as a last-minute substitute attraction without any advance. The rating was about 100%.

"Abraham Lincoln" in its first week at Hamrick's Music Box took about $8,500 for a rating of 120%, while "Dancing Sweeties" at the Blue Mouse got a rating of 100% on a gross of $6,500.

"Santa Fe Trail" at the Paramount, in conjunction with the final stage fare to be offered by Publix in the Northwest, fell below average with a gross of about $11,500 (90%) and Fox's Coliseum with an extended run of "Up the River" after two weeks at the Fox did about $4,000 for a 110% rating.

Indoor Course Competish To 2 In Wilmington

Wilmington — The Palm Grove indoor golf course, which opened at 821 Market street, almost opposite the Aldine and the Grand Opera House, Stanley-Warner theatres, offers the "tiniest" latest challenge to local film houses. It probably offers more competition than does the Parkway, one-time theatre, and the Auditorium courses, farther away from the theatrical district. However, Stanley-Warner managers refuse to concede competition of any importance. The latest course is an 18-hole affair with tropical effect. The Rock Manor public links' "pro," Clate McLaughlin, is manager of the course, giving it an edge of standing with the golf fans.

Radio Aces Grab $26,500 2nd Week With Boston Off

Boston—"Check and Double Check" in its second week at the Keith Memorial was again the high spot for Boston with $26,500 gross for a rating of 150%, a little less than the new record which it set for its opening week at the same theatre.

All Boston theatres slid off a little from last week, which was the highest single week in many months. Metropolitan with "Laughter" did $43,000 for an excellent week but it was a little below "Playboy of Paris" the previous week. "Playboy of Paris" moved over to the Scollay Square, where it did $14,000 for a rating of 110%.

Loew's houses did $22,500 and $22,000, respectively, with "Way for a Sailor" at the State and "Dubarry, Woman of Passion" at the Orpheum with rating of 120% and 115% respectively.

Sunday Shows' Margin Slight at Greeley, Colo.

Denver—Greeley apparently has voted for Sunday openings for films. The vote on election day was 2,356 to 2,329, a majority of 27, but there are 106 absentee votes to be counted, which may change the results. The antis say they will contest the election if the final result is not changed. It has been a tough fight to open this town. A college town, it has resisted five previous attempts.

Other towns in Colorado which have recently voted open Sundays include Windsor, Boulder (another college town), Longmont, Delta, Montrose, Monte Vista and Del Norte.

"Scotland Yard" Big at $29,000 At Fox, Philly

Philadelphia—After bouncing off to $28,000 for a first week, "Check and Double Check" slumped to $15,000 for its second and final week at the Boyd. Picture made a good profit and a good record for its two weeks, however, and the second week dropoff is consistent with general business at this theatre.

With "Scotland Yard" as the film and Fifi Dorsay on the stage, as well as a Fanchon and Marco stage show, the Fox jumped to $29,000, its best record in weeks.

Though the Mastbaum jumped to $42,000, its best record in seven weeks, the figure did not come up to expectations, considering the fact that the Four Marx Brothers were the stage headliners. Grossing $9,000 for four days, "Africa Speaks" got off to a fair, though by no means sensational, start at the Aldine. Keith's clicked in with a profitable week for "Monte Carlo" at $16,000.

Vic Gauntlett Heads F. W. C. Publicity in N. W.

Seattle—Vic Gauntlett, known as the dean of all Pacific Northwest publicity men, the latter part of this month will become director of advertising and publicity for Fox West Coast Theatres in the Pacific Northwest territory. For the last nine years he has handled all advertising and publicity for John Hamrick's theatre enterprises in this city, Portland and Tacoma.

Arrangements for Gauntlett's new connection were made this week by Oscar Oldknow personally. He will be associated here with Robert Bender, another former local theatre and film man, who is now assistant to Oldknow, stationed in the local territory. Gauntlett's successor in the Hamrick organization will be announced within the next two weeks, upon the return of Hamrick from an eastern trip.

power of others and their purchasing power. If it is necessary to reduce salaries, it should only be done on one theory, namely that the individual is not performing service or work sufficient to justify his compensation, and this regardless of the earnings of the business with which the employee is connected. There is no doubt that many individuals, particularly executives and white collar employees, are receiving salaries in excess of what they deliver, but by the same token there are countless persons not paid in proportion to the results of their labors.

Take the mass number of five thousand employees, the heads of families. The average number of individuals to a family in the United States is four. Reduce the salary of the head of that family and you reduce the purchasing power of that entire family of four individuals by at least the amount of the reduction in the salary of the head of that family. If every industry in the United States were to cut salaries along the same lines as has been publicized with respect to certain motion picture distributing organizations, you will create a panic and a depression that will affect the income of all industries and professions to a far greater degree or proportion than the reduction bears to the income of the individuals prior to the reduction.

Salary Cuts Attacked

And why a reduction or retrenchment in the motion picture industry amongst all employees regardless of their efficiency or their service? Certain it is it cannot be because of present poor business, nor of prospective poor business. It would be more economical and more practical if, when a reduction of salaries is contemplated because individuals do not justify their salary, that either the individual be discharged and a more competent person employed, or additional help secured to absorb the retrenchment.

I do not suggest either that unnecessary help be employed, or that present salaries be maintained regardless of the employee's worth as such, but to inaugurate a general reduction from top to bottom, solely for alleged retrenchment purposes, is basically wrong and an admission of either mismanagement these many years which permitted of excessive salaries, or unnecessary employees, or, on the other hand, a panicky state of mind that indicates an instability of the very organization making these indiscriminate reductions. As long as a business is prosperous and moves forward, curtailment should only be incurred for systematization in disbursement in keeping with consumption.

A wider scheme of advertising and a broader policy of sales should be inaugurated at this time instead of retrenchment in the very direction where disbursements bring returns. There is no reason for the short sighted policy of cutting down legitimate salaries. We have had no holocaust, no blight, no plague, we still have our natural resources, our big industries, our small merchant, the same population who must be clothed, fed and amused, our same form of government and the universal will to live and progress. What condition exists today that did not exist at the height of our country's prosperity?

That to a substantial degree we have been extravagant may be true. That at times we have lived in an orgy of riotous living may also be true, that removal of these conditions and stabilization of our method of living may be necessary, but it cannot be done by withdrawing the dollar from circulation, by reducing the purchasing power of the dollar or by creating in the minds of our people a panicky feeling that the country is going to the traditional bow wows and that soup kitchens will once again be established.

If the motion picture industry were to take a leaf out of the book of other big industries, it would confine its reduction of salaries and retrenchment plans to those who are drawing excessive salaries only because the producers in their organization (meaning thereby those who deliver) are making good. You take the combined savings on any 25% reduction of salary among employees receiving $100 a week or less and you can offset it by reducing the salaries five per-cent of so-called high powered specialists, both artists and laymen. Curtail extravagance, systematize operation, but do not retrench among those who really labor and upon whose shoulders the industry really rests.

Publicity Men Needed Now

It should not be a difficult thing for anyone of experience, business ingenuity and technical motion picture knowledge, to lay his finger on just how, when and where retrenchment may be effected without in any respect affecting business generally or the prosperity of the motion picture industry. I have heard it said that 50% of the advertising and publicity men formerly working with motion picture organizations are walking the streets. If their services were ever needed they are needed now.

Stenographers, to a large number, until recently working for motion picture organizations are without jobs and those retained are working overtime without additional compensation and doing their work, because of that fact, less efficiently—and this applies to many other branches of employment. If that is organization efficiency, then I miss my guess.

The reason for this mad scramble to cut hither and thither, I vouchsafe, no executive can adequately answer. The foolhardy policy of general reduction of salaries, regardless of rhyme or reason, looks much to me like spanking oneself, only to know how good it feels when you stop.

Curtail the dollar and you curtail business. Your own pocketbook will ultimately feel the result and the country generally at large must suffer.

Albany Theatres And Operators Settle Dispute

Albany—Differences that have existed since last summer between the operators of Albany and the theatre owners of that city were satisfactorily adjusted with each side making concessions. Under the new contract, full-time operators at the first-run theatres in Albany will receive an increase of $1.25 a week, giving them $60 a week, with six days constituting the working week, Albany not having Sunday shows. The chief projectionist is increased from $68.75 per week to $70. There is also a provision to the effect that $2 per hour shall be paid for overtime before 12 o'clock midnight and $3 per hour from midnight on.

The new contract will run for three years and is retroactive to Sept. 1 of this year. This is the first time that a three-year contract has been entered into between the projectionists and the theatre owners of Albany.

Other provisions in the contract provide that at the Ritz theatre there shall hereafter be four full-time men in the booth, effective immediately. At the Strand, Grand and Harmanus Bleecker Hall the new contract provides that the assistant operator shall be increased in salary from $18 to $45 per week and at the end of the third year he will then become a full-time man at $60 per week. These three theatres have three full-time projectionists and an assistant.

At the Madison theatre, which is a residential house, the assistant projectionist is raised from $18 to $22 a week. This house will have two full-time men and one assistant in the booth. The same provision will govern the Albany theatre. The second-run houses in Albany remain unchanged, according to reports.

In the motion picture theatres in Troy, N. Y., a two-year contract has been signed between the union and the theatre with some slight increases in pay, although working conditions will remain practically the same.

Flesh to be Played In Warner Theatres

Spurred by the success of the introduction of vaudeville at the Earle, Washington, Warners is planning to gradually extend a combination policy to a number of other houses. Various other company theatres have shown box-office spurts when flesh was introduced. The company's vaudeville booking office is headed by Walter Meyers.

THE

Projectionists' Round Table

By John F. Rider

LET us continue with the discussion of the direct current moving coil measuring instrument. It is needless to dwell at much greater length about the application of shunts to increase the operating ranges. What has been said is sufficient to illustrate the use of the shunt and to show how the shunt is a part of a complete instrument. Upon second thought it might be well to mention how it is possible to apply the shunt.

One can very readily appreciate that it is not very convenient to place more than three ranges upon a single meter. The multiplicity of lines and numerals is apt to confuse. Hence, it is not unusual to arrange the use of a single meter in various parts of a system, the insertion of the measuring instrument being accomplished by means of a plug and jack arrangement. If the value of the current is the same in all of these positions, a single range suffices. If, however, the current values differ, the extension of a single range meter is accomplished by jack controlled shunts.

In other words, the shunt resistance is permanently connected across the contacts of a jack, of the closed circuit type as illustrated in Figure 90. Since the terminals are closed when the meter is not in the circuit the resistance of the shunt element is not present in the circuit. As a matter of fact, its presence would not matter very much, since the usual shunt is of very low resistance.

When the meter connected to a plug is inserted into the jack, the position of the plug contacts opens the jack contacts and the shunt is connected across the meter, thus extending its range. The correct multiplying factor is designated by means of a label or marker of some kind associated with the jack. As a matter of fact, this system has been used in several RCA and other installations and it is quite common wherever the cost of measuring apparatus is of consequence. Of course, if the design of the apparatus is sufficiently elaborate, the various circuits have independent meters, each of proper scale, inherent or arranged by means of shunts or series multipliers.

Multipliers.—This mention of multipliers introduces the conventional multiplier resistance used in practically every voltmeter and as a means of extending ranges. As is evident from the foregoing, the shunt and the multiplier units serve one and the same purpose except that the former is usually referred to in connection with current meters, whereas the latter is mentioned in connection with voltmeters. Both extend the range.

The application of the series multiplier, as has been stated in brief form, follows upon the principle of series circuits and the summation of the respective voltage drops. The reader will recall the discussion of Ohm's law and the fact that the current in any circuit may be maintained at a constant value regardless of the applied voltage by varying the total resistance of the circuit. At the same time if the circuit consists of two or more resistances, it is possible to keep the drop across any one fixed resistance at a constant value irrespective of the applied voltage, by merely varying the resistance of the remainder of the circuit. The technical limitation in the previous statement is that the minimum applied voltage must be equal to or greater than the voltage drop across the constant resistance. When such is the case, the aforementioned statement is true.

Suppose that we have a meter intended for use as a voltmeter with a range of 0-100 volts D.C. and a total resistance of 10,000 ohms. The meter is a single scale instrument. Such a meter would include a series multiplier as outlined in Lesson 24, Figure 85. However, such data is of no interest since our primary interest is to increase the range of the meter to 1000 volts with an intermediate range of 500 volts maximum. Now the fact that we intend having three maximum ranges, 100 and 500 and 1000 volts influences the application of the instrument, i.e. with respect to the effect of the load upon the voltage source under observation or being measured.

Knowing the total resistance of the meter and its initial maximum voltage range we can determine two other factors, the "ohms-per-volt" and the total current consumption. As a matter of fact, even the current consumption per volt scale. According to Ohm's law a voltage drop of 100 volts takes place across the meter resistance of 10,000 ohms when

$$I = \frac{100}{10{,}000} = .01 \text{ ampere.}$$

Thus, .01 ampere of 10 milliamperes of current flows through the meter when the instrument indicates full scale. And since the indication is proportional to the current, a property of moving coil types of meters, the current per volt indication is

Hence, if the meter indicates 10 volts, the current flowing through the meter is .001 ampere of 1 mil. The reasons for elaboration upon this point will soon become evident. In order that the meter range be raised to 500 volts, and the meter be suitable for application across a 500 volt supply line, it is necessary that a resistance be connected in series with the meter and the supply line. In other words, if Rm in Figure 91 is the meter resistance Rs is the series resistance necessary in order that the meter be suitable for the measurement of 500 volts.

If the total drop in the circuit is to be 500 volts, this drop must be divided between that across Rm and that across Rs. We know that the meter will register 100 volts. According to ordinary arithmetic, this is equal to 1/5th of the total voltage. The function of Rs is to drop the other 4/5ths; hence the division is 1 and 4. Realizing that the current in the circuit is definitely limited by the design of the meter and bearing in mind that according to Ohm's law, the voltage drop with a constant value of current is proportional to the resistance, in order that we have a voltage drop at one point equal to four times as much as that across another, we must have four times the original value of resistance.

Thus we have two considerations. First, the production of two voltage drops, one of which is four times as great as the other. Second, we must have two values of resistance, one of which must be four times as great as the other. If we call the normal full scale voltage indication $E_1$ and the required voltage range (maximum) $E_2$, and if we recall that $E_1$ is the normal drop across the meter, the drop across the external element will be

Now, since the current I is a constant, expressible at this time as 1 without any particular need for the specific current value, we can determine the required external resistance by due recognition of the ratio between the respective voltages and the required ratio between the respective resistances. The division of the voltages is equal to where $E_1$ and $E_2$ are as previously stated.

This equation expresses the ratio between the maximum range and the normal range of the meter minus the constant drop across the meter. As is evident this equation is independent of the meter structure, design or internal resistance. And since the drop is proportional to the resistance all that is necessary is to multiply this complete ratio by the internal resistance of the meter. Therefore, the external resistance necessary to produce a range of 500 volts when the normal range is 100 volts is

At first glance one is apt to imagine from the foregoing example that the scale has been multiplied 4 times instead of 5 times. Upon second glance however, the actual extent of multiplication becomes evident. This multiplication is the ratio between the total drop in the circuit and the drop across the meter. In other words, the multiplication factor is

$$\frac{Rm + Rs}{Rm}$$

If we multiply each of these values by the constant current in the circuit, we secure the ratio of the total drop to the drop across the meter or

$$\frac{IRm + IRs}{IRm} = \frac{E_2}{E_1}$$

We decided that the range of the meter would also be extended to 1000 volts maximum. To provide the range of 500 volts we require an external resistance of 40,000 ohms, making a total resistance of 50,000 ohms. For the sake of clarity we can now assume that the actual range of the meter is 500 volts and that its resistance is 50,000 ohms. According to simple Ohm's law, the current in the circuit for full scale deflection is

$$I = \frac{E}{R} = \frac{500}{50{,}000} = .01 \text{ ampere}$$

To keep the current constant at .01 ampere which is a definite limitation for full scale deflection when the voltage is doubled, we must double the resistance. Hence the additional external resistance Rs1 to increase the scale to 1000 volts must be 50,000 ohms. Then Rm + Rs + Rs1 will equal to resistance necessary to fulfill the equation

The multiplying factor now becomes

$$\frac{Rm + Rs + Rs1}{Rm} = \frac{10{,}000 + 40{,}000 + 50{,}000}{10{,}000} = 10$$

The revised circuit of the voltmeter now appears as in Figure 92. If, for example, we neglect the 500 volts scale and assume that the 100 volt scale must be increased to 1,000 volts, the external resistance is which actually is the sum of Rs and Rs1.

$$\frac{1{,}000}{100} - 1 \times 10{,}000 = 90{,}000 \text{ ohms}$$

In order that any one of the three voltage ranges be available, it is necessary that some means be provided for selecting the correct amount of multiplier resistance. This means that the circuit is arranged as shown in Figure 93. Rm is the fixed resistance within the meter. When the switch is set to position A, the meter only is in the circuit and the range is 100 volts. When the switch lever is set to tap B, the 500 volt range resistance Rs of 40,000 ohms is in series with the meter. When the switch is set to C, the 1,000 volt scale resistance Rs1 of 50,000 ohms is placed in series with the 40,000 ohms resistance Rs and the total series resistance becomes 90,000 ohms.

Now, it might be well to mention two major requirements of such resistances. Obviously the ohmic value of the resistor must be accurate in order that the precalibration be correct. Not that one cannot calibrate for any value of resistance, but if the resistor is accurate the unit may be precalibrated. If the resistance is inaccurate, it will be necessary to determine its resistance by means of the voltage indication upon the meter when a constant voltage is applied with and without the external resistance. The second requirement is that the resistances used as multipliers be capable of carrying the current required by the meter. For full scale deflection in the case cited the current is .01 ampere at 100 volts, 500 volts and 1,000 volts. Thus the resistances must be capable of carrying .01 ampere.

Variation of the Current Through the Meter and Its Effect Upon the Voltage Source Being Measured.—As far as normal practice is concerned a resistance of 100 ohms per volt, as is the case in our illustration, is comparatively low. A current consumption of 10 milliamperes is quite high when the meter is used with an eliminator source of voltage; that is, when an eliminator supply the voltage to the plates of the tubes in an amplifier. The application of such a load to indicate 100 or 500 volts would represent an appreciable load and display a reducing effect upon the voltage output of the power supply source.

It, therefore, becomes of interest to know a means of reducing the load to indicate a certain voltage. Just how effectively this may be carried out is dependent upon two factors. The first is the form of division of the scale upon the meter. The finer the divisions the more readily is it possible to read low values of voltage. The second is the accuracy desired when reading the voltage.

We know that the current consumption is 10 milliamperes for full scale deflection when the range is 100 volts. However when the range is 500 volts, the required current to cause a deflection equivalent to 100 volts is 10/5 milliamperes or 2 milliamperes equal to .002 ampere. For the same voltage deflection with a maximum range of 1,000 volts the current consumption is .001 ampere or 1 milliampere. Hence, it might be very advantageous when measuring 100 volts to use the 1,000 volts scale, thereby reducing the current load to a minimum which is practically negligible as to its effects upon the circuit under test.

Of course, the practicability of this system is contingent upon how readily one may read 100 volts when the maximum range is 1,000 volts. If the devisions upon the meter scale are sufficiently fine, no trouble is experienced in reading voltage indications of even less than 100 volts. Thus, it might be possible to satisfactorily distinguish a voltage indication of 50 volts when the maximum range is 1,000 volts, in which case the actual load current would be but .0005 ampere of .5 milliampere, a negligible quantity.

The same method of analysis is possible with the 500 volts scale. In other words, the current required for full scale deflection at 500 volts is 10 milliamperes, but the same deflection of voltage upon the 1,000 volt scale requires only .005 ampere or 5 milliamperes of current.

Determining the Resistance of a D.C. Voltmeter.—It is possible because of the voltage relations existing in a circuit to determine the internal resistance of a voltmeter without any involved mathematics. All that is necessary is a fixed resistor of known ohmic value. If this voltmeter is connected across a source of voltage, it will indicate that voltage. If the external resistance is connected in series with that voltmeter and the series combination is then connected across the same source of voltage, the meter will indicate a new value of voltage, lower than before because the presence of the external resistance increases the total resistance of the voltmeter circuit and with a constant voltage reduces the current in the voltmeter circuit hence the indication upon the meter. The resistance Rm of the meter may be determined by means of the following equation, where E is the normal voltage indication without the known series resistance Rs and $E_1$ is the voltage indicated upon the meter when the known series resistance Rs is in the circuit.

Suppose we have a voltmeter with a scale of 500 volts. It is connected across a battery and indicates 100 volts. We connect a 500,000 ohm resistance in series with the meter and the new indication is 50 volts. Then the internal resistance of the meter

$$Rm = \frac{500{,}000}{\frac{100}{50} - 1} = 500{,}000 \text{ ohms.}$$

Another method of determining the internal resistance of a D.C. voltmeter is to arrange a series circuit of the meter under test and a low range direct current milliammeter, as shown in Figure 94. The voltmeter is V and the milliammeter is MA. The voltage source must be of such value as to cause a satisfactory deflection upon the voltmeter. It need by no means cause full scale deflection. Suppose that the meter is a 500 volts instrument. The voltage source is a 100 volt battery. The meter MA has a range of 0-10 milliamperes. The meter V indicates 100 volts and the meter MA indicates 2 milliamperes.

Ohm's law for resistance show that the resistance of the meter V (with the battery resistance and the resistance of the current meter neglected) is 50,000 ohms. Since the full scale voltage is 500 volts, the ohms-per-volt value is 100 ohms. The total current consumption for full scale deflection is and the current for any voltage deflection is

$$\frac{E}{E_1 \times R_{pv}}$$

where E is the voltage indication upon the meter and $E_1$ is the maximum voltage range of the meter. Thus

$$I = \frac{100}{500 \times 100} = .002 \text{ ampere.}$$

Another simple method of determining the internal resistance of a voltmeter requires the use of a variable resistor of known resistance. The variable series resistance Rs is set to zero and the voltage of the source of potential is noted upon the meter. The resistance is now brought into play and with the voltage source held constant, the adjustment of Rs is varied until the new indication upon the voltmeter is exactly half of the original deflection when Rs was set to zero. The half scale deflection indicates reduction of the current in the circuit to half of its original value, hence twice the original value of resistance. Then the internal resistance of the meter

Rm = the resistance present at Rs to produce the half scale deflection.

Application of Multipliers to Voltmeters.—The actual application of the voltmeter is a matter of design. Where a complete system is arranged in switchboard fashion and provision is made for the measurement of the respective voltages in the system, two methods may be applied. The first is to arrange permanent installation of voltmeters with the correct ranges in the respective circuits. The second is to arrange the use of a single voltmeter, or several voltmeters, in various parts of the system in a manner that one meter is suitable for the measurement of more than one voltage.

This may be accomplished with a multi-range instrument where the series multipliers are always in the circuit and the range is varied by shorting the multipliers rather than inserting the multipliers. This method offers protection against accidental overload unless the operator is careless.

Another method is to affix the correct multipliers to the jacks and use a single meter range with the multipliers noted in connection with the respective jacks. Such a system may be represented by Figure 96. The meter is connected to a plug and inserted into the various jacks. Each of these jacks has its own multiplier resistance Rs and a multiplying factor is noted at each of these jacks.

Such a system is not very satisfactory for the measurement of high potentials because of possible shocks and undue strain upon the insulation within the plugs.

Tol'able David

Good Attraction

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

THE audience which sat through the first preview of "Tol'able David" sat without budging. Columbia has made a picture which can't help but click, although it will not be the sensational success the silent version turned out to be. It is doubtful if the picture can be depended upon for lengthy runs, but it will stand up on ordinary bookings. All classes will enjoy it with the juvenile element certain to go strong for it because of the Horatio Alger story and the corking fight scene.

While Dick Barthelmess took a long stride up the road to success with the silent version, his leap may easily be approximated by the jump young Richard Cromwell will make for rendition of the title role in the new version.

It's hard to believe that this is his first picture. From the first scene to the final fade-out the youngster plays his part like a veteran trouper. His acting is unaffected and natural. His sincerity in character is impressive. His voice and diction need little, if any, polishing. The boy clicks, and unless he is another of those "one picture stars" he's due for a nice ride up the ladder.

Cromwell has the added advantage of being supported by an excellent cast. Joan Peters is seen as his country girl sweetheart. Henry B. Walthall as her father does a character role in eminently satisfactory fashion.

Noah Beery handles a considerable portion of the villainy in his customary style—making everybody hate him tremendously and inducing cheers when the hero beans him during the big fight. Incidentally, this fight scene is a pip. It has the earmarks of the real thing.

Edmund Breese, Harlan E. Knight and James Bradbury handle character roles in a manner bespeaking long experience. The others in the cast deserve praise for a well-rounded series of performances.

John G. Blystone deserves a great deal of the credit for his direction. There are touches to the picture which might easily have been overlooked, but which add immeasurably to the class of the production.

The story is about a young mountain boy who must suppress his desires to wreak vengeance upon the clan which killed his father and maimed his brother because he is the only male left.

His struggle to regain the family pride and place, ending ultimately in the fight where he gains vengeance and puts to an end the terror caused by the other clan, is climaxed with a happy conclusion.

The Bat Whispers

(United Artists)

Good; Could Be Better

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

"The Bat Whispers" is reviewed as caught in Hollywood on wide film.

FROM the standpoint of photographic effects and fantastic lighting this picture is exceptional and extremely interesting. The story, however, has been overshadowed by the technical handling to a considerable extent. This slows up the talker in many places.

The story is taken from the well-known stage play, "The Bat," and the development of the mystery is much like the stage play. Roland West did the adaptation and dialogue as well as the directing and, while capably done, gave too much attention to the mechanics, which added to production values, but not enough to dramatic development.

Chester Morris, as the spurious detective, does well in a role that is not too well suited to his talents. However, he does some fine acting and is very convincing. Una Merkel, Grayce Hampton, William Bakewell and Gustav Von Seyffertitz have important roles which they handle nicely. The comedy is supplied by Spencer Carter and Maude Eburne, the latter stealing many scenes as the frightened maid who eventually captures the Bat.

The story, which is filled with suspense throughout, deals with the attempt to discover the real identity of The Bat, a killer. Knowing there is money hidden in the Fleming home, The Bat visits the place and the various thrilling experiences he supplies form the basis of the film.

Long traveling camera shots and many shadow effects help greatly in giving the talker plenty of thrilling moments. The chase after The Bat, the counterplots supplied by various crooks seeking the hidden fortune, all help build up the suspense while the actual discovery of the real Bat comes as a surprise.

The preview showing was on a wide screen and the scenes in most cases were interesting and effective. Some of the shots, however, seemed greatly out of proportion and the wide screen often detracted from the story development. The talker has been filmed in both film widths and will be released in the standard size generally.

The picture is good entertainment and should meet with response. It has plenty of exploitation angles and is better than average screen fare. Kids especially will get a kick out of this film and find it to their liking.

Within the Law

(M-G-M)

Excellent Drama

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

HERE'S a talker that should do fine business at the box-office. It has all the features of real entertainment—a capable cast—a real story—and it has been well directed. The talker is made from the stage play, has been modernized and the action brought up to date. The Joan Crawford name will rate plenty of attention from the fans and the performance she gives will probably rank among the best portrayals of the year.

This picture rates attention in the better class houses and will stand up well in the week-runs houses and subsequent bookings. Has plenty of exploitation possibilities and name value in cast.

Miss Crawford essays the role of the shop girl who is sent to prison for three years for a crime she did not commit. Her scene in the courtroom when she declares she will get even for the way the law has treated her is the outstanding dramatic episode of the picture and is splendidly done. After serving her term in prison, Miss Crawford returns and with the aid of several notorious crooks, Robert Armstrong, Marie Prevost and George Cooper, prepares to hit back. Having educated herself as to what the law calls "wrong" and "right" she puts over a number of shady deals that border on embezzlement, blackmail and larceny, but always she is "within the law."

Finally in an effort to gain revenge on the owner of the store whose refusal to be lenient sent her to prison, she marries his son, Kent Douglass. The boy really loves Joan and later she cares for him.

The boy's father, Purnell Pratt, uses his money in an effort to have the marriage annulled. When he has, through devious means, tried to frame Joan and her gang, with no success, they get Tyrrell Davis, a crook, to act as a stool pigeon and help Armstrong and Cooper pull a robbery at the son's home. The scheme almost works until Joan finds out about it and rushes to the place in time to halt the robbery. She exposes Davis as the squealer and Armstrong kills him for double-crossing. The police then find the pair alone in the house, the others having escaped. Joan says Douglass killed Davis in self defense, but the police won't believe the story and the pair are taken in for the third degree.

Armstrong is finally caught and, through third degree methods, confesses to the killing in order to set Joan free. This unites the two newlyweds and all ends well.

John Miljan and Robert Emmett O'Connor as members of the police force, give fine performances. Armstrong, as Joe Garson, gives a notable characterization. Kent Douglass, a newcomer, makes a favorable debut and shows promise. Marie Prevost is swell as the "come on" gal, while Purnell Pratt, Polly Moran and George Cooper are well cast.

The picture is kept moving at a swift tempo throughout. Director Sam Wood has given the piece plenty of suspense. The dramatic moments are well tempered with clever humor. The tendency of the talker to slam the police for their third degree methods may make it probable that some of the scenes will have to be toned down before release in order to evade censorship. Some spots in the story development are rather rough and often too much is left to the imagination.

The Lotus Lady

(Audible Pictures)

Shabby

(Reviewed by Sherwin A. Kane)

"THE Lotus Lady" has little to recommend it as a story and vastly less as a picture. It is a shabby imitation of such productions as "White Cargo" and "Rain"; lacking in the sincerity of the former; the dramatic values of the latter, and the audience interest of both.

Larry Kelland goes off to Indo-China in order to assume the guilt of a dishonest transaction perpetrated by a brother who has also, to all appearances, succeeded in stealing the affections of one Betty Francisco, a gold-digging marriage-hunter who makes no bones about the terms on which she will become a bride.

In the Orient, Kelland becomes acquainted with Tamarah, a native girl stolen in infancy from her parents by Castro, in whose cafe the picture shows her working as a desirable, but none the less virginal, entertainer. Castro and Brent, an English outcast, succeed in selling Kelland some worthless swamp land which he hopes to turn into a tea plantation. For his assistance in closing the deal Brent is to receive Castro's permission to take Tamarah. The girl, however, rebels and flees to Kelland at the plantation. Castro sends a Chink retainer to bring her back, but Kelland rescues her. The girl later saves him from the Chink's revenge, and when Castro himself comes to claim the girl as his daughter, Kelland thwarts Castro by making Tamarah his wife.

The two struggle on for five years trying to make a go of the plantation. At the end of that time, Kelland's old love, Betty Francisco, reappears on the scene to invite him to return with her to civilization. She has inherited the money she desired from a wealthy husband, who was obliging enough to die a short time after they were married. Free again, and having all the money she requires, she needs must have the old flame of her youth. But does Kelland list to her siren voice and forsake the fevered swamp lands and jungles, and the unkempt native girl wife and their little half caste child for a new and luxurious home with his old love? Nay, nay.

So Betty sets about to poison the mind of Kelland's native wife. She is the obstacle keeping her husband and child from happiness and all the things they desire and should have. Can't Tamarah see that Kelland wants to go home; no longer loves her, but is ashamed to bring her with him?

Tamarah goes back to Castro's cafe. The husband discovers the perfidy of his admirer; orders her out of his sight, then goes to the cafe and brings his wife home again. Meanwhile, just to assure the future of the two, oil has been discovered on Kelland's worthless swamp land and he is become a rich man.

This story might have gotten by with a capable cast; but the performances herein serve only to emphasize the cheapnesses, rather than cover them up. Everything about the action and direction has the brand of disinterestedness and amateurism. Only the exercise of average discrimination in direction might have succeeded in polishing it up a little, as, for instance, the frequent and noticeable lapses of Fern Andra and Lucien Prival from native and French accents to good old Americanese. To say that any performance stood out—or even achieved what might be expected from any aggregation of unknowns—would be to flatter the entire production. Sound recording is on a par with the rest of the production. Photography and sets are okeh.

Sea Legs

(Paramount)

Light Comedy

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

THIS falls below Oakie's last, "The Sap from Syracuse," but it is good entertainment, nevertheless. It has a generous supply of laughs, some of them of the belly kind.

Again Jack takes to the sea, this time as a sailor shanghaied aboard the lone battleship of a mythical island republic. He is taking the place of a rich slacker, in a scheme framed by the latter's attorney. As Jack had signed the slacker's name to the enlistment papers, he must go through with the affair, or be prosecuted for forgery. Accordingly, he proceeds to spend the rich man's money, and how, forcing the lawyer to sign all the checks. When his supposed grandfather arrives the latter is proud of him. Jack's capers get the captain fired, but the grandfather is made head of the navy and reinstates the captain, giving the gate to his real grandson.

Eugene Pallette pretty nearly walks away with honors as a native and Jack's buddy. The battleship had been donated by a wealthy American, so the ship is run on the American plan, the sailors chosen from natives who had visited the United States. That accounts for the Americanisms, and it serves as an excuse for some of the poorly-effected French accent. Lillian Roth is a pretty and capable heroine opposite Oakie and can sing.

Victor Heerman has taken full advantage of the laughs. He was wise enough to know that the old custard pie throwing days have not gone, and he uses a slambang slapstick sequence with a relish and a vengeance. And the audience at the Brooklyn Paramount got a whale of a kick out of it.

The picture is marred by the Oakie crack about the ferry boat, which hands it a slap for family trade. Otherwise, it's good for both kiddies and grown-ups.

Under Montana Skies

(Tiffany)

Weak Western

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

THIS is below the standard set in other Tiffany westerns. A few comedy touches are all that save it. The story is weak and far-fetched, a story of Montana that just doesn't click. It's presumably a present day yarn, for the girls wear up-to-the-minute clothes, but when they travel in an old-fashioned stage coach it's a bit too much, in this day of automobile transportation.

Kenneth Harlan is the hero and acts well enough, but he doesn't fit into a cowboy role. Dorothy Gulliver is a pretty heroine and displays singing ability. Slim Summerville offers some not-so funny comedy with Nita Martan getting the honors in the comedy line. The others are satisfactory.

The story is of a cowboy (Harlan) who rescues a stranded show troupe from jail, when he smuggles one girl out to threaten to compromise the hotel owner. To pay the hotel bill, he proposes a show, and induces the townsmen to put up enough for the rent in advance. But the opera house owner's wife intervenes, whereupon Harlan begins courting her to win her consent. The show goes on while they are out for a ride, but a rustler holds up the box office. Harlan, captured by the thugs, frees his bonds and escapes.

This will probably get by on a double bill, but it's a bit weak to stand alone, unless given plenty of short subject support.

Shadow Ranch

(Columbia)

Pretty Good Western

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

THE laughs and action lift this one, and a bit of pathos also helps to send it in as a pretty good offering which will please western fans. Buck Jones has a following which should help this to get over in the three-changes-a-week or daily change houses.

In this, he has able help from Marguerite De La Motte, Kate Price and Ben Wilson, all veterans, as well as good support from the remainder of the cast. Direction is good.

Jones is a wandering cowpuncher who goes to the aid of his buddy, a ranch foreman. The latter is shot before Jones arrives and he vows vengeance. The villain, who has caused the trouble, then tries to rustle the cattle from the girl's ranch, but Jones prevents this and brings the murderer to justice. Of course, the girl asks him to remain as husband and foreman.

Sell this on the strength of its action, playing up the name of Buck Jones, a veteran of silent and sound pictures. The production values given this series should make them popular.

Bali

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

SEVEN reels of naked, or nearly so, natives of a South Sea island comprise "Bali," a color-talking "epic" of native life.

Most of the preview audience walked out after the first two reels and regretted they had stayed that long.

The picture as it stands looks positively hopeless in any theatre anywhere. The possible hope for any salvage from all of the wasted film is to dissect the thing and make one reel shorts of the highlights.

There purports to be a plot regarding the love of a lass for a lad. All of the players are natives. She is due to be sacrificed, as this reviewer guessed, to assuage a few assorted gods. Her lover defies the gods and rescues her amid the cries of horror at such sacrilege.

The king, instead, is cremated in the final reel —just six reels too late.

There are interminable scenes of native dancing girls gyrating to accompaniments of bong-bong music made by a jazz band which had rib bones and tom-toms for instruments.

There are other unending scenes of natives parading on and on and on to the funeral pyre —or that's what those who saw it thought. A dubbed lecture runs along with it, but it's as bad as the picture.

It's impossible as a feature and too long for a filler.

Produced by J. C. Jackson. Directed by J. W. Cook. Edited by Charles Condon.

All natives of Island of Bali.

Harry Manus a Suicide Just as Success Looms

Just when success was declared looming for the roasting machine he had invented, Harry S. Manus, veteran former New York theatre operator and distributor, committed suicide by gas at a machine shop on New York's lower East Side. The inventions were near perfection mechanically, it is said, and the inventor had several appointments with men who were interested, and who might have financed large-scale production of his machine.

Manus formerly was active in affairs of the T.O.C.C. and M.P.T.O.A. He later was associated with Bert Moeller and others in the American Cinema Association.

Fredman Settles with Williams; Apologizes

London—The libel action instituted by J. D. Williams against Ernest W. Fredman, editor of The Daily Film Renter, early this year, has been settled out of court. Williams is to receive a sum of money, amount not divulged, and an apology in the columns of Fredman's paper.

The incident revolved about British National Pictures, Ltd., and Williams' management of the company. Williams claimed Fredman had intimated the company had gone into liquidation as a result of his mismanagement.

Bankhead Joins Paramount

Paramount has signed Tallulah Bankhead, American actress who has been appearing in London for some years, to play the lead in "Her Past." She will be co-featured with Clive Brook. George Cukor and Cyril Gardner, who recently finished "The Royal Family," will direct at Paramount's Eastern studio. This is one of the 18 pictures scheduled for the New York studio.

"U" Films on Liners

Bookings for the showing of Universal pictures on the steamers of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha Line from San Francisco to the Orient have been completed by Kenneth Hodkinson, manager of the Frisco exchange. The deal calls for bookings on thirty sailings of the de luxe liners of the steamship company.

"Wise Child" for M-G-M

Hollywood—M-G-M has purchased rights to the David Belasco stage play, "It's a Wise Child." Mildred McCoy and Minor Watson will have the leading roles in it.

Short Subjects

The Navy

(Universal)

Fine

OSWALD, the Rabbit, is a regular tar in this one, and what he does to the admiral is worth lots of laughs. Jammed with fresh stuff and guaranteed to get over with any kind of audience. Running time, 6 minutes.

A Synchopated Sermon

(Vitaphone No. 1080)

Why?

SPOTTED in a church, the Hall Johnson Choir, with Willard Robison, jazz up Negro spirituals and make the parson do some fancy steps in the pulpit. There's nothing amusing to the short, which could have been improved by cutting out seven minutes of it. Running time, 8 minutes.

Donald, the Dub

(Grantland Rice—Pathe)

Fair Entertainment

AS the title indicates, this is a golfing subject, Donald going through all the motions and grief of a real duffer. Then he strums a song on a club to the tune of "The Girl I Left Behind Me," which gets some laughs. Running time, 9 minutes.

Cinderella

(Krazy Kat—Columbia)

Pretty Light

SIMILAR to much of the cartoon stuff which has gone before, so far as the musical gags are concerned. It's built around the story of Cinderella, with the fairly godmother, old witch, prince charming and all. There are a few pretty good laughs, but it's only an average cartoon. Running time, 9 minutes.

Toby, the Miner

ried the night before, Cooley takes the advice of his valet, Hardy, and enlists. But Cooley forces the latter to sign up, too, for he knows he'll have need of his services in donning his uniforms. Cooley gets into an ensign's uniform by mistake and is ordered to drill a company for the visiting admiral. He teaches them his lodge drills, and there's a merry time. Running time, 19 minutes.

Moonlight and Monkey Business

(Radio Pictures)

Just Fair

THE laughs are too sparsely sprinkled through this slapstick comedy to give it real kick. There is a lot of wild running around and a few funny situations, but they are few and far between. It's another of the Nick and Tony series directed by Mark Sandrich. In this, they are owners of a honeymoon hotel, rooms free the first night. When Tony's son arrives with his fiancee, after an elopement, they find difficulty in going through with the wedding before the girl's parents can intervene. Running time, 21 minutes.

Going Places

(Vitaphone No. 1027)

Weak

SHAW and Lee, a musical comedy pair, in a vaudeville turn that is boresome throughout. The short is a combination of routine steps and gags. Running time, 7 minutes.

The Firefighters

(Mickey Mouse—Columbia)

A Howl

HERE'S another reason why the Mickey Mouse comedies maintain their lead in the comedy field, even though the public is pretty much fed on some of the repetitious stuff in cartoons generally. The laughs come thick and fast. Mickey is a fireman in this and with his trusty company dashes out to save the fair young maiden. He does it to the tune of a lot of laughs. Running time, 8 minutes.

The Thirteenth Prisoner

(Vitaphone No. 1104)

Poor

WILLIE HOWARD and Lee Kohlmar exchange century-old gags in Jewish dialect runners, one of whom is put on the spot, with the victim's son brought up to avenge his father's slaying. The laughs are few and it's only a passable short which will get by where not much comedy is needed. Running time, 10 minutes.

Ou, La, La

(Universal)

A Peach

WHILE not up to par with the preceding Slim Shummerville two-reelers, this comedy is primed with great laugh situations, and Slim and his foil, Harry Gribbon, put them over with a bang. The laughs are practically continuous and the Rabelaisian climax is a wow! The story follows the general formula adopted for this series, with the tough sergeant and the bugler battling for the French girl who falls for both, but the writer's imagination is so fertile that the business he injects makes this a minor flaw. The big scene shows Slim hanging on to the bottom of a bomber, moving from one projectile to another until the last one is released. He is knocked up into the cockpit and brings the plane down—with a smash. Directed by Harry Edwards. Running time, 20 minutes.

Sailor's Luck

(Paramount)

Fair

THE fleet's in and a group of sailors get into a huddle on Riverside Drive and forget their cares by singing and bantering. They didn't devote much thought to making this short, but it's breezy, and fairly entertaining. Running time, 9 minutes.

Spain's Maddest Fiesta

(Burton Holmes—M-G-M)

Just Fair

THIS depicts such a dizzy Spanish custom that its incredibility hurts the show. It's of a wild Spanish fiesta, where the natives are ten degrees wilder than any American football hugs after the home team has come through with a victory. The spectacle show a lot of silly Spanish youths unarmed in a bull ring, filled with charging bulls. However, as an insight into the Spanish festival it depicts, it is fairly interesting. Burton Holmes explains the action as it progresses. Running time, 11 min.

That's Reason Enough

Hollywood—A denial—the vehement and, therefore, usually suspicious kind—emanates from United Artists that Doug Fairbanks will sing in "Reaching for the Moon." The story centers about the romance of a New York stock broker and a society aviatrix.

Australia Bitten By Production Bug Thring Trying It

Sydney—Attempts are being made to establish production as an Australian industry. Amply backed financially, it is said, Eff Tee Film Productions has been formed here with more ambitious, and, on the surface, more practical plans than perhaps have ever been evolved in this country.

Prime mover in the venture is Frank W. Thring, until recently managing director of Hoyt's 50-theatre chain. Entering the business as a kid, Thring, who is no stranger to America, is among the most prominent of Australia's show personalities. History knows him as one of the first Australians to make a moving picture.

The company has moved fast. RCA recording equipment has been purchased by cable from America; rights to "Redheap," the novel by Australian Norman Lindsay which, despite its sales in all parts of the world, has been banned here, have been acquired for the first production; Lindsay and C. J. Dennis, author of "The Sentimental Bloke" have been engaged as literary advisers; Arthur Higgins, director of "Fellers," the only prize winner in the Federal Government's $50,000 competition has been dispatched to Hollywood to study sound photography; and Tom Holt, just back from London after six years of booking vaude and legit for J. C. Williamson, has been engaged as general manager.

Holt will reach Hollywood early in November, and after a month there, will return with a dramatic and comedy director. First production will probably get under way in March. The company expects to complete 12 features in the first year.

Attempts to produce pictures in Australia have been made before, mostly by fly-by-night companies. Few, usually owing to lack of money, have succeeded. Another thing: In their attempts to convey Australia as it is, most past producers have decorated their scenes with dozens of murderous looking blacks. For that, these pictures have aroused risibility rather than applause out here.

Daylight Saving Voted Out in Baltimore

Baltimore—Final returns on the daylight saving question voted on at the recent election show that there were 113,922 votes cast against the measure with 71,435 cast in favor of it.

Picture theatres ran trailers prior to the election reading: "A vote against the charter amendment is a vote against daylight saving." This same slogan was used on all programs printed for the playhouses.

Frank W. Lawson, executive secretary of the Standard Time League, wrote a letter to the Baltimore News and Sunday American, Hearst newspapers here, thanking them for the stand they had taken in fighting the passage of the measure to change the time of Baltimore during the summers.

M-G-M To Distribute For U. A. at Portland

Portland—M-G-M is to handle distribution of United Artists product in the Portland territory. Heretofore, the territory was served by the United Artists branch at Seattle. A considerable saving to exhibitors in express charges will result from the new arrangement.

20-Year Man Gets Pathe Controller Appointment

Samuel Machnovitch, since 1926 general auditor of Pathe, has been named controller by Arthur B. Poole, treasurer. Machnovitch has been with the company 20 years and recently received the 20-year service pin from C. J. Scollard, executive vice-president.

Jeanette MacDonald Arriving

Jeanette MacDonald, who has just signed a long term contract with Fox, arrives in New York Saturday for a short vacation. She appeared for Fox in "Oh, for a Man," which is practically without music, having but one complete vocal number and part of another.

Sell Process to Eastman

Leo Godowsky, violinist, and Leopold Mannes, pianist and composer, are reported to have sold their color process to Eastman Kodak and after June 1 will enter the company's Rochester laboratories to develop their invention.

Equipment Mart In Madagascar Is Negligible

From Report by John S. Richardson, Jr., American Vice Consul at Tananarive

The demand in Madagascar for equipment other than small projectors for private use is negligible. There are but four theatres in the entire colony—one each in Tananarive, Diego-Suarez, Tamative, and Manunga, and any increase in their number in the immediate future appears very improbable. One theatre appears to be about all that the above-named towns, even the largest, Tananarive, can support, with wages of natives at their present level, and there are apparently no other towns in the colony able, under present conditions, to support even one.

Projectors.—Local theatres are now equipped with either Pathé or Gaumont projectors. They are the only makes that have been offered for sale in the local market, and their use is due to this circumstance rather than to any preference on the part of theatre operators, who would have no objection to purchasing American or any other foreign projectors if of equal merit and sold at competitive prices.

The French projectors are sold to local agents of the companies for $195 to $215, c. i. f. a Madagascar port. The agents are in both case operators of theatres, and the projectors they have so far imported have been for the most part for their own use. On the very rare occasions that a sale has been made to third parties they have taken, it is understood, a profit of 10 per cent.

The four theatres mentioned are all equipped with projectors of the latest model, with high intensity 30/35-ampere arc lamps and mirror reflectors attached. One projector only is used, but it is understood that a second one is always kept on hand by the operator for installation in case of emergency.

Screens and Generators.—For screens, the theatres use ordinary white sheeting, hung on a wooden frame. For conversion of alternating current to direct current they are using the Japy (French) generator, consisting of a motor which is connected to the town current and a dynamo, both attached to a cast-iron base. These generator sets are furnished with the projectors and cost the agent, it is understood, approximately $195 each, c. i. f. Madagascar port.

Visual Education.—Education in Madagascar is under the supervision of the Director of Education in Tananarive. Up to the present time no use has been made of motion pictures for educational purposes.

Portable Projectors.—The Pathé Baby projector is on sale in several stores in Tananarive dealing in books, novelties, and photographic supplies and probably in similar establishments in two or three of the other more important towns of Madagascar. They are reported to be selling very well, with the demand increasing.

The projectors are of two types. One type, the most favored in the local market, and for operation where there is no local supply of electric current, is equipped with a magneto, the second has a socket attachment with which to connect it to a local light circuit. These have fixed retail prices of 1,350 and 650 francs ($53 and $35) respectively.

Only Eight Film Houses In Portugese East Africa

From Report by Eugene M. Hinkle, American Vice Consul at Laurenco Marques

Portuguese East Africa, including the chartered companies of Mozambique and Nyassa, has a white population of some 30,000. The only towns of any size are Lourenç Marques, the capital of the state-administered area, and Beira, the center of the company of Mozambique's territory. These two towns have populations (native and white) of 40,000 and 12,000, respectively. The only other towns large enough to warrant a theatre are Inhambane, Quelimane, and Mozambique.

Each of these towns has one theatre, while Lourenço Marques and Beira have three and two, respectively. With the total of eight for all of Portuguese East Africa, the market for projectors and equipment is very small.

Projectors.—The three theatres in Lourenço Marques employ four projectors, one is British and three American. The approximate cost of the type of projectors used is $1,000.

The American machine has been very popular, and theatrical owners attribute this to the automatic regularity of the film tension, the intermittent movement, the shutter which can be regulated with the projector running, and its perfect production and silent working.

The Gil Vincente Theatre has two new projectors, while the other theatres employ old models and are contemplating new purchases.

Generators.—There is little possibility for the sale of American generator sets to convert alternating current to direct current. Electric light and power plants in Lourenço Marques are supplied by direct current. For projectors a direct current of 240 volts is used, reduced by converter to 60 volts.

Arc Lamps and Screens.—Mirror-arc lamps are used in all theatres, while the screens employed are the canvas white-coated type.

Although little information is available regarding the equipment in theatres outside of Lourenço Marques, those theatres all have a very small seating capacity and employ old machines and equipment. The possibility of sales among these is negligible.

Visual Education.—Government supervision in educational matters comes under the jurisdiction of the Director of Services of Civil Administration (Director de Servicos de Administracao Civil). However, the government has taken no action regarding education through the medium of the motion picture.

Angola Has 3 Houses, Each Showing 3 Times Weekly

From Report by John W. Bailey, Jr., American Vice Consul at Loanda

Motion pictures are very little used in Angola, there being only two theatres, which give about three programs each week, in the entire colony. Consequently, there is no market whatsoever for equipment.

All of the projectors in use are of Pathé make. There are no special features for projectors that appeal to theatre owners, and none of the equipment dealers would be interested in handling projectors of any type.

The two theatres in the colony are equipped with two projectors each and they are very old models, none of which are of American manufacture.

There is no possibility of selling in this market American generator sets for use in theatres to convert alternating current to direct current.

High-intensity and mirror-reflector arc lamps are not used.

Screens consist of simple curtains of white cloth stretched before the projectors. A double projection is secured in this way and the space back of the screen is utilized by admitting natives at a small cost.

Educational matters in Angola are under the supervision of the Director dos Services de Instruca Publica, Loanda. Visual education is not used.

M-G-M Buys Play

Hollywood—M-G-M has just purchased screen rights to Eugene Walter's play, "The Easiest Way," as a Constance Bennett vehicle.

Unsophisticated Story for Gloria Lands in Basket

The lowdown on the mystifying methods pursued by the rank and file of those making up the village of Hollywood is given on the film page of Judge. Pare Lorentz, picture critic for the publication, tells the following story about Gloria Swanson:

About a year ago a very tough young man from a local tabloid was sent down to the docks to interview Gloria Swanson, who was returning from one of her husbands. The reporter discovered an amiable press-agent on shipboard, and for two or three hours they spent their time opening and emptying bottles. The reporter didn't get the interview, but he did make a friend. He discovered some days later that the press-agent was in reality a movie executive. The reporter forthwith called on his old friend and was commissioned to write a scenario for Miss Swanson. That is, after the executive had outlined his idea of a plot.

"The trouble with Miss Swanson's movies," said the great man, "is that they are too sophisticated. Now I've got an idea: make her a lady detective, see? How's that? And then she's got to sing. Marvelous voice. Lady detective that can sing—get it? And there's one more thing I had in mind—she's got a lot of swell Paris clothes with her. A lady detective who sings and wears beautiful clothes—how's that?"

A Lady Sleuth

The reporter staggered out of the office and, he solemnly swears, in two nights wrote a story about a lady detective, etc. He did not hear from the executive for several days, but eventually he was referred to Laura Hope Crewes, who at the time was supposed to be Miss Swanson's literary adviser (and still may be for all this department knows). Miss Crewes told the young man that he had turned out an interesting piece of work.

"The only trouble is," said she, "it is not sophisticated enough for Miss Swanson."

The reporter is now in Hollywood writing scenarios about lady detectives, and Miss Swanson's new movie is about a widow. It is called "What a Widow!" and while she doesn't sing much, she does wear those Paris gowns. It is a pretty bad job, even for Miss Swanson, and I think it would have been much funnier if she had struck to the executive's idea and been a lady detective.

Plans Virginia Expansion

Fredericksburg, Va.—Benjamin T. Pitts, who is reported to be planning to extend his theatrical operations to other cities and towns in Virginia, is president of the Pitts Amusement Co., of Fredericksburg, which has just been chartered to operate picture houses and other places of amusement. E. C. Bell is vice-president of the corporation, L. G. Payne secretary and treasurer.

Lighton Recovering

Hollywood—Louis D. Lighton, Paramount associate producer on B. P. Schulberg's staff, is recovering from a major operation at a local hospital. He was stricken during production of "Fighting Caravans," which he is supervising.

Saturday Previews Dropped

Denver—Declared inability to obtain suitable pictures has caused the Denver to discontinue Saturday night previews.

Before the "Mike" In N. Y. Studios

THE last short of the season was made at the Paramount New York studio this week, wide film being used. The story is based on miniature golf and is appropriately named "The New Religion." Ray Cozine directed.

Production on "Stolen Heaven," Nancy Carroll's next opus, scheduled for this week under the direction of George Abbott, was postponed until early next week. Phillips Holmes has been selected to play opposite Miss Carrall and is now headed east.

Claudette Colbert, just back from a vacation trip around the world, dropped in at the studios to take a look at some of the pictures she had taken of places she visited and their inhabitants. We caught some of them and they are as interesting as any travelogue we have seen. There are some valuable stock shots included which Paramount will no doubt use.

Charlie Ruggles, soon to play in Miss Colbert's next production, tentatively titled "Strictly Business," also staggered—beg pardon—walked into the studios to see what was what and why.

Peggy Thompson, who wrote the French dialogue for "The Big Pond," will do the French version of "Strictly Business," both versions to be made simultaneously.

Under the direction of Ray Cozine, dialogue for "Elmer Takes the Air," a short taken at Curtiss Field, was made with Stubby Kreuger, star swimmer, and Assan Jordanoff, former German flying ace, doing the talking.

Rube Welch, formerly with Paramount, is now at the Audio-Cinema studios, where he is at work on the Simple Simon Comedies, starring Louis Simon. Mort Blumenstock, also a former Paramounter, will direct, assisted by Sid Blumenstock. Mack Stark is treasurer and general manager for Simple Simon Comedies.

A bunch of the kids were whooping it up, or so it seemed until we went into Harold Levey's music conservatory at the Warner Brooklyn studio and found Director Roy Mack at the piano. Around him were eight little tots singing "But You Can't Take My Poo-Poo-Poo-Pa-Doo Away from Me," a new number written especially for them by Mack for a sequence in a forthcoming Vitaphone.

The Warner yard was used as a parking space in the latest "Nagger" short, "The Naggers Go Rooting," featuring Mr. and Mrs. Jack Norworth, in a new Austin. There was as much college spirit here among the participants as at any college football game in the country.

After several months of directing nothing but heavy drama, Arthur Hurley was given a comedy one-reeler by A. D. Otvos, entitled "Peace and Quiet." The cast included Billy Wayne, Tabatha Goodwin, Harry Short and Roy Fant.

Another change was Frank Orth and Ann Codee, Vitaphone veterans, who, having already made about a dozen one reelers, have just completed a two-reeler, "On the Job," under the direction of Roy Mack. One scene called for a wild party and Roy sure made that one realistic.

PINCUS

Canned Sermons Mean Rest Day For Ministers

Hollywood—It won't be long before the churches will go talkie. The minister will be able to record his Sunday sermon during the week and spend his day of rest at the golf links with those who prefer this pastime to his dissertations.

An experimental church service in talker form has been made by ERPI and shown before the brotherhood of the various churches in Los Angeles. The first showing was held at the First Congregational Church and much enthusiasm was shown over the possibilities the two-reel subject had to offer.

The players were all non-professionals and the sermon was recorded by the Rev. Ralph Sockman of the Methodist Episcopal Church, New York. The church music is also included in the film, which was produced by ERPI's education department under the supervision of Pat Campbell, western manager. Other pictures along this line are being planned but no definite plans are ready for announcement according to Campbell.

Pee Wee Courses Folding at Atlanta

Atlanta—Local theatres no longer fear the competition of miniature golf courses. With the approach of cold weather the putt putt courses have folded. With the exception of one or two of the Lilliputian courses, there is no longer provision for the outdoor pygmy pastime.

It is thought the matter of rent and other items of overhead will prevent the recreation from gaining a foothold indoors this winter. Although several elaborate courses have been, and are being provided, the possibility of serious inroads on the box-office is past. Too, the fact that these courses, when they move indoors, stand a good chance of being closed on Sunday, makes the competition of still less consequence.

Charge Operator with Murder

Cincinnati—Charles Ring, 43, projectionist at Keith's, has been held to the grand jury for the recent murder of Joseph Carson, 25, a local sign writer. Ring unexpectedly discovered his wife seated in a parked automobile with Carson, whom he shot to death, after, he claims, Carson threatened his life.

Theatre Yegg Foiled

Tampa—A lone robber made an unsuccessful attempt to crack the safe in the Victory here. He hammered off the dial from the door and worked 20 minutes trying to break through, but finally had to give up and departed without the $700 inside.

"Seed" Assignment for Stahl

Universal City—John M. Stahl is to direct "Seed," Charles G. Norris story, for Universal.

High and Low On Music Row

WITH Bobby Crawford back at the helm, DeSylva, Brown & Henderson has started an extensive campaign on the songs from Fox's "Just Imagine," which include "I'm Only the Words, You Are the Melody," "Never Swat a Fly" and "There's Something About An Old-fashioned Girl," all written by Buddy DeSylva, Lew Brown and Ray Henderson. These numbers have been recorded by all the mechanical companies, with Brunswick being the first to release versions of these tunes made by Ben Bernie and Abe Lyman respectively.

We sure have to hand it to Jack Robbins. No sooner had he landed in Merrye Englande than he successfully negotiated a deal whereby Keith-Prowse Co. attained the British rights to the Robbins Music Co. catalogue for the next year at a sum said to be $90,000. Before leaving Robbins selected a popular song for immediate exploitation, "The Song of the Fool," written by Sam Lewis and Jesse Greer, which shows every indication of duplicating the success of "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," also by Lewis.

Frank Goodman, president of Universal Music Co., is back from a hurried trip to Boston, where he appointed Eddie McLaughlin manager for that territory. This firm seems to have a sensational waltz ballad in "Don't Say Goodnight," written by Ben Ryan and Lou Handman. Paul Jonas, professional manager, has gotten more air plugs on this tune in the last week than on all his other songs combined. So it looks like the maestros like the song.

About six weeks ago Bert Lown, whose orchestra is featured over station WABC, signed a year's contract with Victor. Last week officials of that company raised the ante to five years. Lown, who has written several hits recently, including "Bye, Bye, Blues," has just started to popularize his latest called "Shadows in the Moonlight," a ballad foxtrot published by Shapiro-Bernstein.

Believing that the public reaction favored the hill-billy type of song, Charles Lang of Bibo-Lang published "Gee, But I'm Lonesome Tonight," by Mickey Guy, the song at present out-selling his entire catalogue, which includes "True Love," written by Jesse Greer and Ray Klages for the Chesterfield picture, "The Jazz Cinderella," "Toodle-oo, I'll Be Seein' You," by Irving Bibo and James Broekman, and "When I Think of You," by Joe Verges, Irvin Leclere and Eddie McCarthy.

With the RKO production, "Check and Double Check," starring Amos 'n' Andy, proving a sensation, chances of becoming a tremendous hit seems bright, indeed, for "Three Little Words," written by Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby. Other songs in the picture are "Old Man Blues," "Nobody Knows But de Lord" and "Ring dem Bells." Harms is the publisher.

Then there's the songwriter who ran out and bought some pretzels upon being told that the publishers want songs with different twists.

M-G-M's New Home in Chicago

Chicago—M-G-M is all settled in its new location, the former Paramount exchange. Rearrangement of the quarters makes Felix Mendelssohn about ten times more inaccessible than Neil Agnew or Jim Kent were when Paramount paid the rent there. A well-guarded partition and the breadth of the office separates the casual caller from an office door that has the appearance of being irrevocably closed.

Along Wabash Avenue South

Aaron Saperstein closed most of the deals for the Independents' booking circuit during the past week. Midwest Theatres have also been in a buying mood.

Sam Gorelick knows an exhibitor who isn't double-featuring.

CONDUCTED BY AN EXHIBITOR FOR EXHIBITORS

Boosting Prosperity!

IF we can believe a little of the many things we hear about bringing back prosperity then the best way to encourage it is to encourage spending and buying.

In this respect we must take a different slant on the coming holiday season activities than Publix Opinion. In a recent issue of that worthy publication they tell their managers to "minimize the Xmas shopping angle" in their plans for stimulating business during this usual "slump" season.

To assume that the money-tight public can be sold the idea of doing most of their spending at the theatre box offices during the holiday shopping seasons is taking an awful lot for granted, and besides strikes a new note in optimism.

Doesn't it sound more logical that if buying were encouraged, money would be spent all the way down the line a whole lot easier? Mr. Breadwinner, whether money is scarce with him or not, has become overcautious. From all sides he hears that there is a depression throughout the country. Most of the breadwinners don't even know what it's all about. Many of them are earning just as much as ever. But the "depression cry" has made him stop to think before he spends his money.

And supposing that money is actually as tight as we are told? For the good of the whole community some encouragement for general spending would be bound to do the theatres as much good as the merchants.

In our opinion we feel that this Christmas every theatre should cooperate with the local Chambers of Commerce to encourage the public to shop, to spend and to instil into themselves and their neighbors a real holiday spirit. "Peace On Earth—Good Will To Men," is a slogan that makes its annual appearance around Christmas. And there will be "Peace On Earth" if the buying public can be properly egged on to do plenty of buying.

Many a merchant has been hanging on for months, eagerly awaiting the coming of the holiday season. If the hoped for buying doesn't materialize, many of them are apt to be in the hands of receivers before New Year's Day rolls around. If that will help prosperity and business conditions in general then we are all wet!

If our slant on this situation was solicited we would say: "Get behind any local move to promote holiday shopping, because if shopping is brisk, money will be spent for everything including entertainment. Theatres will get their share, and everybody will gain in the long run."

The theatre is just a part of a community. To minimize the shopping angle is to minimize the possibilities of a prosperous buying season. And as near as we can judge, the theatre will be in as bad a spot as the merchant who is stuck with his merchandise.

Fashion Show Run By Maynard Madden Went Across Great

They are all making use of Fashion Shows. The latest showman to take hold of this angle and cash in on it is Maynard Madden, manager of the Virginia Theatre, Harrisonburg, Va.

Madden's campaign, like the others, was excellent. He arranged the show with a local department store. The store furnished everything, including the advertising, models and stage settings. The stage setting was a novel one. A huge book, which opened between each series of models, constituted the flash. The young ladies stepped in the show from the pages. The stunt had never before been used in the town, so you can be certain that it proved to have a sensational effect; in fact, it was one of the show's highlights, the different colored spots, and other colored mediums, helping to enhance its effectiveness. The show went over to great results for Madden, not a cent being spent and the house profiting in publicity and business—to say nothing of the good-will. Incidentally, the book was used to plug "All Quiet" when the war film played the house. A front cover, a duplicate of the book jacket on the novel, was painted on it and it stood in the lobby plugging the picture.

When he started a new serial recently, Madden tied the local newspaper into it. He offered free tickets to every one obtaining a new subscription to the paper. The paper co-operated by running thirty six-inch ads plugging the stunt for ten days. The tickets were good for only the first six episodes of the serial; in this way, the payment of cash for the last six episodes was insured. The stunt, Madden tells us, was worked out by Bill Ewing, publicity manager for the Warners' Washington Zone. Bill's a Club member, too.

It is certainly a pleasure to know that Madden continues to carry on with the alert showmanship he has been displaying in the past, and we are sure that he is going to continue the good work. Are we right, Maynard?

Butterfield Talks On Kid Business; He Says Something

"To bring in the children to the theatre in these days of talking pictures," says Ray M. Butterfield, manager of the Metropolitan Theatre, Leominster, Mass., "you must inject action."

This action, that Butterfield talks about, is not alone showman pep, but also screen pep. When he sets out to give kids shows on his Saturday matinee, he gives them shows that will delight them. As an example: Rin-Tin-Tin in a serial, "Wings of Adventure," an aviation Western, and a comedy drama constitute a typical Saturday show. The matinees are set aside for the kids. They must not be annoyed by any one. They can scream and yell to their heart's content. How does he bring in the kids?

One of the stunts used recently was that of issuing heralds, in the forms of cards, which plugged the pictures playing for the two days. A note at the bottom of the card stated that the children should watch the lucky numbers each Saturday afternoon. The lucky number stunt was this: the children were told that if their ticket stub ended with the number "7" the person holding it would be presented with a free pass to the next week's show. The gag made a big hit with the kids, so much so that they were talking about it all during the week.

Any adult visiting the show on the kids' matinee are told that if they don't like noise, they had better come back. Most of the adults, though, have expressed a desire to sit in and go on a rampage with the kids. Incidentally, Butterfield states that they have always catered to the kids, and this, to no small extent, is contributing to the success that the circuit houses enhouses enjoy.

Lyman Lynn Is Now Handling Three; H. Ebert Is Assisting

The purchase of the State Theatre in La Grande, Ore., by the Mercy Circuit now gives the chain three houses in the town. Lyman Lynn, who has been managing the other Mercy Theatre, the Granada and Liberty, with Henry Ebert, assisting, will be in command of the addition.

Three houses on his hands, and in the show game but a short time. That's the record that Lynn is hanging up for himself. This young man, who has had journalistic experience, but no show training, is doing some excellent work out there in his district. We have watched his progress with interest (as we said we would, Lyman) and it is certainly gratifying to know that he is coming up to expectations. And, by the way, we'd like to break in at this juncture and say a few words for the spirit of co-operation prevalent among the managers of the Mercy circuit. They are all willing to lend a helping hand to their fellow managers at any time. Each manager is spoken of highly (and we have it down in black and white). We have a hunch that Frank Hill, Junior Mercy, and the rest of the circuit vets have had a hand in shaping the show career of many newcomers on the circuit. But before we go into a rave over this slant, let's hop back and look at the newspaper ad plugging the opening of the Liberty Theatre. This ad appears in a special section plugging the theatre opening. Look it over and pick out the many interesting points it contains.

We are also showing and we want to point out in it the way the town of La Grande is plugged. This is a strategic move on the prt of the man who made up the ad. It sets the theatre in solid with the Chamber of Commerce, as there is no town where the Chamber doesn't want the name plugged. Working with the civic authorities in this manner, especially after a theatre has just been opened, a showman is going to find that the selling of his attractions, and his association in the town, will be much easier.

And, incidentally, Lyman got in another good-will building plug by entering a booth in the La Grange Fair-Home Products show, that plugged the theatre as well as giving a detailed account of the movies since their inception, explaining from silents to sound. This booth was crowded at all times with persons eager to see "the movies."

We want Lyman to know that we expect him to fashion some good stuff while he is handling this new assignment and we are sure that the showmanship that may be seen on the circuit is going to be found in his district, too. Keep it up, Lyman, and give our regards to the rest of the Inland Theatres group.

Opportunity Night At Sequoia Theatre Was Kane Triumph

Almost two weeks of front page publicity was garnered by Tom Kane, manager of the Sequoia Theatre, Redwood City, Calif., when he ran an Opportunity Contest in the house recently.

Every day, the paper broke on the front page with a story. Kane followed the angle by posting three sheets, one sheets, etc., all about the city and the surrounding vicinity. Trailers and house organ were called into action and trained upon the buying sense of the public. Kane also set himself solid with the local papers by promoting a special double truck co-operative ad from the local dealers. The ad, which was well made up, plugged the various features of the Opportunity Show and gave the names of the would-be actors and actresses to date, who had entered. We would like to have shown this ad, but postal regulations prohibit its use.

Opportunity nights have long been a favorite medium of show selling with showmen throughout the country. In every town, city, or hamlet, there seems to be situated therein, a number of youth, sometimes adults, too, who believe that they are fitted for the stage. As a result, whenever the opportunity offers, they show off their histrionic ability. Kane got a break on his show. A number of the entrants had been on the stage before. This helped to set the show running in smooth style, with an evening of entertainment assured. It was as good as many a vaudeville bill we've seen.

Try a gag like this whenever you can. You can promote a local orchestra to furnish the music. Put the thing on in deluxe fashion. Drill the entrants yourself. Work in local comedy, and popular songs. Try to have a high school song featured, inviting the audience to sing. Plenty of chance to turn in some good stuff on this—give it a break. Thanks, Tom, for your account on the subject.

PEPPING IT UP ON TIMES SQUARE!

Our purpose in reproducing these views of the art work at the Rialto Theatre in New York is twofold. First, to show you how an ace grind house works out a novel group of displays for the purpose of attracting attention and creating business. Second, for whatever value these pictures may have in suggesting to you ideas which can, in turn, be used around your own house.

Note carefully the many odd angles of these various displays, then keep in mind the fact that even if you are not going to play this attraction you can still make use of some of these ideas. Maybe your theatre is located at a busy intersection where this type of display would prove business-getting.

The picture to the left shows the treatment over one of the exit passages onlo Broadway. To the right, marquee sides. Below, left to right, first group, View of front and side of marquee. Center, full view of the entire front. Right, at entrance to subway trains. Lower group, left to right, cutout figures of Lloyd scating the building. Center, close-up of the front and under marquee treatment. Right, speciat display painting directly at the corner of the building.

Osborne Is Show-Man Who Has Wide Experience in Game

We want to introduce at this time a very active showman. He is Carl M. Osborne, former manager of the Lincoln Theatre, Massilon, Ohio. He is well known to his fellow Club members by reason of the work he has turned out at the Lincoln and at the Sigma Theatre in Lima, Ohio.

Osborne is pretty well versed in showmanship. His newspaper ads, particularly, have appeared on our pages. The latest report that we had on him was his special article on house maintenance, where he stressed the fact that a smiling cashier was an excellent asset to the house. Those members who read the article, which appeared just a short time ago, will recall that it contained many interesting slants.

We are showing here a photo of the front of the Lincoln, the house being all dolled up for "All Quiet." We'd like to point out the marquee copy he uses. There is something on that marquee that appeals to the women. What? The catchline on the street side: "TO WOMEN IT IS GLORIOUS ADVENTURE." Many women will not see a movie if it happens to be a war picture. To offset this, Osborne used the appropriate copy that we are talking about. This was used in all of the advertising, whenever necessary. A head cut-out of the star in the picture was placed on both sides of the marquee, as was a 24-sheet cut-out of a scene in the film.

Shouldn't wonder that Carl will be heard from again in the very near future at a new spot where he can quickly demonstrate his ability to handle the tough ones as well as the naturals. He's not the type to be drifting around loose very long. But one thing is certain, regardless of where he hangs his hat he never forgets the Managers' Round Table Club and the material we need to make our pages ever-interesting.

Carkey & McCauley Form Showman Duo At Olympic, Utica

A campaign that clicked very well was that turned out by Larry Carkey and his assistant, R. G. McCauley, at the Olympic Theatre in Utica, New York, for "Journey's End."

Through a tie-up with a local distributor of a well-known brand of coffee, they obtained 5,000 window cards, which were placed in all of the stores selling the coffee, within a radius of fifty miles. A tie-up with the local bakery netted them 40,000 inserts which were wrapped up with every loaf of bread sold.

Every book store in town was tied up, the windows being well dressed, displays being achieved that had a powerful selling effect. All of the taxis in town carried a disk, on the spare tire, which read: "Ride our cabs and see "Journey's End" at the Olympic Theatre all this week." The same idea was carried out in regard to a big sign, placed on a parking lot.

A good many other mediums were also covered, but since they are well known to showmen we will not enter into a discussion of them here. Suffice to say that the campaign clicked in a big way, Carkey and his assistant having plenty to do keeping the crowds from jamming up the theatre. Incidentally, before closing this article, we would like to say that Mr. McCauley has just sent in his application blank for membership in the Club. We are glad to extend him a welcome into our organization, and we hope that he and Larry are going to be very active. What do you say, Larry?

"DEBUNK THE BALLYHOO!"

by Jack O'Connell
Managing Director, Vita-Temple Theatre
Toledo, Ohio

I THINK Barnum was wrong. At least, his philosophy wouldn't apply to the present. Maybe there was one born every minute in his day, but the American public in 1930, as represented by millions of theatregoers, decidedly is not a bunch of saps. They know what they want, and the showman today has to have the goods if he wants to click. The press agent or producer who ballyhooed a lot but produced little had his day, but as Joe College would say, "Them days is gone forever."

The fact that Susie Toots wears Toeless hose doesn't send people rushing into the theatre to see her in her latest talking blurb nor does it increase the romantic appeal of the motion picture. Exploitation of the modern day lacks the punch of the old days simply because the day and age are further advanced and therefore more blase—Anna Held's bath in a tub of milk on Broadway would only excite an arrest by the police today and would leave the wary editor cold with indifference.

We all know the story of the boy who cried "Wolf" once too often—the wolf ate him up. So it is with modern exploitation. We shout and rant and rave and pore madly over dictionaries in search of new adjectives and phrases to describe our latest picture—Bigger and Better, Stupendous, Greatest Spectacle of All Time, etc., etc. The people come—they see—they hear—and then they walk away disappointed and chagrined because they were the victims of a well-planned campaign of hooey.

Day by day in every way exploitation is getting weaker and weaker, not because the scribes and pamphleteers have lost their punch or have forgotten any of the tricks of their trade, but because they have very little to exploit and the public is wise to it.

There is too much commercialism in the motion picture industry, and that is the one real reason why exploitation today lacks force and selling power. Regardless of what producers have to say on the subject and in spite of their short-sightedness at times, the making and presentation of motion pictures is more than a cold business proposition—it is and always must be an art.

Which brings us to a worthy thought—the same genius and talent manifested in the creation of the motion picture must carry through to its presentation; the same halo of romance which must surround the really successful production at its inception must be evident in the art of exploitation used to interest the moviegoer.

I repeat, there is too much commercialism in this industry. We hear the chain theatre manager talk about merchandising his picture. Merchandising! You cannot merchandise motion picture entertainment any more than you can merchandise dreams, and the exhibitor or producer who works on this basis is doomed ultimately to dismal experiences.

Admitting that this is a high-powered age and that methods of yesterday have been relegated to the discard, the theatre has the same fascination today as it did in the days gone by.

Remember back in the days of the old Home Town? The salesman used to say (and still does, in fact): "Buy this picture; it has good exploitation possibilities." What does he mean by that? Does he mean that simply because the picture shows the leading man eating Puffed Nuts breakfast food the exhibitor should rush out and tie up with some cereal company? The history of this business shows that the pictures that had the least to exploit from a commercial standpoint were the biggest business draws at the box-office. What is exploitation, anyway. Is it building up the desire of the people to see something you haven't got? Is it the old art of ballyhoo modernized? Or is it the honest attempt of publicity men to acquaint the public with worthwhile attractions? If it is not the latter then we had far better strike the word from our vocabulary and eliminate it from our industry.

I think that the public is sick and tired of listening to and seeing the sad attempts of exploiteers—or should we call them racketeers?—to foist inferior products upon them. I think that the public is fully aware of the fact that the majority of the boys running aimlessly over the country trying to pep up dejected exhibitors are not skilled publicity men nor are they capable (with few exceptions) of creating any play or idea that has not been worked to death by anyone who ever read the time worn gags in the press books.

Believe it or not, to borrow the current phrase, but here is an exploitation idea I remember was put over in a mid-western town about two years ago that was a honey if ever there was one. The attraction was a fire picture that heroized the fire laddies, etc., etc. (See Plot No. 47-A, Vol. 7.) A fast talking exploiteer from the home office breezed into town, gassed the local manager and proceeded to put over the Big Idea. Here is some of the stuff with which he tied up a section of the local paper: The Non-Inflammable Roof Company, "Save Your Dear Ones from Burning to Death"; "A Stray Spark May Cost Your Home and Fortune—Take Out Insurance with the Burnem Up Fire Insurance Company"; Ice Cold Furnace Company, "Will Not Overheat and Set Your House Afire While You Are Away—Are Your Babies Safe?" And out comes this brilliant newspaper tie-up on the Saturday the picture opens! Maybe that's exploitation, and again maybe it's not. Imagine people getting all hot and bothered to see this picture when in the back of their minds has been built up a fear of fire in their homes while they are at the theatre!

By this time I suppose some of your readers are asking: "Well then, if you know all about it, what is exploitation?" The only answer I can give is: "Getting the people who have the money to come to your show excited over something worth getting excited over." Creating a desire—building a romance around your play or your theatre—keeping away from realism—coloring your story more with the warm, invited glow of a shaded lamp than with the stark nakedness of bright daylight. Building in the minds of those you wish to impress the spirit of fantasy—keeping your characters on the screen the shadowy forms they should be, not playing them up as divorced actors or actresses with their petty weaknesses or as the blatant, publicity-seeking ingenue—making your theatre a place where the weary work-a-day folks can come and dream. Divorcing from the minds of amusement seeks the commercial aspects of our business—that, my friends, is what I would call exploitation.

The producers are to blame for the lack of selling punch in modern exploitation. (If there are any exceptions to this general classification I'd like to hear of them.) The producers are not honest with themselves, and surely not with their customers, the exhibitors. Every picture they put out is, according to their written and oral declarations, a good picture, and in most instances a GREAT picture. Only after the exhibitors all over the country have flopped with it will they perhaps admit it wasn't so hot. But the next picture—oh boy! Wait till you see it! That's the greatest one yet. We screened it at the home office and would you believe it the director broke down and cried!

Probably he wept for shame. After the producers try to pull off that kind of stuff what can they expect of the wild-eyed chap they employ to go out and set the country afire with extravagant phrases and beautiful stills? He's only working for a living and naturally he feels that if the big shots can go goofey over a picture it must be a knockout and there's no limit to the praise he can lavish on it—even though he thought the thing was punk, himself.

A lot of people are going to say a lot of things about this interesting article by Jock O'Connell. But before they start WE want to say a few words ourselves.

Jock is one of the real honest-to-goodness pioneers in the field of talking screen presentations. Showmen throughout the middle west all know how, amid snickers and giggles, he opened the Vita-Temple as an "all-sound" theatre. This was one of the very first ventures of its kind and was looked upon with much askance by everybody.

But O'Connell laughed last. He packed them in so regularly that other exhibitors journeyed many miles to "see what this all-sound policy was all about." And when they saw, they had to admit that Jack was the nearest thing to a genius in show-business.

In 1928 "Chick" Lewis, then on an automobile trip through the mid-western states, heard about the "freak" Vita-Temple. He, too, journeyed many extra miles and spent several pleasant hours with O'Connell. Since then much attention has been focused on Toledo, and today, as yesterday, the Vita-Temple still remains the "Temple Of The Talking Screen."

Just as he was a pioneer in talking screen presentations, Jack O'Connell is also a pioneer in exploitation. Therefore we have every reason to believe that what he has to say about this much-discussed topic should be given more than passing consideration.

We enjoyed this article from start to finish. Now YOU read it and see how you like it.

Elliot Johnson Gave Hope, Ark., a Style Show as Novel Gag

The style show that Hope, Arkansas, was treated to recently has them still talking about it. It was one of the most complete affairs that the town had ever seen. For weeks in advance, merchants plugged every phase of the stunt. No matter where one went in Hope, the announcement of the style show was sure to be seen.

"Who engineered this show?" was one of questions we asked ourselves. Looking over the newspaper accounts, we could find no word of the person behind the affair. The merchants did not display any signs shouting the name of the individual. But when we learned that the show was held at the Saenger Theatre, we knew that the man was Elliot Johnson.

Since he has been at the house, Johnson has been carrying on the high standard of work that Matt Press observed when he handled the theatre. The circuit hiring Press and Johnson certainly gained two ace showmen. Johnson has kept the boys' band, kiddie klub, and practically every other business booster, going great guns; with the result that the town, as well as the theatre, benefits. The style show was one of the most successful coupes ever attempted and successfully executed in the town.

Local models were secured. And we want to say, some of the prettiest misses in the town were right on hand. Everything went over in shipshape fashion. The girls were drilled to act. The Hope Boys' Band furnished a few pieces of music, and aided otherwise by touring the town and stopping in front of the theatre. With Mrs. McPheeters directing the show, Mrs. Wellborne, at the organ, and Johnson, himself, acting as supervisor, the style show proceeded in the steady, enthusiasm enticing, tempo so noticeable in the Broadway production directed by those master craftsmen of the stage: White, Ziegfeld, and Carroll.

As an exploitation plug, Johnson inaugurated a scheme whereby an award would be given the merchants having the most attractive window during the style show. The local newspaper carried accounts of the participants' windows, etc. It is also to be noticed with interest that the paper gave Johnson a front page streamer, plugging the style show, that read: "STYLE SHOW ON WEDNESDAY." Who would miss that? A special section was also obtained in which all of the dealers taking part in the show contributed ads. Small wonder that the affair went over great. With every one in town working towards its success, it couldn't be otherwise. We want to hand a little compliment to Elliott for his work, and we hope to have some more of it in the very near future.

Midget Golf Courses Tie-Up Aid For A Bunch Of Publicity

Golf competition doesn't mean a thing to that sterling theatre manager, L. M. Graburn, of the Strand Theatre in Calgary, Alberta, Canada, who can smack them through the air and on to the green any old day that he wants to boost biz.

When he played the film, "Men Without Women," recently, he tied up all of the golf courses in his town on a novel putting contest for "men without women." No man accompanied by a lady was eligible to enter. Large cards were placed on all of the courses plugging the stunt and giving the details. The cut we are showing will give you an idea of the effectiveness of the gag.

For the men turning in the lowest scores each day, free passes to the theatre were awarded. The gag had never before been pulled in the town and, as a result, the residents paid plenty of attention to it. With every baby links in the town helping Graburn to put the gag across, he was bound to click on it. The theatre received a lot of publicity and good-will, and, most important of all, cashed in with additional business.

We would also like to say a word at this time about the ads that Graburn turns out. They are well made up and carry localized copy, proving that he knows what his public wants, and whenever he has the product, he knows what to do with it. Keep up the good work, "L. M.," and let's hear some more about what you are doing up there in Canada.

"DEBUNK THE BALLYHOO"—By Jack O'Connell

Some sort of reward ought to be posted for the capture of the man who first thought of commercializing motion picture exploitation. He is responsible for the conditions in this field today. He it was who took away the mystery and glamor that surrounded the older forms of theatrical publicity and put in their place cold business tie-ups that have robbed this branch of the industry of its old allure. I can think of lots of penalties for a crime like that, but none of them is severe enough.

Compare our business with radio. Here we are, purely and simply an amusement business, selling entertainment and romance and fantasy and dreams and whatever else you want to call the things that bring people into the theatre, and what are we doing? We are tearing down all of the traditions of the theatre and its artistry by hooking up our business with something that can be sold in the lobby or exploited through the windows of department stores. We are forgetting the inherent value of our commodity to build up the value of an outside something which we mistakenly think will in turn build up our own business.

How about radio? Is radio doing that? Not that you could notice it. The radio people are too smart for that. They are new in the game but they have eyes and they have a sense of the fitness of things. And they are going to profit by our mistakes.

Radio is founded on one idea—advertising—and through that alone is and will be successful. In the early days of radio the whole scheme of things was commercial. There were countless advertising announcements and very little good entertainment. But what has happened? Simply this: Radio stepped in and threw around its cold, lifeless advertising form a warm cloak of romance. Artists from every branch of the theatrical business, and for that matter from almost every other field of endeavor, were brought to the microphone to give to the world their genius and their art. What was once a cold radio announcement about the pink on your toothbrush became an operatic audition, a great musical revue or a great drama. Only incidentally are you reminded that the pink on your toothbrush is a danger sign, and this suggestion is so cleverly inserted in what you accept as a purely entertainment program, that you are painlessly sold.

The world was waiting for a new thrill, a new mystery, a new romance, and radio stepped into the picture and supplied it. The over-commercialization of motion picture publicity is comparable to the error of radio artists appearing in person—in both cases the cloak of mystery and romance is torn off and they stand helpless in their nakedness, unable to live up to the picture they have created in the minds of their erstwhile admirers.

A while back I mentioned something about the old home town. To go back to it—do you remember the story of Squire Robbins, who stood outside the stage door of the opera house all night to see the actors and actresses come out? Upon being told by the night watchman that the troup had gone to the hotel, the squire said in amazement: "Shucks, you don't mean to tell me them folks was the actors—why they was just folks like you and me."

That in a sentence tells more than I could write in a week about exploitation. We are all like Squire Robbins—we like to think of actors and actresses as people of another world—make them shadowy forms who come to entertain us—build up romances in our minds. We don't want to dig into sawdust tummys to see if they have a stomach ache.

In closing I would like to put uo what feeble defense I may against commercialism in motion picture publicity. I would like to go on record as being one who is interested in preserving the traditions of the theatre. Don't let us forget that we are in the entertainment business—we are still selling dreams to our customers at so much a dream. If the genius and talent of our art are permitted to create entertainment that is really worthwhile, exploitation will take care of itself. Don't let us be fooled by the green pasture on the other side of the fence. Don't allow this business to become too commercialized, even though a few shortsighted executives think our screens should be thrown open to advertising. Radio stole a lot of our romance and glamor but don't be fooled into thinking we can steal radio's advertising.

Maxfield Climbs; Moves to N. Y.

It will interest his many friends in the Managers' Round Table Club to know that C. M. Maxfield, former manager of the Colonial Theatre in Hartford, Conn., has resigned to accept a position as General Manager of the Prudential Theatres, Inc., a chain, running houses on the south shore of Long Island, New York.

During his three years in Hartford, Maxfield demonstrated such a talent for reviving neighborhood interest in the theatres of the old Schuman-Dolgin chain that he was given the additional duties of handling the Central in West Hartford, the Rialto on Franklin Avenue, and the Lenox on Albany Avenue. In addition, he supervised the publicity and promotion work for the entire chain. When the Colonial, Lyric, Rialto, Lenox, and Central were added to the Warner circuit, Maxfield concentrated his efforts on the Colonial. He was prominent in many community projects while in Hartford, and is a member of the Rotary Club and other organizations.

We are sure that he will continue the up-to-the-minute showmanship that has characterized his past efforts, and we look forward to seeing him break records on his new position. Good luck, "C. M."

Worden Continues To Plug All Shows Playing Cortlandt

Up in Cortland, N. Y., the residents can be pretty sure of seeing their quota showmanship. The reason lies in the fact that the active showman operating the Cortland and Temple Theatres are always alert to cash in on novel ballyhoos, etc. These showmen are M. Bloom and A. E. Worden, directing and resident manager respectively.

As a coming attraction plug, they made up a display board plugging the stars. The board carried a color tone of light blue, gold borders, silver stars, planets, etc. Star pictures were pasted on the background. Biographies of the stars were placed alongside. Two stand cards, reading, "WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT THE STARS?" "YOU'LL SEE THEM ALL AT THE CORTLAND OR TEMPLE THEATRES. WATCH FOR THEM," were placed alongside. Persons entering the lobby would more than stop to read the biographies of the stars. The angle proved to be one of great value to the house, and, as the pictures roll along, it will continue to help. A special card for confectionery stores was made up and placed in the windows. The card read: "All Great Stars Select These Candies. You Will Like Them, Too."

We are showing a couple of photos of a street ballyhoo and an exploitation flash, used on "Dawn Patrol," that excited a great deal of comment. The street ballyhoo, as you will note, was a compoboard airplane mounted on a truck. The truck was covered with beaverboard signs plugging the picture. It cruised about town. The other photo shows a net, strung across the main street of the town. The net, by means of a cloth constructed airplane got over the "Dawn Patrol" theme. As the picture went over very well in the house, you may be sure that Bloom and Worden knew that they had used effective exploitation. And, after all, that's what every one is trying to do. Keep it up, and let's hear from you again.

Convicts Plugged "Big House"; Stunt On Picture Clicked

Street ballyhoos go over great in Fort Atkinson, Wis. And if you want to verify the statement, call on I. J. Craite, manager of the Fort Theatre.

Craite has been using street ballyhoos for a number of years now, and he certainly knows their value in his town. He finds that the residents pay plenty of attention to them. So do you blame him for using them whenever he can? No matter what sort of picture he is playing, he tries to get in some kind of street ballyhoo. He doubles up on them at times, working them in the lobby as well as the street. This was done on "The Big House."

The photo we are showing here will give you the dope on the convict ballyhoo that he used. The boys were manacled together and placed in the lobby of the theatre for three days prior to play date. On the day before opening, they walked about town, a sign on their backs plugging the picture—and engaged each other in conversation touching on the film, the jargon of which they had studied from the trailer. They would jostle and fight as they walked along, much to the merriment of the persons on the streets. The small expenditure involved in the securing of costumes and salary for the boys was more than paid for in the additional business that resulted during the play dates of the film.

Thanks, "I. J.," for sending this one in so that we could pass it along, thus keeping your fellow members informed on what you are doing to keep the show business up to a high standard in Fort Atkinson. Let's have some more in the very near future.

Wise - Crack Stunt Netted Goodale A Lot Of Publicity

In White Plains, New York, Frank Goodale, manager of the Loew's State Theatre, has been turning out some good work and grabbing of newspaper space galore for his house.

One of his recent endeavors was a wise-crack contest. He tied-up the local paper and they agreed to co-operate with him and run a number of wise-cracks daily, which would be contributed by locals. The idea caught on very well and Goodale was enabled to count up some extra shekels when he figured up the profits after the film had completed its booking.

This is his first contribution since he has joined the Round Table Club, and we are sure that, now he has broken the ice, he is going to keep us posted on whatever else he turns out. Welcome into the Club, Frank, and remember: Don't be a stranger.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Art Display Work At Laby's House Is Very Effective

More flashy lobby displays roll in from Boston, Mass. The Washington St. Olympia has been represented on our pages quite a number of times. Synonymous with the theatre, we find George Laby, manager of the house.

Laby is another of these showmen who can't stay still long enough to eat. He is always on the hop. If he isn't tying up window displays or arranging street parades, it's something else. His activities have been a source of interest for his fellow members in many ways. Of especial interest are the lobby displays, a few of which we are showing here.

These displays on "Monte Carlo" created a lot of comment around town. In the left photo you will note the cut-out letters plugging the title and the catchline of the film. No one went by the theatre without reading them. The right photo shows the special art panel. This panel was done in beautiful colors, the miniature caricatures tending to enhance the effect of the boudoir portrait of the star in the film. Study this stuff carefully, as you will probably find a couple of slants that will help to pep up, and boost up, any weak spots in your art work. Thanks, Laby, for passing these along to us, as they are always welcome. We know that your fellow members in the Club like to look them over and use any angle that they can. Let's have some more.

Wondering!

"We wonder," muses the Port Washington Post, "if the average Long Island community which has an unusually fine local playhouse really appreciates the fact. It is true that the theatre is a business, owned and operated by private individuals for their own profit; but stop and think a moment what a town the size of Port Washington would do without one today. The answer, of course, is that its people would have to seek their cinema entertainment elsewhere; consequently, they would have to go out of town for such pleasure."

The editorialist is talking about the Beacon Theatre, the Century Circuit house in Port Washington, Long Island, New York.

And now we'll do a little wondering.

We wonder if showmen realize that the sentiments expressed by the Port Washington Post editorial writer are echoed throughout every town and community.

Newspapermen are quick to perceive the asset which the theatre can be to the town and community. Consequently, they offer their support. If a man is a real showman, he is going to make much of this co-operation. He is going to learn that his theatre is also the "voice of the people." He is going to realize that his is an important place, and being such, it is only right that he be a credit to it. The first duty of every showman is to earn the respect and confidence of his community. His next and greatest duty is to hold it! When he has done these things, he'll find that the house will prosper, his patrons be satisfied, and the theatre an instrument of real "public usefulness."

Walter McDowell of Louisville, Kentucky, Is Active Showman

Running along the home stretch and leading the pack by a head, Walter D. McDowell, manager of the Loew's and United Artists Theatre in Louisville, Kentucky, is displaying showmanship that will have him under the box-office winning wire in time to break a record.

On "Whoopee" he made plenty. A tie-up with a chain of drug stores netted him space on the mirrors, and special sundaes called "Whoopee Sundae." In restaurants, many of the waitresses wore Cantor Berets. All the newsboys in the town also featured them. The Stetson hat dealer gave a full window display to the theatre. A background of a head of Eddie Cantor enhanced the effectiveness of the window.

For plugs on the streets, automobile hangers were made up. The hangers read: "Park here to-morrow and go see 'Whoopee' at Loew's." A special theatre ticket, a duplicate of a $5.60 reserved seat check, was made up and distributed in every office building in the city. They were also made up in blotter form, and distributed to check holders with their small-sized check books. A stencil, reading "See Whoopee," was made up. The streets were stencilled at night, every transfer stop being covered. At stop boulevards, where the word "stop" was in the streets, "Whoopee," was stencilled underneath.

Various dance orchestras, including those of the schools, wore the Cantor berets and plugged the theme songs. The local radio station co-operated by plugging the song hits. Every music store in town was covered. To sell the show out front, a special front was built. Art cut-out letters were placed on each side of a head of Eddie Cantor. Effective color tones were used.

With activity of this sort, the picture was sure to go over for McDowell. And it did. But was he finished then? Not a chance! Look over some more of his work. There's the stunt he pulled at graduation time, by sending cards, in the form of invitations, to the graduating students in the local high schools. On cards despatched to girls, a picture of Novarro was imprinted, showing a frame cut from a piece of film, with a note attached: "If this sound film was projected it would express sincere congratulations from Ramon Novarro and Loew's Theatre." The stunt was a wow.

Other gags used at different intervals by this showman included, telegrams to the residents of the town on "Good News"; the season pass gag; novelty heralds; birthday cards, inviting the recipient to attend the theatre free; McDowell's personal cards, with the line "Call me Mac." Oke Mac, call me "Chick."

On his window displays, Mac shows great ingenuity. He often uses live models to plug wearing apparel, both fashion and sport. His displays create a great deal of comment about the town, and you may be sure that anyone looking at them is informed, by means of a card or some other medium, that there's a good picture at the local house.

Then there's another gag, used about Derby Time, that was a great business booster. They take the Kentucky Derby as a national event down South; so everything relating to it would immediately have plenty of attention paid it.

On the sporting page of the newspaper, a special picture was run, showing one of the stars in the current attraction at the theatre, acting as jockey of a thoroughbred. A story stated that readers of the paper were invited to guess the order in which they believed the horses would finish on Derby Day. Awards were offered.

Another activity at which Mac excells is his newspaper advertising. He does some clever work along these lines, and we can tell from his copy that he knows the town pretty well. We hope to show a group of these when space permits, so if Mac will be kind enough to send us some more ads and bear with us a little while, we'll pass them along.

We want to thank Mac for taking time from his busy existence to pass these stunts along to us. We are sure that he is going to be a very active member. Welcome, Mac.

The New Broadway Theatre In Calif. Has Some Showmen

California certainly deserves the palm for the beautiful houses that are constructed in that sunny state. We are showing a photo here of one of the latest—the New Broadway Theatre in Oakland. The Broadway is owned and operated by Ralph M. Ford, whom we learn is pretty popular in the show circle of Oakland for his works. (When they start to say nice things about a showman owner, he must have the goods.)

The portrait of a night scene of the Oakland all lit up can not do the scene justice. The glaring lights fairly dazzle with their brilliance. We'd like to point out the mammoth clock, atop the Broadway sign, which may be seen in the background. This clock has commanded plenty of attention from the residents of the city. It is a certain thing that when they look at the clock they are going to look at the sign plugging the current attraction at the theatre. This angle is a beaut, and shows some remarkable showman acumen. Incidentally, the marquee of the Oakland is the largest one in the city at the present time.

William G. Smeltzer, who is well known to his fellow Club members, is at present connected with the house. He is doing some good work, too, as is evidenced by the house organ alone.

We think that this program turned out for the Oakland rates more than a passing mention. We are showing the complete thing here. It measures two and a half by five and a quarter inches. It contains four pages, and makes a very compact program. The color schemes vary. One week the tone will be black on manila; the next week, blue on manila. The paper is of fine stock. If you'd like to look at one or two of these programs, drop a line to Smeltzer at the New Broadway Theatre and we are sure that he'll be very glad to send some along to you, and also furnish you with any other information you may desire regarding their layout. We want to thank Bill for passing these along to us, and especially for the active interest he continues to take in the Club affairs. Keep it up, Bill. Give our regards to our friends out around your district, and let's hear some more from you.

Wheeler Turns Out Some Good Work At State, South Bend

This showman has been a pretty active member of the Round Table Club, as many of his showmen friends know. We have never shown you a photo of him before, though, so now we want to introduce J. Ramon Wheeler, manager of the State Theatre in South Bend, Ind.

Wheeler has been in the game but four years, so he more than deserves a compliment for the work he is turning out. Starting at the bottom as an usher at the Palace Theatre, Canton, Ohio, he diligently applied himself to his duties, and was rewarded with the assistant managership, a position which he held for two years, until transferred to the Colfax at South Bend, from where he was promoted to his present post.

He has sent us in a few photographs showing his latest work, but unfortunately they were too small for reproduction. One was a front display on "The Spoilers," which carried some excellent color schemes and was well done. The other photos showed his art panels and a street ballyhoo. A ballyhoo, used on "Soup to Nuts" consisted of a man dressed in chef costume, carrying a coffee pot and a soup dish on a tray. The man, a sign on his back plugging the picture, went about the town balancing the tray, creating a great deal of talk wherever he went.

This might be a good opportunity to sit back and speculate on the value or possibilities of these odd ballyhoo stunts. Do they attract attention? Can they possibly bring ridicule to the house or the manager? How often can they be worked without growing stale?

Many's the time we've stopped to wonder whether this type of stuff ought not be used a lot more than now. There's nothing wrong with the idea, and if the particular picture you are out to plug lends itself to the gag, why not use it? There are a thousand and one different slants to this street ballyhoo in which one or two people are used. And how they attract attention is a foregone conclusion. Just try to picture for yourself, a pair of birds parading the main part of the town all dressed up in some regalia to fit the picture you are plugging? Will it attract attention and create comment? You answer it.

"The Spoilers" Was Given Crack Display By Tommy McDonald

No matter how we look at it, this man Tom McDonald, manager of the Dome Theatre in Ocean Park, Calif., deserves a rave for the work he is turning out. Don't offer apologies for not being as active as usual, Tom; when you turn work like the stuff we are passing along, you are immediately forgiven.

Let's give you a little dope on the McDonald personality. He is a well known Coast showman. Having been on the sunny shores of California for quite some time now, every one knows him. As a result, co-operation a-plenty is obtained. In the photo we are showing here you will see what Tom did with a contest, in which some intrepid showman endeavored to find the ten most perfect backs in the world (picking them from California, at that). Two minutes after the girls were awarded their prizes, Tom had them on the stage of his theatre, displaying their pulchritude to an appreciative audience. (What a break for Tom, who may be seen at the right of the photo—and W. H. Lollier, assistant to Howard Sheehan, on the left.) We wouldn't have minded the job ourselves. But then—

Going further into Tom's activities, we discover that the front he turned out on "The Spoilers" was one of the most novel things ever before seen in Ocean Park. Look the front over yourself and you'll agree. Wax figures were promoted from a local museum. And what a sensation they created. Not a person went by that front without stopping to look at it. Lanterns and guns used were loaned by men who had treasured them during gold-rush days. The flasher effect for the "This Year's Dramatic Thunderbolt" sign, made the letters appear to lift an inch on each flash. Drop Tom a line if you want any dope on these angles.

We had a group of other photos to pass along with this story, but, unfortunately, they were so creased up that we couldn't make cuts from them. One photo showed a plane that was used to distribute 20,000 heralds on Greater Talkie Season. The plane was borrowed from one of Tom's friends (oh, these contacts), so there was no cost.

Tom also features a special shadow box, with a flasher on his marquee, whenever he has a picture that he thinks should be plugged in this manner. It is a great attention getter and Tom says that it would probably solve a lot of difficulty as to what to do with vacant space on the marquee, or space that features cut-outs week after week.

Check These Off!

Here are just a few—but mighty important—angles that a showman encounters when readying his house for the fall and winter seasons. In the course of your house inspection you may have missed one or two of these. Check and see!

1. Check up on ventilating equipment.
2. Look over your heating plant.
3. Front and signs to be cleaned and re-lamped.
4. Warm colors in all lobby displays.
5. Warm colors for lighting effects.
6. Winter uniforms for ushers.
7. Changing drapes.
8. Weather-stripping windows and exit doors.
9. Detail a man to watch house temperature.
10. Check up on standing room tapes, renewing worn ones.

Do This Now!

Well, Tom, we are certainly glad to see that you are banging them right and left with your work. Let's have some more of it so that we can pass it along to the rest of the Club, as it is pretty sure to meet a welcome hand from the rest of your fellow showmen and Club members. Regards to all our friends out in your district.

Orlove's Activities In Milwaukee Are Box-Office Builders

The showmen out in Milwaukee, Wis., are all active men, who make sure that no grass can grow under their feet. They are on the jump, morning, noon, and night. In the group may be found Louis Orlove, manager of the Uptown Theatre.

Orlove is very active. His work, which has appeared on our pages many times, is well known to Club members. But it's more known in Milwaukee. Take, for example, the stunt he pulled on "Common Clay." A big herald, the size of the front page of a newspaper, was used to plug the picture. The herald resembled a newspaper front page, and was headed off with screaming headlines selling the film. It was called the Uptown News and contained scene mats and stories. Every copy was immediately gobbled up and read by the persons to whom they were offered on the streets. Some additional publicity was also secured at no cost by Orlove, who imprinted a number of regular heralds with a radio dealer's business plug on the back. The dealer paid for the printing of the heralds.

At a meeting of the Wisconsin Paid Firemen's Association recently, more publicity was secured by the Uptown Theatre through a special page, in the association's magazine, announcing the fact that Orlove, for the Uptown, had selected one of the city fire houses as being an asset to the civic beauty. A committee of prominent business men assisted Orlove in his selection. This slant kept the house right before the eyes of the visiting firemen, with the result that, should any of them be seeking cinema entertainment, the Uptown would receive first consideration.

And now for his newspaper activities. Orlove has so gained the good-will of the newspapers that he manages to secure space in which to run various contests, one week a coloring contest; the next, an identification stunt. These activities have made him one of the real active showmen in the city, and we are sure that he is going to continue. Let's hear some more from you, Louis.

If You Try

(Mrs. Henry Armstrong In The Dorchester (Mass.) Beacon.)

If you try to make good
When the day is dreary,
When the load is heavy
And the way is weary

You will gather new strength
From the struggle and strife,
That will help you to take
A new hold upon life.

If you try to make good
At your task day by day,
And just give of your best
As you go on your way,

You will find in your heart
As you journey along,
New courage and hope
Welling up like a song.

Do the kind helpful deeds,
You will find it will pay,
And will help you to get
A real joy from to-day.

Portable Golf Had Them Jamming the Sidewalk and Street

That crowd, gathered around the usher in the photograph we are showing, is part of the mob featured in the latest stunt engineered by W. F. Brock at the Kingsbridge Theatre in the Bronx, New York City.

A three hole, portable, miniature golf course was secured from a local dealer, who had just received a shipment. The course was placed on a table in front of the theatre. With a uniformed usher acting as barker, an announcement was made to the effect that any person making a hole in one would be admitted to the theatre, free-of-charge. The announcement created a sensation! From blocks around they came to the theatre, each intent upon trying to win a free ticket. Those failing went into the theatre, anyway.

As the photograph shows, there was plenty of comment rife. The theatre's name was on every one's lips. This stunt cost Brock no great expenditure, and the publicity he derived was plenty. Keep up this sort of work, "W. F.," and we know that you'll be busting records right and left (if, indeed, you are not doing it, already).

Atmospheric Front Helped Berkheimer Sell Prison Film

When he played "The Big House," M. E. Berkheimer, manager of the Grand Theatre, Rocky Ford, Colo., wished that he had a bigger house to hold the capacity crowds that jammed the theatre during the run of the film. It was Berkheimer's fault, though. He exploited it so well that it had to bring them in. Some fault, eh?

Taking into consideration the fact that he worked on local conditions, his campaign was well planned and executed. For a month previous to play date, a slide was run on the screen. This was followed by a one-sheet, placed in the lobby, with a spot playing on it. Two weeks previous to play date, two iron gates—prison style—were bannered and placed in the lobby. Five days previous to the play date, a false front, a photo of which we are showing, plugged the atmosphere of the film. This front was well made up, as you will note.

Additional exploitation on "The Big House" included a quantity of heralds, distributed locally and about town. The heralds were followed by newspapers, imprinted in red ink, and carrying prison riot copy. The stunts were sensational, going across very well, as Rocky Ford had not seen them before. Is it any wonder that Berkheimer did good business? Listen, "M. E."! We'd like to hear from you often. Keep us posted, will you? And when you send in your next contribution, include a photo and a little dope on yourself so that we can give you a regular introduction.

Dean C. De Maree Is In Solid In Omaha As Result Of Work

When a showman will shoot us a contribution with, or right after, he has signed on the dotted line and become a member of the Managers' Round Table Club, we feel that he is going to be a very active contributor. So that's what we have to say to Dean C. De Maree, manager of the State Theatre in Omaha, Neb.

As a recent stunt, he pulled a "Safe and Sound Hallowe'en." He tied-up with the local newspaper and the city on this one. Newspaper stories, on a party given to five hundred newsboys, were given to the theatre for five days in advance of the affair. The newsboys all signed a pledge declaring that they would do all they could to prevent accident, property damage, and deaths. These signatures were placed on a three-sheet board, the pledge at the top. It was an impressive display. At the party, the Mayor, and a representative of the local police force, made short talks to the boys, at the conclusion of which, the newsboys filed out of the theatre and grouped about the pledge three-sheet for a picture taken by the local paper and inserted next day in the sheet. The paper and the city were both well pleased with the stunt, good-will resulting to the State Theatre and De Maree as the aftermath.

We have a hunch that, pulling stunts of this sort, he must be a pretty popular showman and we hope that he will keep us informed on his later work so that we can pass it along to his fellow showmen and managers to look at, and, if possible, use. Thanks, Dean, keep up the good work.

Pepping Up The Ads

Here is a reproduction of an ad which appeared in the Dayton, Ohio, Daily News not so very long ago and shows a mighty effective way of a group of theatres operating under one banner to make up a composite ad at probably a smaller cost than if each of the houses were to divide the space into quarters and use it on different parts of the page.

Undoubtedly RKO gets a break with this kind of advertising of those four houses and the reason for it is plain to see.

Those who believe there is something familiar about this ad may recall some months ago a reproduction of something along similar lines which was received from George Landy on the West Coast. This is mighty similar and, as you may see, mighty effective.

We would like to be able to credit this fine piece of work to whom ever was responsible for it, but, unfortunately we do not have this information at hand at this moment and we do not like to hold up the publishing of the cuts until we can find out, so, whoever wants the credit can step forward and claim it. We're hoping we are going to hear a lot more from him.

We are all anxious to investigate the possibilities of something new in a newspaper ad and for this reason the Club pages are particularly ready to jump at anything real "odd" which comes to our attention. Suppose YOU try to create a "different" sort of a newspaper ad this week. Surround it with something that you consider unusual and original. Then see how it looks after it gets on the paper among other theatrical ads. You'll soon start making a specialty of turning out "different" ads. Practise makes perfect—as the saying goes.

Kenimer Got Off To A Good Start And Sold "Top Speed"

"Top Speed" was given a high speed send-off by Guy Kenimer at the Palace Theatre, Jacksonville, Fla., when the film played his house recently. We are passing along Guy's complete campaign in order that you may look it over and make use of any suggestions that you care to.

The campaign was planned well in advance, the artists being kept busy, day and night, to turn out work and copy that would aid in tie-ups. The picture opened on the day Auburn and the University of Florida played a football contest. When a special train arrived that morning from Gainesville, the students held a parade, headed by the U. of Florida band, down the main streets; 1,500 students were in the procession. Immediately following the student body, the theatre's part of the parade entered. Two men, carrying a banner announcing the picture at Kenimer's house led the procession. They were followed by ten taxicabs, all carrying banners. Following this was seen two men carrying a stretcher with a man on it. A sign announced that the hapless person had laughed himself to death at "Top Speed." This was followed by six new model Chryslers, all carrying banners on each side. Immediately after these, came an automobile, pulling a trailer, on which was a new model Dodge speed boat, with a boy and a beautiful young lady as occupants. This boat was placed on display in the lobby during the run.

Through a tie-up with an airways corporation, a plane, with title of the picture and name of theatre painted on its undercarriage, flew over the city and distributed heralds. Each herald carried a number and an announcement that if the number corresponded to ones on a blackboard in the lobby of the theatre, the holder would receive a ticket to the show. The stunt was preceded by two advance newspaper stories. For three or four hours after the gag had been pulled a crowd thronged the lobby of the theatre. The plane also flew about the football field when the scheduled University combat was in progress.

Guy next arranged with a local undertaking establishment to drive an ambulance through the heart of the main section of the town, at about the time his first evening show was breaking, blowing their sirens and horns until they stopped a few feet from the theatre. The streets were crowded with people as the two men from the emergency ward ran into the theatre with a stretcher. A crowd quickly gathered, and its eyes opened wide with amazement when the men came out bearing a man on a stretcher. A sign on the man's back stated that he had laughed himself sick looking at the picture. This gave the theatre some fine advertising that traveled quickly about town, and it is reported that several persons were known to make inquiry at competitive houses to find out whether the picture playing was the one at which the man had laughed himself sick; and upon being told that it wasn't they immediately proceeded to Kenimer's house.

Plenty of other angles were covered in the campaign, included among them tie-ups with: a laundry, a dry cleaning company, taxicabs, Postal Telegraph company, etc., each firm permitting banners on trucks, with the telegraph company permitting cards on the bicycles of the messenger boys. The local police gave him a grant to place cards on all traffic signals, with copy: "Top Speed on this street 15 miles an hour but there are no limits to Laughs in Top Speed (theatre)."

With so complete a campaign, the success of the booking was assured and we don't doubt but that Guy packed them in all during the run. Let's have some more of this type of work, Guy.

Police Escorted Boys On Ponies As Plug For Picture

A parade that helped put across "The Santa Fe Trail" when it played the Tudor Theatre in New Orleans, La., recently was staged by Margaret Lee of the publicity staff.

The parade consisted of five boys on ponies with a police escort heading them. Banners were carried on the backs of the ponies; the banners containing copy that they were riding the Santa Fe Trail now at the Tudor theatre.

Inasmuch as the parade was staged around one o'clock Saturday, when there were many people on the streets, it did help considerably in getting over some valuable publicity for the picture.

Miss Lee's work has appeared on our pages before, and we are sure that she is going to continue being active. Are we right, Miss Lee?

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

J. H. Phillips of Eagle Theatre in N. Y. City Is Active

Scoring birdies at the Eagle Theatre in New York City is enabling J. H. Phillips, manager of the house, to turn in some cards showing record-breaking weeks.

His activities about the Eagle have been numerous. Known to all the merchants, he is able to effect tie-ups that help him immeasurably in the selling of his shows. In the time he has been located at the theatre, Phillips has turned out some excellent work, his years in the show business fitting him capably for that achievement.

Now that he has joined the Club, he promises us that he is going to try and be very active. That's a large order, "J. H.," because when a New York City showman gets active, he certainly has to step on it. We have so many showmen of the Big City on our rolls that competition is very keen to see who is going to lead the pack. Proof of this may be seen weekly in our pages, where a number of New York City showmen display their wares. Welcome into the Club, "J. H.," and let's hear from you very soon because we've an idea your stuff is good.

Tom Di Lorenzo Did Some Fine Work On Popularity Stunt

The popularity contest in Sam Rinzler's Brooklyn and Long Island division of Fox Theatres has closed. We haven't as yet put all of the material on it in a compact form for presentation on the Club pages. But we will. Right at this time though, we want to tell you what Thomas DiLorenzo, manager of the Cove Theatre in Glen Cove, Long Island, New York, did to put his part of the campaign across.

He tied-up with one of the local weeklies, and the paper agreed to run front page stories weekly, taking advantage of the popularity contest by offering votes to new subscribers of the paper. This tie-up, we believe, was engineered by DiLorenzo. The paper, for the first time in its history, published a special supplement of six pages which had the town talking. The section contained news stories on the contest, as well as pictures of the entrants. In addition a number of ads were secured from local merchants, in one instance a full-page co-operative page being run. Everything that the Cove theatre was selling, from film and sound to "Screen Mirror," the Wesco screen mag, was given a plug. The stories were written up by the newspapermen and DiLorenzo. A feature writer turned out a story on popularity which was placed in the special section. The Mayor of the city made the announcements of the winners, from the stage of the theatre, before a capacity audience.

We hope to hear some more from this showman on the work he is turning out, and we'd like it to be soon. What do you say, Tom? Can you accommodate us?

The Holiday Spirit!

We've been plugging the idea now for several weeks that every theatre, in conjunction with their local Salvation Army and other welfare organizations, ought to promote various kinds of special morning performances with a view of helping the unfortunates in their communities.

One suggestion would be a series of Saturday morning shows during the month of December with the admission charge being vegetables, old clothes, toys, groceries, etc., and all of the items so obtained to be used for distribution among the poor.

Aside from the humane angle you will chalk up a wealth of good-will for sponsoring or helping a cause of this kind. Pessimists tell us that there will be plenty of grief this Christmas among the poor. Let's do our bit to give them a helping hand.

It would also be a good idea to run a free show on Christmas morning for the poor kiddies. Stage shows could be promoted from local organizations, dancing schools, etc. At this show you could distribute toys and candy to the youngsters. The cost for a performance of this kind will be very small and we are sure that every member of your theatre's staff would gladly donate their services.

Other suggestions for "Good-Will" shows of this kind are solicited from our members and readers. Let's all get behind the move to spread a little sunshine this year.

Title Of Picture Was Placed On Doors Of Paramount, Waterloo

Those members fortunate enough to possess doors similar to the ones that may be found adorning the front of the Paramount Theatre, Waterloo, Ia., may, if they wish, make use of the stunt that Harry Herman pulled when he played "The Spoilers."

As the photo shows, special art pieces spelling out the name of the picture were placed on each door. In the center of each art piece, was painted one letter of the title. Atop of these letters were pasted stills plugging either the star or a scene in the picture. Study the photo closely and you'll be able to pick out the different angles.

There are many ways in which you can turn out an attractive front. Why not look about the spaces—if you have any—around the front of the house and devise some scheme to put it to good use. Fronts command a lot of attention and it is a certainty that if your art work shows signs of care you are going to sell whatever show you happen to be plugging. Listen, Harry, let's have some more like this, so that we can pass them along.

A Peppy Member

And now here's another showman who is mighty proud of his membership certificate in the Managers' Round Table Club. Meet Roger R. Drissel, manager of Loew's Columbia Theatre in Washington, D. ## Railroad In Window Plugged Prosperity Week For Stowell

A window display that helped him to sell the Prosperity Week he was plugging at the Paramount Theatre in Middletown, N. Y., was created by Harry C. Stowell, manager of the local Publix houses.

In the window of a store adjacent to the theatre was built a platform ten feet long and four and one-half feet wide, covered with a grass mat on which was a miniature railroad set consisting of five trains and engine which was operated by electricity.

Each coach on the train was 20 inches long and seven inches high. There was electric light in each coach as well as a rear and headlight on the engine.

A tie-up was made with a toy store to furnish the following miniature display for the window. Railroad station, illuminated tunnels, railroad gates, caution sign, blinker light, everything being operated by electricity.

The setting was surrounded by beaverboard—completely covered with pictures of Paramount stars and stills of each picture to be played during the week. There was also a card 54 inches long and 12 inches wide containing the following copy which tied in for the week's program, "Get on Paramount's Prosperity Train—First Stop 'MONTE CARLO'—Will Stop off Thursday and see 'LILIOM' and Saturday we will hit the 'SANTE FE TRAIL'."

In the front of the setting appeared the words, "PROSPERITY WEEK" in metallic letters.

The display not only drew the attention of the children but the grown-ups as well. The expense was comparatively small to the amount of attention it drew during the week.

And when a stunt pays big dividends, it is liable to be used again. Right, Harry? Let's see what else you are doing to line them up at the box-office.

High School Team Was Invited To See Football Picture

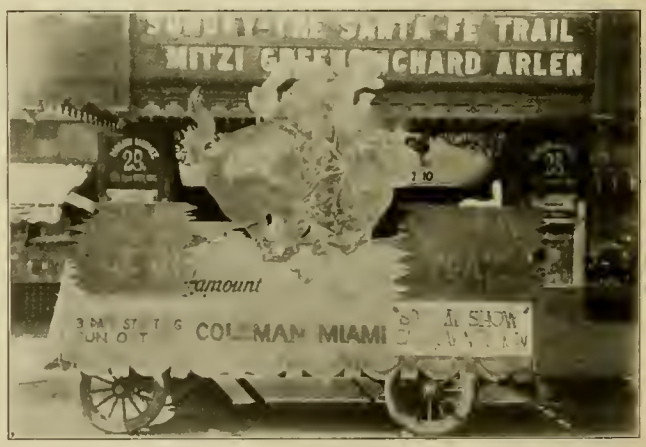
Inasmuch as two leading universities in the middle west are in a drawing radius of Cedar Rapids, and the town itself is football mad, C. W. Peterson emphasized the football angle of "Maybe It's Love" when it played his house, the State Theatre in Cedar Rapids, Mich.

The lobby of the State was trimmed with school pennants and directly in front of the box-office a set of goal posts were erected. These posts were wrapped with colored crepe paper, carrying out the local university colors.

The first squad of the high school and college football teams were guests of Manager Peterson at a showing of the picture. In return for this he got an announcement at the schools and at the frat houses.

1500 line-ups were distributed at a night football game played in Cedar Rapids. Peterson also promoted a collegiate Ford which was used on the streets to plug the picture during its run.

During the showing of "Maybe It's Love," lucky number tickets were passed out with each admission, and on the following Saturday night when Peterson had a new picture, a public drawing in the theatre determined the winner of the collegiate Ford. To win the car, a person had to be in the theatre when his number was called.



The audience was besprinkled with collegiates too, they forming a large part of the assembled populace. Which means that Peterson reported good business on the run of the film. As that was what he set out to get, and accomplished it, he was satisfied.

Limerick Ballyhoo Sold Coleman Show To Good Results

When a stunt will bring them in and stand 'em up there must be something to it. For this reason we are passing along the gag used by George Limerick at the Coleman Theatre, Miami, Okla.

The cut-outs shown in the photograph were made from 24 sheets pasted on compo board. The truck, on which the display was placed, was covered on four sides with plugs on the picture. This truck—or we should say trailer—was attached to a car and pulled all over the trade territory of the town and the surrounding districts. The cost of the stunt was trivial when compared to the wealth of business derived from it.

This stunt is one that any showman can use, and as it is not going to cost much, it would pay to try it. Perhaps you can promote a trailer of some sort about your town. Then all you have to do is to hitch it onto a truck, or a car, place your twenty-four sheet cut-outs around it, and let go the work. You can have a kid concealed behind the cut-outs, blowing on a horn or beating a drum, if you think that slant will work in your town. At any rate, give the gag some consideration and if you can use it, go to it. Oke, George. Let's hear some more from you.

Olinto Accorsini Of Lynchburg, Va. Is There With Goods

The showman guns continue to roar and reverberate. The campaigns on "All Quiet" continue. In Lynchburg, Va., Olinto Accorsini, manager of the Isis and Academy Theatres, did some heavy cannonading and bombarded the town with showmanship on his selling of the picture.

The usual tie-ups on the film were covered by Accorsini and they more than helped him put the picture across. But he had to do something else. And that something was the one thing that gave him a lot of pleasure. He crashed the hardboiled local newspaper for a bunch of free publicity. It is the paper's policy not to give away any publicity. All form of advertising must be paid for. To get around this angle, Accorsini invited the National Guard to witness the show at his house. The paper, realizing the news value of the angle, ran a story on it. Chalk up one for Accorsini. The local American Legion post was prevailed upon to inaugurate a campaign for members. The story crashed the papers, the theatre's name being mentioned. Chalk up two for Accorsini. The photo we are showing will give you the low-down on the value of the National Guard hook-up. The men marched to the theatre, their band playing military tunes. Arriving at the house, they played a number or so out front, then entered the theatre. They were well pleased with the treatment accorded them by Accorsini and they did not neglect to say as much.

Accorsini's campaign on the pictures clicked from every angle. He managed to crash two of the most exclusive stores in town for windows, war relics being displayed in them. The lobby of the theatre also featured a display of trophies. We are also showing a photo of the front that Accorsini turned out when he played "True to the Navy." Through a tie-up with the local recruiting station he secured some very good displays in the form of pennants, etc., that helped to enhance the effectiveness of the stunt. A neat recruiting booth was placed in the lobby. The booth and the display evoked many comments, resulting in additional business for the theatre.

Thanks, Olinto, for passing these along to us. And when you continue to turn out that work that you have been featuring, you should be knocking them over with your business. Keep it up.

Hugh S. Borland Is Right There with Selling of Serials

The opening day of a new serial at the Armitage Theatre in Chicago, Ill., was the signal for Hugh S. Borland, general manager of the Quality Amusement Corp., to boost his good-will stock with the kiddies.

A trailer was run in the theatre, announcing the fact that on the day the serial opened, a candy bar would be given to each child attending. In addition to this, the trailer also announced that every child whose admission ticket end in zero would be admitted to the theatre free of charge. This made a big hit with the kids.

In order to get still more publicity on his show, Borland distributed thousands of cardboard heralds at the schools. The heralds were imprinted on both sides and carried the names of the pictures to be shown, as well as the plug on the candy and free admission gag. Thousands of kids were on hand the opening day, and the enthusiasm they displayed upon witnessing the serial augured well for the following chapters and the Saturday matinee kiddie business.

Thanks, Hugh, for letting us in on what you are doing around the Loop. Keep up the good work and make sure that we know about it so that we can pass it along. Oke?

Better Films League Okayed Picture That P. Griffith Showed

When a showman can receive the support of the Better Films League—if he has one in his town—he is pretty sure to do good business on his film runs. P. D. Griffith did when he played "Silent Enemy" at the Ritz Theatre, Macon, Ga., just a short time ago.

The Films Committee sent out a letter to the principal of each of the 22 schools in the city asking for their co-operation in selling "The Silent Enemy," due to its educational background. The principals of the schools were invited as guests of the theatre to see the picture.

The Films Committee also sent out another letter to every teacher in the 22 city schools asking that the letter be read to their respective classes. This letter contained a more intimate knowledge of the picture as well as saying that there would be a $5 prize to the school having the largest attendance between 3 and 7 P. M. on Wednesday or Thursday.

The largest attendance in this instance meant in proportion to the school's enrollment. To determine the winner of the cash award was done by ballots. These were distributed to children, teachers, parents, relatives and friends. As these people enter the theatre, they deposited the ballots in a box provided for that purpose; the person's choice of school being indicated on the ballot before depositing.

Griffith also visited each school and was permitted to address the children relative to the picture.

The result was that the picture went over very well in the town. Good work, "P. D." And, by the way, when you send in your next contribution, include your photo. Will you, so that we can pass it along to the rest of the Club and give you an introduction?

A Timely Ad!

One thing that doesn't belong in a showman's curriculum is the cry "It won't fit the picture." The yodel is the wail emitted when a stunt is good, but is supposed not to fit some other picture. That's a lotta hooey! Pretty near every stunt will fit all types of pictures. Get an eyeful of the ad we are reproducing.

This ad was run, around Election Day, in one of the Cincinnati papers. The man responsible for it is Bill Danziger, peppy director of advertising and publicity for the R.K.O. houses in the Ohio city. Read his copy. It's the McKoy. You will notice that all of the circuit houses are represented in the ad. We don't know whether Danziger favors group advertising in all of his regular ads, but we are sure that he must think a lot of this type of advertising. We are not informed on the advertising situation in this town so we can't present any other slants on the ad for your consideration.

We think that if you will look this thing over that it will be productive of a brand new bunch of ideas with which you can add a little more life and pep to the ads you turn out in conjunction with national holidays or any event of especial import on your theatrical calendar. Before signing off on this story, we'd like to once more call your attention to a close scrutiny of the copy. You will note that the Western ads carry western language. The comedy "Oh! Sailor Behave" carries copy that sets it off well. Likewise the other films. That's the way it should be. What are your views on the subject?

Series Tickets Were Handed Out In St. Louis By McManus

The ability to fashion all of his stunts so that they will be winners has given John McManus, manager of the State Theatre in St. Louis, Mo., a rep around the town as that of a showman with a string of consistent successes and record breakers.

He landed a good publicity break, in one of the local papers, recently, through using the showman dope he is so often bringing into play. In the classified section of the local paper, he inserted an ad requesting that any person in St. Louis possessing tin hats, used either by the Americans or Germans, bring them to the stage door of the theatre, where they would be paid for the use of them. He was amazed to find that 743 applicants answered the ad.

Knowing that the newspaper would be more than pleased to learn the pulling power of their columns, he dispatched a letter to the advertising department telling them of his success. The paper picked up the letter and worked a three-column ad around it, in which the theatre was given mention.

That's only one of McManus' stunts. Here's another. With the World Series being played in his town, he was going to do something about it. What he did has the natives laughing yet. A bunch of heralds, in the form of baseball tickets, were made up. They were printed in black on yellow stock. On one side of the tickets was printed the season pass gag which is known to nearly all of the Club members. The other side contained the baseball ticket imprint with the copy reading: "This ticket entitles the holder to GRAND STAND on or near the curbstone of Grand Blvd., Dodier St., Sullivan Ave., Spring Ave., or any other street that is your size (fat people bring a long yardstick) where, if you are tall enough, you may view the World Series Game between the St. Louis Cardinals and Philadelphia Athletics." (Date.) On the stub was imprinted: "RAIN CHECK. In case of rain this stub will serve as an excellent rain check over the hole in your umbrella or slicker."

The stunt was a riot. People were passing the dummy tickets along, getting plenty of laughs wherever they went. The house came in for some fine publicity, with the result that business increased during the series. This is Mr. McManus' first contribution to our pages as he has just joined the Club. We are sure that, with such activity as he displays, he is going to be a very active member. Let's have some dope on yourself, John, and include your photo with it.

Ewing's Heralds For Out-Of-Town Trade Effective

Some showmen are so located in towns that they find it necessary to make a play for the surrounding territory in order to help boost the box-office up above normal. Such is the case of J. C. Ewing, manager of the Colonial Theatre in Watertown, S. D.

Feeling that he had to get them coming in from the sticks, Ewing made up a herald, printed in black on white coated stock and sent it out to the residents of the R. F. D. routes. The heralds, containing four pages, carried plugs on the inner pages relative to the films coming to the theatre. The front page of the herald carried photos of various stars all around the borders with their names identifying them.

Twenty-five hundred heralds were sent out, and in order to stimulate interest, Ewing imprinted two hundred and fifty of them with a special coupon club. The coupon entitled the bearer to a free admission to the theatre on a certain date. The heralds were then mixed up with the rest and sent out through the mails. We might also explain that Ewing's motives in dating the free coupon and placing them in different piles was in order to diminish the possibility of large groups of persons coming in to the theatre on the same day. No heralds were mailed to persons living in the town.

The gag met with plenty of success, as the person who had received the coupon was certain to bring somebody else along. The angle proved to be valuable, and if you think that it's something that will help your business along, also, go ahead and use it. Perhaps you can add one or two slants to it; and if so, let's have your ideas too, so that we can pass them along to your fellow Club members. We want to thank Ewing for his thoughtfulness and we hope he is going to keep us posted on his future work also.

Window Display Was Factor in Selling Of Babcock Show

Following through with his regular, and usual, good run of showmanship, Harold C. Lee, manager of the New Babcock Theatre in Bath, New York, arranged an excellent window display to help him sell "Follow Through."

The window display, which we are showing via a rather poor photo, consisted of cut-outs from posters, which formed a background for a miniature golf course. The baby golf course was very novel, arranged as it was of a couple of dolls, small fairways and hazards, and golf pencils, as war clubs.

As the display was made in one of the stores in the town where many persons traded, it was certain to attract attention to the picture. It later proved to be one of the best bets that Lee used to sell his show. We notice with interest that his house organ, the back pages of which carries ads from the local dealers, is still going as strong as ever. The page is chock-full of ads. This helps defray the expenses of printing. We are glad to note that "H. C." is continuing the activity that has characterized his work ever since he has been at the theatre. Keep it up, Harold, and let's have some more of it, because it is always of interest to the rest of the Club.

Feldman Made An Excellent Tie-Up With Radio Corp.

An advantageous tie-up with a nationally known radio manufacturing company enabled Harry Feldman, manager of the Victory Theatre, Holyoke, Mass., to secure a lot of advertising for his picture, "Follow Thru."

The radio distributor and city dealers paid for 84 inches of newspaper space which was run prior to opening of picture as well as on day picture opened. This space was devoted to cooperative copy about the picture and radio.

The theatre also gave away a radio to the one guessing the serial number (or the nearest to correct number) on the set on display in the theatre lobby; the radio being donated by the distributor.

Window displays of stills from the picture as well as art cards announcing title of picture, theatre and playdates were in the windows of all distributors.

Keep it up, Harry, and let's hear some more from you.

Golf Hounds Hit Pill Over Course In Lashley Stunt

When the golf bug bites 'em they stay bit. That is the opinion forwarded to us by H. T. Lashley, city manager for Publix of the circuit houses in Burlington, N. C.

How does Lashley know? Easy. He played "Follow Through," a just a short while ago, and decided to give it some publicity that would have the residents flocking to the box office of the Paramount Theatre. The town boasts a nice golf course. Accordingly, Lashley tacked up a bunch of cards, a week in advance of play dates, to the effect that a golf tournament would be held on the Saturday preceding the Monday opening. The local country club co-operated with him. The newspapers came through with stories. Considerable comment, as a result, was aroused.

The day of the tournament found the golfers all set to chase the pill over the slightly faded green (this being fall, whaddya expect on a golf course—roses?). The awards at stake were a one and two-months pass to the theatre, in addition to numerous double passes. The golfers had a lot of fun. Lashley had a lot of fun. The house received plenty of publicity, the newspapers thinking the story important enough to place on the front page, and the picture chalked up an excellent gross for the run. Thanks, "H. T." Shoot along some more.

BETTER HOP ABOARD WITH US

K. L. PETER manages the Roseland Theatre in Omaha, Neb. He comes to the Club proposed by our Regional Chairman, W. H. Bergmann. Peter was formerly working with Fred Glass at McCook, Neb., so we are sure that he knows his stuff. Welcome into the Club, "K. L.," and let's see some of your work.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

WALTER S. CALDWELL manages the Valentine Theatre, Toledo, Ohio. He really needs no introduction on these pages as his work is well known to many of our members, it having appeared here a number of times. We are sure, though, now that he has appeared on these pages, he will continue the activity he has shown in the past and keep us posted on his work. Right, Walter.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

EDWIN ADLER is the manager of the Vendome Theatre in Nashville, Tenn., for the Loew outfit. Some excellent showmanship has been displayed in this town in the past and with Adler handling one of the ace houses we feel that he must be in on it, and running right out in front. Let's have a line or two on it, Edwin, and you might also include your photograph.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

R. G. McCAULEY assists Larry Carkey in the handling and selling of the Olympic Theatre in Utica, New York. As an assistant manager, Mr. McCauley has had some fine training and we are sure that the work he did with the Schine outfit is going to be continued. And working with a showman like Larry, there should be more added to it. Let's have your say on the subject, "R. G."

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

JAMES A. O'KELLY is the exploitation manager of the Smoot and Lincoln Theatres in Parkersburg, West Va. There has been some outstanding showmanship being displayed by Bill Hendricks n this town, Jimmy, and we want you to know that you'll have to be pretty active to get ahead of it. However, we have a hunch you know your stuff. Let's see if we're right.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

J. H. PHILLIPS manages the Eagle Theatre in New York City. Mr. Phillips has been in the show game for quite some time and he is fully capable of handling this "big city" house. His neighborhood offers him some exploitation possibilities and he sure takes advantage of them. Why don't you drop us a line on the rest of your selling, "J. H.," and let's know how you bring them in to the box-office.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

JIM LANDERS is the manager of the Aztec Theatre in San Antonio, Texas. We are rapidly nearing the 100 per cent mark for Round Table membership in this city and with Mr. Landers' application we swell it one more. Shoot us in a photo and some low-down on what you are doing to keep them lining up at the box-office, will you?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

GREGORY ELLIS manages Loew's Plaza Theatre in Corona, Long Island, New York. As we are pretty well acquainted with Mr. Ellis' neck of the show country we know that he can display some showmanship out there, a thing that he is no doubt doing. We would like to hear some more from you, Gregory, and we hope that you will include your photo with your next contribution.

J. T. STROUD manages the Capitol Theatre, Aberdeen, South Dakota. Mr. Stroud is right on the job out in his district and he doesn't let any opportunities go by for plugging his house. The contacts he has made in town, enable him to turn out some fine showmanship. We hope to show some of it in our future issues. How about it "J. T."?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

J. M. BLANCHARD is the manager of the Strand Theatre in Sunbury, Penn. His many activities in the town have won for his house a place that ranks right in front with all of the leading business enterprises. We understand that he knows his town very well and this has enabled him to pull effective gags at will. We'd like to hear more about your work, "J. M."

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

HAL CUFFEL the manager of the Orpheum Theatre in Grand Forks, N. D. really needs no introduction as his work has appeared on our pages before, but as Hal has never been represented on this page, we felt that it was time for him to be so. Here you are Hal, and now let's have some more of that activity you are displaying in Grand Forks.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

PAUL LEVY manages the Broadway Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., for the Loew Circuit. We have been over in the Broadway's district a number of times, and have observed the chances it offers for exploitation, which no doubt Paul is taking advantage of, as he is trying to jam them into his house every night. Let's have a photo and a little dope on yourself Paul, so that we can give you a regular introduction.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

WM. R. FISCHER is the Assistant Manager of the Columbia Theatre, for Loew, in Washington, D. C. As most of our members know, the house is managed by Roger Drissel, a capable showman, and this leads us to believe that Fischer is certainly in a good spot. Let's hear how you are progressing Bill. We have an idea you'll be handling your own house before long.

TO ALL MANAGERS

THE BIG TRAIL! (Fox) Rating 200% Plus

We have never seen a more comprehensive manual put into the hands of showmen than the press sheet on "The Big Trail."

You have material to lure the kiddies, to attract the "old timers" who settled here many years ago. You have material that will appeal to the civic organizations, educators, and to every other adult who is fascinated by romance, daring courage and red-blooded action. These tools would be worthless in your hands if you didn't have a "Gold Mine" but you have and how! This picture, as its name implies, is B I G, B I G, B I G.

"The Big Trail" had its Iowa premier showing at the Rivola Theatre, Oskaloosa, on Sunday, November 2nd. All records for business were broken, and the Monday and Tuesday business proved beyond question of a doubt, that the public is going to go for "The Big Trail", hook, line and sinker. We are expecting record business or at least close to record business from your engagement.

Get a load of that sales manual. Study it, read it carefully -- and then plan a campaign that will "ring the bull's eye." This letter does not necessarily mean to go wild in expenditures, for with careful planning, you can do the right things in the right way and they will have far reaching results.

Yours very truly,

H. M. Weinberg

"If You Can't Trim, We'll Show You How," Bankers Tell Industry Leaders

Pithiful

Chicago—An independent distributor selling a very good comedy was anxious to get a booking for it in one of the larger Loop houses. Through a contract he established with a circuit man he was able to screen it for the circuit's booker, a cold-hearted individual of few words and irrevocable decisions. The three of them watched the screening to the final fadeout. The booker arose to go. Not even the suggestion of a smile had crossed his face at any time during the screening. At the doorway he paused and delivered his ultimatum. "Very pithy," he said coldly. "Very pithy. I'll let you know tomorrow if we can use it."

'Tell me" said the disheartened distrib anxiously, when the Big One had gone, "tell me, does he lisp?"

Paul Burger to Get Al Lichtman United Artists Job?

Paul Burger, veteran company executive, is in line for the general sales managership of United Artists in the event Al Lichtman retires from the post. Lichtman now is on the Coast for conferences with Joseph M. Schenck in what is expected to be a showdown on his handling of company sales.

There is to be a shakeup of United Artists forces in the East, it is understood, with several managers to be demoted to the position of salesmen. The steady falling off of company grosses is responsible, it is said. This drop of intake is reported to have led Schenck to sell a half interest in Art Cinema to Howard Hughes Burger is a nephew of Schenck.

Lichtman, so the story goes, is to join Warners under a five-year contract.

Hollywood—Al Lichtman will remain as general sales manager of United Artists, it is reliably reported here.

Sheehan in East to Talk Costs With Clarke

Winfield Sheehan is in New York for about two weeks to confer with Harley L. Clarke and W. J. Michel on Fox production plans for the next year.

As part of the widespread industry move to reduce expenses, it is expected the Fox officials will go over the production situation on the Coast with a view to ascertaining whether or not overhead cuts can be made.

Wall St. in Deadly Earnest About Need for Economy—Leaders on the Pan

Regulation of its financial affairs must come from within and in a reasonable length of time, or the bankers will step in and demonstrate to the executives of the industry how it should be done.

This ultimatum thrown in the laps of the leaders of the business emanated from Wall Street a few weeks ago, MOTION PICTURE NEWS learns, and is directly responsible for the hurried conferences already held and being held by New York executives with their production lieutenants on the Coast.

At a meeting at which it is learned all of the important financial interests identified with motion pictures were in attendance, the entire situation was gone over and attempts made to reach a solution. Particularly disturbing to the banking firms was the apparent paradox of pictures that cost more to make but failed to increase grosses in keeping with their cost. They are understood to have recognized the situation as one that demanded immediate attention.

One More Chance

They came to the decision that before they stepped more actively into the picture than they now are the big leaders of the industry were to be given one more chance to demonstrate if they can remedy their own affairs. If, after a full test, the bankers find them lacking, the proposal is to step in and regulate the business through banking representatives empowered with full right to wield the axe as they see fit.

The seriousness of the situation made itself immediately felt in picture ranks. Proof of this is more than conclusively borne out by the hurried trek westward of the heads of a number of important companies. Hiram Brown dashed to the Coast on behalf of Radio: Nick Schenck and J. Robert Rubin, for M-G-M; Ben Schulberg was brought East by Paramount and told what the procedure was to be, and now Adolph Zukor is in Hollywood following through the decision to trim, to its conclusion.

Joe Brandt, scheduled to go West for Columbia, changed his plans and Harry Cohn was brought on for a pow-wow in New York. Winfield Sheehan's presence in New York is linked with the same general movement toward economy.

Straws in the Wind

Joe Moskowitz, vice president of Art Cinema, which finances and produces many of the pictures on the United Artists program, is in Hollywood on a stay of indefinite duration to see what he can do to trim

Fame Goes Astray

They tell this one on Sam Goldwyn: The producer had selected Louis Bromfield, author of "The Green Bay Tree,' 'Possession" and "24 Hours"—all of them best sellers—to write the story for Evelyn Laye's first talker. At their first meeting the story has Goldwyn saying:

'Your name is well known now. You are a great author. We will make that name greater. We will publicize your name up and down the country.

'What do you think of that, Mr. Bromberg?"

Unrest On Coast Over Banker Plan To Trim Overhead

Hollywood—This is a land of unrest. Reports percolating from New York that the bankers have issued instructions to trim overhead, plus the coming and going of big-time executives from New York, are leaving their mental markings on members of the film colony.

Nobody can quite figure what's going to happen, how much curtailing will be instituted or who on what lot will be fired. Relatives and political henchman of the powers in the studio saddles privately are very much worried over the outcome. Some of them see big salaries either being cut off entirely or drastically trimmed in conformance with the bankers' mandate to reduce expense.

For once in its lifetime at least Hollywood is beginning to understand that this is more than mere talk, that the orders are definite and clear cut and that something, aside from alibis, will have to be done in an effort to make the production shoe fit the film body.

Skouras' Duties to Be Increased; Ouster Yarn Hit

Film circles buzzed this week with a report that Spyros Skouras was slated for the axe, but Sam E. Morris promptly denied it. Skouras is scheduled to take over additional duties, Morris asserted. He added he does "not know how such a report could be circulated." Several weeks ago, MOTION PICTURE NEWS reported that Skouras was to take over additional duties at Warners.

WHEN IT'S GABBLE TIME IN HOLLYWOOD

IT TOOK the philosophers of old to appreciate the fact that silence is golden and the young and often foolish picture business a series of costly and experimental heartaches to arrive at the same conclusion.

Now that all doubt has been removed about the demise of sound as a novelty and the industry has learned that talkers don't have to be that in the pure, literal sense of the word, you are about to witness a change in the production formula that will do much to make product hew closer to the line of public demand.

Talkers Minus Some Talk

TALKERS will talk, but they won't have so much to say. They will be constructed to embrace those natural pauses, those periods of relief which the dramatist who knows his job utilizes to interlude the properly constructed stage play. Where once sound pictures squawked and groaned and conversationalized until there was no rest for those who braved the theatre's portals, you will be enabled to offer your public—and you'll be smart if you talk about it—motion pictures that tell their piece more in terms of images and less in terms of dialogue.

The All-Gabber Faces Execution

LOOK at it this way if you like:

Producers have learned the lesson of the heavily worded picture. They have been made to realize—through the box-office—that one of the serious faults with talkers of the current crop is their inclination to talk the audience to despair. Don't get the idea that this forum thinks silents are to replace sound. That may or may not happen, but the odds in favor of the completely silent film are too remote to worry about when box-offices are suffering from a current pernicious anemia.

The point is that the one hundred per cent. gabber is a dead issue and that natural sound effects will take the place of superfluous words now added to the script because it seems the thing to do.

That's Only Part of the Job

AND, further, it is important to dissipate any thoughts in your mind that this is a cure-all for production. It isn't.

We again go over published ground in explaining what we think must be done to make pictures better. They must be fewer in number. There must be a wholesome, as well as a wholesale, encouragement of individual—independent, if you like—effort. The vicious Hollywood system of charging one man with the final word on forty-eight, fifty-two or seventy pictures must end because not even a combination of Thalberg, Schulberg and Sheehan, retaining the best features of each, can do it.

In the Land of Utopia

THERE must be a diversity in locale, which means that Hollywood should be knocked off its pinnacle and made to understand that three thousand miles of land connect it with New York.

There must be fewer yes men and more of the other kind and there must be a house cleaning to uproot the incompetents that flourish by political patronage.

Then, dear dreamer, there might be some hope.

MoreConsolidation Moves at Warners? Profits Drop 51%

A hint that further consolidations among the various Warner enterprises is intimated by Harry M. Warner in submitting the annual financial report of Warner Brothers' Pictures, Inc., this week.

Indicating that theatre expansion is not ended, he said:

"While such acquisition and construction of additional theatres in various sections may become necessary . . ., the main effort of our company is now rather being devoted to coordinating the functions of the various departments and branches of our organization, consolidating them into one closely welded unit operating economically and advantageously."

Profits for the year ending August 30, 1930, dropped from $14,514,628 the previous fiscal year to $7,074,621, a decrease of $7,440,007, or slightly over 51 per cent. The 1929-1930 net is, after depreciation, amortization, Federal taxes, special film inventories, write-down and "extraordinary expense" coincident with the coordination of newly acquired properties. These profits are equivalent after preferred dividend requirements to $1.77 a share on the 3,769,025 no-par shares of common now outstanding, but Warners state the earnings for 1930 do not include profits of affiliated companies prior to dates of their acquisition.

On the basis of the 2,732,687 average number of shares outstanding during 1930, the 1929-1930 profits are computed at $2.44 a share, after preferred dividends and on the basis of 2,627,405 shares outstanding on August 31, 1929, at $2.21 per share.

Fixed assets at cost, less depreciation and amortization, on August 30, were $163,767,356, as compared with $110,870,822 one year ago. Total assets were $230,185,444, as compared with $167,189,024 on August 31, 1929. Current assets as of August 30, 1930, were $42,498,290, including $5,133,337

64 Per Cent of Stock Seen Held by Group at Annual Meeting

Wilmington, Del.—Reports that control of Warner Brothers may pass to Pierre S. du Pont, John J. Raskob and other capitalists of this city, who control a large block of stock, and to the banking interests who recently underwrote the new $14,000,000 stock issue, are current in local financial circles as the date of the annual stockholders' meeting to be held here approaches. The meeting will be held in the duPont Building office of the company on Dec. 8.

The current reports in financial circles are that duPont and Raskob with their allied stockholders will control at least 64 per cent. of the stock at the company's meeting. Whether any change will be made in the board of directors is a matter of speculation. However, there are persistent rumors that changes will be made so as to give the Raskob-duPont interests complete financial control.

Raskob and the duPonts are said to be buying Warner stock steadily through Hayden, Stone & Co., which arranged the new financing for Warners a few months ago.

Some time ago it was reported that the duPont-Raskob-banking group had gained control of the company, but this was denied by Harry M. Warner.

Abandon Buying Combine

London—Establishment of an exhibitor buying circuit is being dropped by the British exhibitor organization, it is reported. Sponsors of the combine feel that if distributors give a break to small houses the proposed co-operative can be dropped.

Out of Control?

Horry M. Worner, who recently denied control of his compony hod possed from the Worner brothers.

It's a Business

Portland—Mel Kellar, Vitagraph manager, and Vete Stewart (F. N.) were in the midst of a hotly contested golf game on the Columbia course, and incidentally took time to boost the merits of the film of their respective organizations.

In the midst of their physical and mental fight they were handed wires advising that they would both thereafter be under the same roof, and their services would be required as salesmen in the great Oregon territory. In spite of the unexpected news the game was finished with Vete on the long end of the score.

Warner Holdings Spread Over 187 Towns, 19 States

INSIDERS'

SOME of the glitter that surrounds the picture business is acquiring a coat of tarnish these fall days.

The worries are plenty. To begin with there is the chronic concern over quality of pictures, blown up to formidable proportions today by the widespread lack of it.

Then you have to figure production which persists in rising without pulling standards up along with it. A second and extremely bothersome problem.

Thirdly, and inter-related with the others, of course, is the sag in theatre receipts, which are off anywhere from ten to thirty per cent as against last year, the exact percentage varying with the individuals you talk to about grosses.

Fourth—maybe it should be moved up—is the vexatious, impenetrable and mystifying foreign situation which has succeeded in keeping a number of ordinarily level heads in New York revolving at top speed. For nobody has the slightest idea where the overseas tangle will end.

The Insiders include this latter headache because foreign sales are so inescapably interlocked with the progress or retrogression of the industry in the United States, although the exhibitor at large probably can't see how he's involved in what happens, or doesn't, in Germany or Brazil.

Nevertheless, he is. And this is why:

Regardless of whether or not the bookkeeping systems in vogue are sound or otherwise, it is true, notwithstanding, that American negative costs rarely show a profit from earnings in the American field. Foreign sales are depended upon to suffuse the red with plenty of black and, if they don't, it inevitably follows that the slack will have to be picked up by increased rentals foisted upon the domestic showman.

Quotas, other restrictive forms of legislation, international economic depression, what to do and how about providing foreign language audiences with talkers they can understand are among the many problems facing foreign sales managers who will tell you frankly they have never been so dizzy in all of their careers.

It is this combination of pressing circumstances that is directing the fire of the bankers toward the leaders of the industry.

Fog and Befogged

Interested in balance sheets and speaking the language of assets versus liabilities, the financial fraternity is expressing pointed concern over the future. Questions have been asked, but satisfactory answers have not been forthcoming always. Not necessarily because the desire for evasion exists, but primarily because nobody quite knows how to reply.

Out of the maze, it does appear, however, that one method of procedure may be safely evolved. The major companies are beginning to understand more fully that the day of merchandising is here; that intensive efforts to sell product must be made if any measure of success is to be met; that routine booking, routine advertising, routine everything may be expected to bring routine results in a day when the extraordinary is a pressing need.

Note these signs of the times:

Adolph Zukor, interviewed in Kansas City while en route to the Coast, recognizes the importance of advertising, plus merchandising. Therefore, Paramount will so act.

Carl Laemmle has ditched Universal's advertising budget for a free-hand policy that will cost more money but which inevitably will bring the results for which it is designed.

Harry Warner, flanked by Sam Morris and Abe Waxman, heads an advertising council to cooperate with all circuit houses, not merely the Warner holdings, on merchandising, advertising, exploitation for future pictures.

What Radio did with Amos 'n' Andy is now current day trade history. It looks like a repeat for "Cimarron" and other important films. The company is that sold on the idea of emotionalizing the exhibitor through trade and newspaper advertising.

Bankers and a Slant

Some day—perhaps what's going on is the beginning of the era—the picture business will learn that it isn't the number of pictures, but the kind of pictures that counts; that it's a day of specialization and that only specialized, intensified treatment will bring home the dough.

The Insiders happen to know that the ideas here expounded are looked upon as sound and with a great deal of favor in certain of the banking circles whose support make the operations of several large picture companies possible.

They are drawing upon the experiences and the growing pains of other industries and applying them to this. Smart eggs, those bankers.

Boosting the Nut

Wonder why Pathe is remaking a large part of "Beyond Victory," war time drama. E. H. Griffith is directing the retakes, while John Robertson directed the original. Bill Boyd, Helen Twelvetrees, Dorothy Burgess, Lew Cody, Robert Ames and Russell Gleason are in the cast.

Franklin-U. A. "Jam"

It didn't take long for Harold B. Franklin and United Artists to ride into a jam in discussing plans for a hook-up in the battle against Fox West Coast Theatres. Franklin, as Motion Picture News exclusively stated, advanced a tie-up with United Artists, but his proposition was refused.

He thinks United Artists is bluffing, Franklin says, but the company is going ahead with its plans for 25 houses along the Coast. The first house will be at Santa Ana, a deal is under way at Pasadena, and one other is just about closed. The company plans a straight picture policy with Sol Lesser in charge.

United Artists takes the position that talking pictures, like legit shows, are more important than the theatre that plays them. Big theatres and chains,

Can You Answer Why——

A WELL known executive hurried East, stayed about a week, scurried West and now shortly returns to New York to spend a lot of time here when his job is really at the studio?

Several picture personalities called a meeting, started to talk calmly, ended up violently and then continued their deliberations with as many lawyers present as there were principals.

A certain chap who should be in Hollywood to sit in on certain conferences suddenly found pressing business that succeeded in taking him almost 2,000 miles from the scene of confab?

The extensive duties of a fellow whose name you know well are to be augmented and why at least one other fellow—executive in the same organization—is gnawing his fingernails?

A well known production figure, formerly endowed with a high-sounding title, consented to drop the monicker and permit himself to sink into ostensible oblivion and for how long?

OUTLOOK

they say, were built to put over "factory made" silent pictures, the firm avers, but that day is gone by, "as factory made talkers are impossible." Successful talkers, company members contend, can come only from individual producers.

They're backing this stand with their proposed chain.

Members of U. A. are plenty peeved over the "has-been" implication in Harley L. Clarke's statement in answer to the U. A. "declaration of independence." This was a shaft which obviously hurt.

U.A. - F.W.C.

Some of the inside on the United Artists-Fox West Coast fracas:

It is understood West Coast offered U.A. a 20 per cent split on a blanket deal for its output, but that United demanded as high as 40 per cent on some films, which would have brought the average up to about 30 per cent.

This split was turned down cold by Fox West Coast. Therefore, the U.A. decision to fight.

Dodging Headaches

There is a real moral in the manner in which Columbia and Universal are sailing along this season. Columbia has just reported earnings of $237,086, before amortization for film rights purchased, in the three months ended September 27. Grosses are the highest in its history, and $2,000,000 net for the year is predicted.

Universal, too, is going great guns, its grosses running to record figures, thereby sending the company off to a rousing start for the new year.

Columbia has no theatres, which is one of the big answers to its earnings. Unburdened by the worries and red ink of circuit operation, the company has been devoting all its time to making and selling pictures. This, coupled with the fact that Harry Cohn knows how to make them, and Joe Brandt and Jack Cohn how to market them, has enabled the firm to move steadily forward.

For How Long?

Now that picture executives inwardly chortle in delight over the digs taken at the business in "Once in a Lifetime," it may be they will have additional opportunity to laugh. The New York stage is about to blossom forth with a series of plays with Hollywood as their theme song.

Donald Davis has one dubbed "Made in Hollywood." Crane Wilbur presenting "The Cradle Call" in Chicago and Connolly and Swanstrom are sweating over a musical comedy laid in the Hollywood foothills.

The funny slant is that, while there are some who burn up when they think of "Once in a Lifetime," some producer, dizzied by its Broadway success, will undoubtedly buy it, and run into six figures to acquire the rights if for no other reason than to keep them away from his competitor.

It's being done all the time.

Smart Judgment

One of the smartest bits of showmanship and sane business gestures was put over by Jim Ryan of Wurlitzer in newspaper advertisements carrying a pledge to his employes that they are to be kept on the payroll, and calling upon the public to help make that possible through purchase of company products.

Ryan deserves a big hand for that fine piece of copy, as well as for the spirit which prompted it. There have been a lot of silly mistakes made during the present unemployment crisis, with workers keeping their money out of circulation because they were uncertain how long their jobs would last. More than that, however, the stupid frenzy which has seen the axe swinging right and left, has ruined the morale of workers.

It isn't necessary to point out what has been done in the film business, with wholesale salary slashing and cutting of staffs. Suffice to say that a number of companies have used bad judgment. The Insiders commend to the entire industry Ryan's bit of business judgment and fair play.

TRICKS of the trade are many in the dear old film business. Even big organizations that strike an affinity in interests through booking deals that frequently run into millions a year don't always find the going calm.

At the minute, what is so far in the heated discussion stage in two offices may break out into the open. If the arguments crystallize into action—and such course is still complete conjecture—the shock will reverberate clear through the trade.

The cross-currents revolve around percentages and the weird processes through which they often pass when circuits split them up. The dissatisfied producer in this case—he is likewise a large theatre owner—is getting the outlets controlled by his circuit affiliate. No squawks there. But—

He isn't faring nearly so well in a lot of keys because the circuit has pyramided house expense to a level which reduces the producers' split by many thousands weekly. That rubs.

Then, this rankles, too. Last year the producer sold his stuff elsewhere and did extremely well, despite the fact that in a lot of instances the buyers were not producer-affiliated.

To intimate that a complete break is on the way wouldn't be fair. Or truthful. More likely the disgruntled organization will insist on a rearrangement of the split and get it.

The Horwitz Mess

"Indomitable Will" of Houston is still rampaging in his local newspapers for Texas censorship. If ever a single individual in this business made bad friends faster than Horwitz, the record has yet to reveal his name.

The gang in New York simply cannot grasp what sort of gyrations the Horwitz mentality passes through. Here's an instance of an exhibitor actually coughing up dough to pay for newspaper ads seeking to encourage legislation that would censor the merchandise he sells to his public every day in the week.

Chains and One of Their Weak Links

THE yarns that are told about long-distance circuit operation are among the most precious in the trade. Here's one that fairly lops up all of the gravy:

The circuit head is a big man. That is, in his destiny rests the success or failure of a formidable array of theatres; investment, many millions. That makes him big. The man who went through this experience has a pretty good record as a theatre manager.

It came to pass finally that a deal was made; the manager made his train and about 11 o'clock the next morning was at his post. The theatre was doddering and its competition strong. Therefore, the manager had plenty to do.

For two weeks he slaved and, brevity in time notwithstanding, made his showmanship felt. At the end of the first week, no check. At the second, when headquarters had been tapped, the draft came through—minus salary for the one-seventh of a day, or the difference between getting on the first day's job at eleven instead of nine.

The manager quit, of course. The wind had been taken out of sails and all initiative killed to save a handful of pennies.

Clinch Ending Is Still in Demand; "Girl Must Live"

Providence—The old sugar-coated endings with the hero and heroine locked in close embrace are still the McCoy in the provinces where the alleged artistic fade-out has no place if it brings in old man Death to write the tag.

This was exemplified at the RKO Victory where "Today" was shown. In this there are two endings in the can, one showing the husband shooting the wife and she stays shot, while the other brings her out of that condition by the hero's finding out that it was all a nightmare. The girl, who is the worst type of gold-digger and parasite, deserves the bullet, but do audiences in the hinterland go for it? They do not! Harry Storin, RKO chief here, tried out both endings and thumbs down were turned on the one that spelled finis to the lovely, if misguided, wife.

The other ramification of plot, however, met with great approval, although it was illogical and weak as drug store gin. Fans left the theatre expressing the opinion that, after all, Cupid might find a way.

This condition, however, seems to apply only to pictures dealing with the love interest angle. In death house and war films it seems oke for the hero to get himself shot to pieces as long as he leaves no girl in tears.

Omit Film Stocks From "Best Bets"

Film stocks were not included in "stock groups which will lead the next bull market" in a discussion of the subject by the American Statistical Association. Listed as the leaders in the market's recovery were chemicals, natural gas, electric comfort devices, remodeled homes, prepared goods, branded goods and dairy products, including ice cream.

Pauline Starke Suing James Cruze for Ouster

Hollywood—Pauline Starke is suing James Cruze for $6,050, charging that she was employed at a salary of $1,500 for four weeks for "The Great Gabbo" and then was discharged after working four days in the film. The $50 is for airplane fare she said she paid in rushing to the studios at the asserted direction of the defendant.

M-G-M Signs Timberg

Herman Timberg, vaudeville headliner, has been signed by M-G-M to appear in two "Colortone" shorts. These will be titled "Ambitious People" and "The Schoolroom."

Abandons Project

Philadelphia—Fox has abandoned its proposed Seventeenth and Market Sts. projects and the site now is for sale. The theatre and office building was to have cost $16,000,000.

An Event

"The Blue Angel" is on the way. That's extremely important news to an industry and all those in it who recognize the value of a significant picture.

The production, directed by Josef Von Sternberg for Ufa of Berlin and distributed here by Paramount, reaffirms what any discriminating observer must already know: that, in silent pictures or in talking pictures, Emil Jannings' acting genius is a heritage that belongs to the public regardless of what the adding machine may tell. We take this stand realizing full well that it may prove difficult to reconcile with the accepted standards of proper business administration because Jannings and pictures like "The Blue Angel" build the prestige, if not the profits, which this business must have if it is to permanently survive.

"The Blue Angel" does two things more. It does what "Morocco" didn't do. It establishes Marlene Dietrich of whom you will hear often from now on, as an actress of power, intelligence and lure. If audiences were intrigued by her work in "Morocco," they will be impressed beyond measure by her performance in "The Blue Angel." For it is in this production that the German player conveys an impressive idea of what she can do, if properly directed in vehicles adapted to her pronounced capabilities.

Thirdly, by his direction of this immensely powerful drama, Josef Von Sternberg demonstrates beyond argument what he has indicated from time to time: that his place is in the very forefront of directorial ranks. The man knows drama; we suspect he has a flair, perhaps suppressed, for intelligent comedy; he thinks, and therefore, directs in terms of motion pictures.

This writer's analysis of the dubious commercial appeal of "The Blue Angel" may be wrong. The picture has loads of sex and that may send it over the success line. He does know, however, that on the basis of sheer merit and as a piece of thoughtful, gripping, if tragic, entertainment, the production deserves to crash through with a smash.

Bankers Tell Industry Leaders to "Trim"

overhead on the U. A. lot. Behind the Warner-First National consolidation is seen the effort, induced by the bankers, to cut overhead in distribution with the extension of the plan to the studios considered an inevitable follow-up.

In the light of theatre grosses, which range from 10 to 30 per cent under last year, and the constant trepidation over losses of foreign markets, or diminished revenue at least, the industry today faces what well-posted observers declare to be one of the most important crises in its long history.

Signs Schertzinger

Hollywood—Radio Pictures has signed Victor Schertzinger on a long-term contract.

Pola to Confess As Mary Wins Prince's Heart

Chicago—Mary McCormic, Chicago Civic Opera star, and Prince Serge M'Divani, Pola Negri's ex, announced their engagement shortly after the arrival here of the prince. He was met at the train by Mary.

"Where's my daddy?" she inquired of a newspaper photographer at the La Salle St. station as the Century pulled in.

"Who's your daddy?" countered the photog.

The question was answered when Mary, at that moment, spotted M'Divani and greeted him with a kiss. That evening, in Mary's apartment in the Lake Shore Drive hotel, they announced they would wed soon.

M'Divani stated he was leaving for the Coast at once. Later attempts to reach Mary at her apartment were met with the announcement that she "would be out of town for a few days and had left no forwarding address."

Two days later she was on hand to sing in the opera, "Manon Lescaut."

At the same time the local papers printed dispatches from Paris stating that Pola is writing her memoirs under the title, "My Confessions." In it, she states, she is going to give the lowdown on all her loves.

Vot's in a Name? Lots of Expense

Chicago—Chicago exhibs with anything lengthier than two-syllable names are changing them by shrinking off a couple of syllables in an economy move new to local theatre business. Hard times are said to be responsible for the name amputations; the long family monickers costing too much to put into print in theatre ads and marquee bulbs.

Latest to switch signatures is Louis Ostrovsky. He's Louie Brown now, although his brother, Abe, is sticking to the original family cognomen. Same situation prevails in the Ortenstein family. Moses has become Moe Wells, but his brother Harry is still an Ortenstein.

Jolson to Return to Stage Shows in March

Al Jolson is to return to stage work in March. He is to appear in a musical comedy, to be presented by Charles B. Dillingham, Max Gordon and the Erlangers. Jolson now is on the Coast, where he is starting work in "Sons o' Guns."

Consolidation of Exchanges to Follow RKO Buy of Pathe; Lee Marcus at Head

Talkers at Dime

Kansas City—What's all this noise about high cost of theatre operation? The Lyric, a grind house near the downtown district here, advertises sound pictures and vaudeville for ten cents. And, according to reports, the place is making money.

Advertising and Hard Work Zukor Prosperity Plan

Hollywood—Work and work harder and advertise is Adolph Zukor's prescription for prosperity, he said in arriving here to consider the Paramount production budget. There will be no let-up in any line of his company's activities, Zukor said.

"Work and work harder, and advertise your work," he declared. "That is what we are going to do. Last year we spent $25,000,000. I have not the exact figures for 1931, but there will be a substantial increase in our budget for the coming year. At the same time, we expect to get more for our money."

M. P. Club Finances Need Aid; Membership Drive On

The finances of the Motion Picture Club, where New York's film moguls meet for luncheon, dinner and bridge, need overhauling if the club is to meet running expenses.

In the current issue of the "Motion Picture Club Bulletin" open declaration is made that more money is required to keep the wheels revolving. Present resident membership totals 384, which is 66 shy of the number required to make both ends meet. A drive is about to be instituted to shoot that total up to 450.

Erpi Admits "Changes" But Denies Office Slash

"The educational department of Electrical Research Products has made some revisions in its plan for promotion of non-theatrical talking pictures for industrial and educational uses. This has necessitated several small changes in operation of its sales force and in its district offices," stated W. E. Harkness, educational sales chief, in denying reports that his Erpi department would close branch offices throughout the country.

Budd Rogers Back From Exchange Trip

Budd Rogers, sales chief for Sono Art-World Wide, has returned from a seven weeks' trip to company exchanges, which took him as far south as Dallas.

$5,000,000 Involved in Deal; RKO Covets du Pont Contract and Pathe News

Consolidation of the RKO and Pathe exchanges, in a manner similar to the Warner-First National combination of sales forces, is one of the steps planned for Pathe, following acquisition of control by RKO. Studios will be operated separately.

Lee Marcus

Under the plan, Lee Marcus, vice-president in charge of distribution for RKO, would head the combined exchange system. RKO is said to have paid $5,000,000 in the Pathe buy.

Three big factors entered into the deal, RKO's desire to get the Pathe-du Pont contract and Pathe News and the other a desire to be relieved of its ten-year booking arrangement on Pathe product. With the duPonts and John J. Raskob interested in RKO, through their RCA holdings, it was felt that the Pathe-duPont raw stock partnership was too valuable to be lost.

Particularly is the raw stock important at the present time, with the duPont-Raskob combination heavily interested in Warners, which holdings they are increasing presumably with the idea of landing the raw stock business of these two firms for Pathe-duPont.

Courtland Smith, president of Trans-Lux, has a tie-in with RKO on the newsreel he is preparing to launch, but a combination of it and Pathe News is expected.

Clarke and Rice Elected Directors of Loew's, Inc.

Harley L. Clarke, president of Fox Film and Fox Theatres, and H. M. Rice of F. W. La Frentz & Co., were elected to the directorate of Loew's at the annual meeting of the board held Thursday. They replace Jacob L. Rubenstin and Albert M. Greenfield, the latter prominent Philadelphia realtor who handles the Warner interests in that city, both of whom had represented William Fox in the management affairs of the Loew organization.

Rice is understood to be identified with Clarke's financial sponsors.

It is generally understood that the Clarke-Rice appointments carry no special significance.

Local wit says the picture will have a Tiller girl routine built in.

Tabloid Brains

Chicago—Ashton Stevens tells one on the new movie critic on the tabloid who was offered a 12 x 14 photograph of a movie star by her enterprising press agent.

Kutinsky Plans 150 Theatres in N. E. Territory

Development of a chain of 150 New England theatres is planned by a syndicate being formed by Morris Kutinsky, veteran head of the former New Jersey Theatrical Enterprises, and executive of Fox Metropolitan Theatres. Kutinsky on Monday will open an office at Boston to direct the assembling of the circuit.

The theatres will be taken over on a lease basis, the organization planning to acquire all-size houses, depending on the individual proposition.

Waxman Contact with All Chains on W.B. Long Runs

A. P. Waxman, as one of an advertising counsel triumvirate of which Harry M. Warner and Sam E. Morris are the other members, will co-operate generally with all circuits in developing special campaigns on behalf of Warner-First National product.

Waxman's post is a new one and has been specially created for him. The Warner organization states that grosses of the same pictures in different cities of approximately identical population have shown wide range, the difference leading to the conclusion that the exploitation and advertising influenced the returns. It will be Waxman's job to delve into this situation and develop campaigns to eliminate that difference. In addition, he will continue to supervise the five Warner houses on Broadway.

Fox Off Screen Ads, Firm Managers Are Warned

While Paramount and Warners are developing advertising reels for use in their theatres, Fox has come out with a declaration against use of screen advertising. Managers have been instructed to make arrangements to eliminate any advertising now being used on the screen.

First Jones Film April 15

Children Flocking Back to Theatres as Studios Inject Kid Appeal into Pictures

Dough Shortage

Washington—Russian theatres are accepting food, clothing and other articles as payment for admission, state advices to the M. P. Section of the Department of Commerce. This is due to the shortage of currency in the Soviet Union.

Peace Reigns in Chi; Hess Leaves Arena for N. Y.

Chicago—A sigh of relief emerged from the Balaban & Katz advertising department here with the announcement that Jack Hess, western ad head for RKO, would be transferred to New York in the near future.

Hess, a recognized and colorful personality in theatre advertising circles, will assume charge of special advertising campaigns for RKO, working out of New York, and, in addition, will be in charge of advertising for the new RKO Mayfair Theatre there. He will assume his new post immediately his Chicago affairs have been wound up. His successor, George Brown, formerly with Midwesco, is already on the scene here. Brown was in charge of advertising for Grauman's Chinese and Egyptian and the Carthay Circle theatres, Los Angeles.

Hess's regime here was characterized by striking and original copy presentations and by frequent clashes with competitors in the advertising columns of the Chicago papers and other mediums. The bulk of these copy attacks and rebuttals were directed against Balaban & Katz theatres, and were a perpetuation of a spirited rivalry that was born when Hess was advertising manager for Marks Bros., first and only challengers of B. & K.'s hold on de luxe neigbhorhood trade here. Hess became associated with RKO as Chicago advertising manager when the Marks theatres were taken over by B. & K. Last Spring he was placed in charge of advertising and publicity for all RKO theatres from Chicago to the Pacific Coast.

Action Features, Serials and Comedies Boost Business, "News" Checkup Shows

Taking advantage of the many pictures on the market which have strong appeal for kids, exhibitors in all sections are cashing in on renewed child attendance, a national Motion Picture News check-up shows.

The problem of child attendance, which diminished alarmingly when talkers came into vogue, is being solved through proper pictures and showmanship.

Kiddie Clubs, Mickey Mouse clubs, cartoon contests in newspaper hook-ups, Joy Matinees, special inducements to children who excel in their studies and parades are among the ideas being employed to win back the child patronage which too-sophisticated talkers alienated last year.

One interesting and effective plan was used by the Tower, Chicago, where two giant checker games were played in the lobby. Marble blocks were painted into checkerboards and large checkers were constructed. For the girls a lobby doll contest was arranged.

Pictures of the action and outdoor type serials, and comedies are proving excellent stimulants to kiddie business, the check-up shows. Publix, Loew's, RKO, Fox and Warners have issued special instructions to their theatre managers to concentrate on getting in the children, pointing out that the children of today are the adult patrons of the future. Independents throughout the nation are making strong efforts to attract the children, spurred by the knowledge that producers are backing them up with suitable pictures for kids.

David Prince's Children Perish in Atlanta Fire

Atlanta—Helen, 11, and Edgar, 9, only children of David Prince, Paramount district manager, perished in fire of undetermined origin which destroyed the Prince home. The parents were away at the time, Prince out in the territory and Mrs. Prince visiting at the home of a friend. Both are at an Atlanta hospital suffering from shock.

Vincent Says No

Denial is made by Walter Vincent that political strategy figured in his amendment to include RCA in the M.P.T.O. resolution scoring Western Electric for allegedly charging excessive service charges.

He said this week that, contrary to published report, four of his theatres are RCA-equipped. Vincent's amendment caused some comment at the Philadelphia convention, speculation arising over the report that, while he included RCA along with Western Electric, he had no complaint against the former since all of his theatres had been wired by "Erpi".

An Idea

Hollywood—"I hadn't thought of it but it's not a bad idea," Harold B. Franklin said when asked about report that he would seek to line up former First National franchise holders in a national circuit. He goes East Friday after a conference on Thursday with Adolph Zukor.

Dembow's, Saal's Wings Clipped in Publix Shake-Up

Lopping off of duties of Sam Dembow, Jr., executive vice-president, and of William Saal, buying chief, and elevation of John Balaban as aide to Sam Katz, are provided for in decentralization program of Publix in continuing its retrenchment drive.

Under the new set-up, Dembow replaces Saal as general buyer for the circuit, with the latter made a division head. Too-expensive operation of the buying department is the asserted reason for the change.

The division plan is said to be the forerunner of other changes, one of which will be the turning back to independents of a number of houses, whose operation the company considers unfavorable. It also means "more human" operation of company houses, through maintaining closer contact.

The four division heads are: Saal, Art Mayer, Dave Chatkin and John Balaban and Milton H. Feld.

Saal Gets South, West

Saal has been placed in charge of the Saenger, Texas, Oklahoma, Arizona and possibly the Utah divisions; Chatkin has New England, Southeast, Carolinas, Tennessee, Virginia and Pennsylvania, with the possibility that New Jersey later will be added to this division. Mayer is in charge of the Iowa, Nebraska, Finkerstein & Ruben, Indiana and Illinois divisions. Balaban and Feld are to be in charge of all de luxe.

They will remain in charge of their present de luxe houses, and take over operation of eight others: Balaban has the Famous Canadian houses, the Chicago and Detroit houses, Metropolitan, Boston; Minnesota, Minneapolis, and Paramount New Haven. Feld has the Metropolitan, Houston; Palace, Dallas; Texas, San Antonio, and the Saenger, New Orleans.

Publix Theatres on the Coast, where Charles C. Perry is division chief, are to be brought into the Balaban-Feld set-up. Present division directors will function in their respective territories as district managers. There are to be no changes in operation so far as men in the field are concerned, it is stated.

Fox Set to Take Over Warner Theatres On Coast; Deal for Publix Is Pending

The Plot Thickens

Los Angeles—Further sewing up of the Coast territory, by virtue of the proposed Fox West Coast-Warner deal, is seen here as a strategic move to head off the proposed circuit of Harold B. Franklin and of members of United Artists.

Both Franklin and United Artists are planning a rival chain in Pacific Coast states in an offensive against Fox West Coast, and the Warner deal is expected to "make it tough" for both operators. Fox West Coast recently took over operation of the RKO house at San Diego.

1,281 Sound Sets Junked for W. E., Company Claims

Twelve hundred eighty-one theatres throughout the world have been forced to scrap unsatisfactory reproduction equipment, which has been replaced by Western Electric systems, the company states. There now are 7,170 world installations; 4,701 are in the United States.

Sixteen cities of the nation have 20 or more installations. The list is headed by New York City with 356. The other cities are as follows: Chicago, 166; Los Angeles, 86; Philadelphia, 82; Detroit, 76, Cleveland, 51; St. Louis, 46; San Francisco, 41; Baltimore, 40; Kansas City, 32; Cincinnati, 32; Milwaukee, 30; Seattle, 29; New Orleans, 26; Buffalo, 26; and Pittsburgh, 22.

There are 23 cities that have between 11 and 20 installations, totaling 341 Western Electric wired houses.

In 75 cities there are from five to 10 installations, the theatres involved numbering 75. Forty-eight cities have four each and include 192 theatres, while there are 113 cities with three installations. These total 339 theatres.

Britons See Stimulus For Films in Empire

London—Enthused by a message from the King, British producers staged their gala all-British film show here for delegates to the Imperial Conference. A packed house was on hand, with opinion prevailing that the event would stimulate British production throughout the Empire.

Kaplan's Union Plans 17th Birthday Party

Seventeenth anniversary of the organization of Local 306 of the M. P. Machine Operators' Union will be celebrated with a dinner and dance Jan. 17 in the grand ball room of the Hotel Astor.

A committee of arrangements consisting of the officers of the union with Sam Kaplan, president, acting as chairman ex-officio, has been appointed to arrange the event.

$150,000 Cost of United Artists' Chain Theatres

Hollywood—United Artists will spend an average of $150,000 on construction of its chain of 25 houses planned in its offensive against Fox West Coast Theatres, according to Joseph M. Schenck. Work on the first is to start soon at Santa Ana, he says. All major Fox West Coast strongholds will be invaded, except where there is strong competition to the circuit. Five houses are planned for Los Angeles.

Claude Neon Sales Increase During Year

Consolidated reports of the Associated Claude Neon Companies throughout the United States give sales for the first ten months of 1930 amounting to $14,326,062, as compared with $12,603,619 for the same period of 1929, an increase of 14 per cent.

Business during October continued steady, within ten per cent of the average for the first nine months of the year. October sales totaled $1,323,731.

U. S. Slang Doesn't Mean A Thing to British Fan

Hollywood—Sidney L. Bernstein, British showman, is here with a petition to producers to discontinue slang in talkers which may be unintelligible to British audiences. Something is to be done about the matter, it is stated.

A Hand

Jameson Thomas deserves real credit for his fine performance in "The Hate Ship," one of the best of the British films to be imported into America. He is a polished actor of the Adolph Menjou type, comparing favorably with that veteran actor. His work and the beauty and ability of Jean Colin stand out in the picture. They should find favor with American audiences.

Sewing Up of Pacific Slope Territory Is Objective; Paramount Denies

Los Angeles—Fox West Coast is to take over all Warner theatres on the Coast, except the Hollywood and Downtown. M. A. Silver, Warner western theatre chief, professes to know nothing about the proposed transfer of the theatres.

Under the plan, Fox West Coast will use 60 per cent of its playing time for Warner product. The new house at Huntington Park, just opened, is to be included in the arrangement.

Warners have nine theatres outside Los Angeles situated as follows: Four at Santa Barbara and one each at Huntington Park, San Pedro, Whittier, San Bernardino and Fresno. The firm also has the Forum here, which, it is understood, would be included in the deal.

Deal of Fox West Coast for operation of the Warner Coast theatres is part of the plan to sew up the Coast territory, which calls for inclusion of the Paramount houses at Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle and Portland.

Fox-Paramount Deal

Fox West Coast, as exclusively reported by Motion Picture News, and denied vigorously by Paramount, has a deal pending for operation of the Paramount theatres, which have been hard hit by the keen competitive battle waged by the two circuits in western key cities.

The showmanship battle which is reported to have put theatres of the two firms into the red in the various situations concerned has raged ever since Paramount resumed operation of the houses at the suggestion of the Department of Justice.

Paramount has turned over its theatres to Fox West Coast and was reported dissatisfied with their operation. Accordingly, the firm is reported to have "suggested" to the Department of Justice that the dominance of Fox West Coast on the Pacific Slope was more or less fraught with danger, so far as the anti-trust laws are concerned.

The government, after Paramount's reported "suggestion," fell in line with the idea, and asked Fox West Coast to turn back the theatres.

Kidnap Scare on Coast When Plots Are Learned

Hollywood—The film capital has been going through the throes of a kidnap scare, following uncovering of a plot by New York and Chicago gangsters to kidnap celebs or their children and hold them for ransom. Police guards were established at the home of Lottie Pickford and Harold Lloyd, when it was learned that plots against their children had been framed.

Albany—L. L. Mills, manager of First Graphic exchange, distributors of Big 4 product, who has been ill in a hospital here for the past two months with typhoid, returned to his office this week.

Iowa Allied Unit Head Resigns Post; Says Secretary Has "Gone Bolshevik"

Trouble Brewing in Ranks as Members Oppose Tactics Of L. P. Martin

Des Moines—Trouble is brewing in the ranks of Allied Theatres of Iowa, whose president, Tom Arthur of Mason City, has resigned. He says that Secretary L. P. Martin has "gone bolshevik" arranging the booking of stock companies and making tie-ups without presentation to the board.

Clifford Niles of Anamosa, Earl Neu of Carroll, John McClay of Dubuque, M. Puffer of Webster City, and Vice-President Fred Hagerman, all members of the board, are reported opposed to permitting Martin to "make the organization a business proposition," according to Arthur.

Martin, Arthur declares, serves without salary, but is asking for $300 per week at the new election of officers in January. The organization council meets next week, with fireworks being expected.

The Iowa association was organized in August and has a membership of 160. It is affiliated with Allied States Association, and was the first organization formed in the expansion program undertaken by the association.

Navy's Photophones to Top 300 Installations

Increase of the number of RCA Photophone installations in ships of the fleet and shore stations will exceed 300. This is about a 25 per cent over the original estimate. Training schools for operators will be installed at naval bases at Brooklyn, San Diego and Cavite, P. I.

Auer to Produce Films Of New Spanish Firm

Ernest Vilches Prod. is to make a series of Spanish talkers, starring Vilches, with John H. Auer, formerly of Universal and Columbia, in charge of production and Edward L. Klein handling distribution.

Jobyna Ralston Returns

John R. Freuler, president of Big 4, has signed Jobyna Ralston for the lead in "Sheer Luck," initial release of a series of eight melodramas which Bruce Mitchell will direct.

Miss Ralston, wife of Richard Arlen, retired from the screen after her marriage.

Andree Films Good

Rochester—After 33 years in which they had lain beside remains of the ill-fated Andree expedition, films taken by members of the party have been developed successfully, Eastman Kodak has been advised.

In French Talker

Hollywood—Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., is starring in "Un Aviateur Malgre Lu" (an Aviator in Spite of Himself), French talker being made by First National.

Are They So Far Apart?

Hollywood—The wheeze about all's fair in love and war ought to be amended to include exhibition. The day of the break between the United Artists and Fox West Coast Theatres, Joe Schenck planned to preview "The Bat Whispers." The picture, being on wide film, required special projection. So to the enemy Schenck turned. Moreover, he got his house: the Fox Wilshire.

Schenck may be sour on Fox and maybe he won't sell the circuit U. A. pictures, but he accepted the competition's hospitality for that one night, anyway.

Witwer Widow Victor in Lloyd Plot Theft Case

Los Angeles—While Harold Lloyd was absolved of any personal blame in the theft of the plot, he and his film company must make an accounting to Mrs. Sadie Witwer, widow of the late H. C. Witwer, on profits from Lloyd's picture, "The Freshman." The decision by Federal Judge Cosgrave may mean the turnover of several million dollars to Mrs. Witwer. Lloyd plans to appeal.

The action, originally brought for $3,000,000, was filed by Witwer, who died in 1929. Trial was begun May 20, 1930, and continued until July 12, when the court took the case under advisement. Witwer contended that "The Freshman" was a steal on his magazine story, "Emancipation of Rodney," filming of which, he said, he discussed with Lloyd executives before start of "The Freshman."

Earnings of the film are estimated at $4,000,000. Witwer left an estate of $16,500. Witwer's case was presented by Harold Fendler, son of Mrs. Grace Fendler, who for 12 years sought to claim part of the proceeds of "The Bird of Paradise" on a charge of plagiarism.

New Publix Units Supplant Arthur

Toronto—Jack Arthur's name is out of the billing for the Imperial, Toronto, and the Capitol, Montreal, as the producer of the stage presentations at the two houses, complete Publix units replacing the former stage features. For the new policy at the Toronto Imperial Helen Kane was featured as the guest artist. Miss Kane this week is at the Montreal Capitol. Jack Arthur has local supervision of the imported units.

Following the dropping of local talent from the Toronto Imperial, the ballet of 12 dancers has been booked for the Publix circuit in the United States, it is announced.

Arthur's stage shows formerly played the Uptown, Toronto, and the Uptown has been starving since it was placed on a second-run diet two months ago, when the "meat" was transferred to the downtown Imperial.

F. P.-Fox Kept From Building By 10-Year Pact

Toronto—Neither Famous Players nor Fox has started construction of their big picture houses on Yonge Street, Toronto, because of a 10-year agreement not to build a new house in the downtown section of the city, it is stated. Both have acquired large sites for theatres, but the agreement has six more years to run. The situation is one of watchful waiting, however, and a misstep on the part of one would lead to the immediate start on a theatre by the other company, it is said. Famous Players even has its blueprints ready, but, in the meantime, Fox features are being regularly booked into the local Paramount houses.

The situation hinges to some extent upon Famous Players' use of the Uptown, which is owned by Loew's, but is being operated on a rental basis.

Slam on 3 Press Agents Irks AMPA Members

Harry Reichenbach handed out a few brickbats and bouquets in a prepared speech read Thursday at the AMPA by President Michael L. Simmons. Mentioning by name the press agents he considers best, with a number of the more prominent advertising and publicity men eliminated and three that he considered the worst, he caused a mixed feeling of surprise and resentment at what many later declared they considered uncalled for aspersions.

Paramount came in for some of his brickbats and Reichenbach said he wouldn't work for that company due to its politics. He admitted he was pretty good himself, in handling publicity for the Clarke-Fox Film group in the Bill Fox jam.

De Mille Recovering

Hollywood—Cecil B. De Mille is at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital following an emergency operation for acute appendicitis. He is expected to be released in about a week. The operation, surgeons said, was performed in the nick of time, as a delay of even an hour probably would have been fatal, for the appendix would have broken.

W. E. Ready to Spring New Recording System; Says It Cuts Surface Noises

Starring Timber

It is difficult to believe that Richard Cromwell does his first picture work in the title role of "Tol'able David." He gives a natural, smooth and well-rounded performance worthy of a veteran in the part that propelled Dick Barthelmess into fame.

Cromwell is emphatically starring timber if Columbia exercises extreme care in selection of his future vehicles. If that is done, the youngster cannot miss.

Rapid Chicago Consolidation of Warners and F. N.

Chicago—Consolidation of the Warner and First National distributing organizations brought about a sweeping reorganization of the sales forces of both companies locally. Five men are assigned to new positions while the services of four others were dispensed with. The changes, already effective, follow:

Norman Moray, formerly Warner branch manager, named Vitaphone national sales manager, left for New York in mid-week to assume that post. Carl Leserman, formerly First National branch manager, made branch manager of the combined sales organizations. Tom Gilliam, formerly First National sales manager, named sales manager of the new organization. Earl Silverman, formerly Vitaphone sales manager here, also made a sales manager under the new line-up. Though unconfirmed at the time of this writing, it was also reported that Harry Neil, now Warner branch manager at Indianapolis, will be returned to Chicago, his old sales ground, as a city sales manager.

The following salesmen's resignations have been received: R. E. Bradford and Jack Schwartz, First National, and Tom Reidy and Harry Goldberg, Warners.

Additions to the booking staff of the local exchange are contemplated, as the combined Warner and First National line-up of 70 pictures is now on a par with Paramount's, heretofore by far the largest local distributing organization.

The consolidation order was effective here immediately. By Monday morning the entire First National sales offices had been combined with the Warner offices and the unit selling was under way.

Musgrove with Union

Sydney, Australia—Jack Musgrove has been appointed manager of the theatrical division of Union Theatres. The company is planning to expand its circuit, coincident with return of vaudeville to a number of houses throughout the commonwealth.

Available to All Licensed Companies—Secret Is in Specially Built "Mike"

A new recording system which claims to eliminate surface noises has been developed by Western Electric and will shortly be made available to all of its licensed companies.

The secret rests in the mechanism of a new, highly sensitive microphone which, by its construction, is reported to have developed the faculty of picking up voices only in and around its immediate area, thereby eliminating, or at any rate reducing, extraneous sound.

This refinement to the present recording system has had its first test in a new picture which Paramount is making with Ruth Chatterton. The results are reported to be unusually good.

Western Electric feels that the improvement will do much to sweeten the now sour attitude of many picturegoers toward talkies. It has long been recognized in the industry that bad sound has turned away money from the box-office, and that any mechanical improvements in recording and reproduction would go far toward maintaining and increasing the level of theatre business throughout the country.

Both F. N, and Warner Studios Open in 30 Days

Hollywood—Production of First National and Warner pictures will be resumed in 30 days, Jack L. Warner said Thursday. Executive and cutting departments will be moved to the Burbank plant, with films to be made at the Warner plant as before. Darryl Zanuck, Hal Wallis and Graham Baker remain as co-executives under Warner as previously. William Koenig will be studio manager at both plants.

Seventy talkers, including 50 features, shorts and foreign versions, are to be made. He declined to discuss the reported theatre tie-up with Fox West Coast, saying all theatre arrangements are handled in the East.

Uncertainty

Hollywood—Considerable uncertainty exists at the Warner and First National studios with many fearing headcutting when the two plants are merged.

Ousted, Starts Chain

Minneapolis—Harold D. Finkelstein, former general manager of the Finkelstein & Ruben circuit, who was ousted a few months ago by Publix, plans a chain of small town theatres. He has acquired H. N. Davies' three houses at Spencer, Ia., one of the choice towns of that state. Finkelstein is the son of M. L. Finkelstein, who was senior member of the theatre firm.

in cash. Current liabilities were $21,242,108, including $2,000,000 of bank loans.

Warners further stated that, as of November 8, 1930, the company had current assets totaling in excess of $41,000,000 as compared with total current liabilities of less than $19,000,000. Cash on hand was approximately $5,230,000, while bank loans, which will be repaid from current operations within the next 60 days, were $3,000,000.

"Due consideration," he said, "should be given to the fact that in September, 1930, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., received in excess of $14,000,000 from the sale of common stock to stockholders and during the year acquired various properties through the issuance of funded indebtedness and common stock. While the per share earnings are figured on the total shares now outstanding, the full benefits from these acquisitions were not enjoyed during the past fiscal year.

"Since the first of September operations again show a substantial profit, and we are looking forward to a year of profitable operation. Number of stockholders has been increased from 11,157 on December 2, 1929, to 26,990 on November 7, 1930."

Pettijohn's Bitter Attack on Censors At Ohio M.P.T.O. Aimed at Horwitz?

Urges Repeal of Censorship in State; M. P. T. O. Wages War Over Contract

Columbus—While he mentioned no names, there was little doubt in the minds of the 125 exhibitors, exchangemen and civic and state officials, attending the Ohio M. P. T. O. convention here, that C. C. Pettijohn's remarks were directed at Will Horwitz, Texas unit president and censorship advocate, in two addresses here scathingly denouncing censorship. A highlight of the sessions was the heckling of M. A. Lightman, M. P. T. O. A., president, in connection with the 5-5-5 meetings.

With 44 states preparing adverse legislation against the industry, the individual who by his acts from now until June "contributes to the downfall or damage of this industry" is a menace and should be thrown out of the industry, Pettijohn told the convention.

If the proposed legislation is enacted, Pettijohn said, a "lot of people in all branches of the industry will be put out of business." Trade problems, he said, "fade into insignificance compared to these legislative problems, and only with the united front of the industry can they be fought."

Pettijohn also sounded the battle cry for the repeal of censorship, urging Ohio to take advantage of the wedge in censorship made by "The Big House." The Ohio censor laws require that a picture shall be either accepted or rejected by the board upon submission. In the case of "The Big House," the picture was neither accepted nor rejected, but was held indefinitely for further consideration. Pressure was brought to bear with the cooperation of the public press to secure passage of this picture, which played every other state in the union. Pettijohn's words on censorship were so enthusiastically received that President Jones asked him to take censorship as his topic for a speech at the banquet.

Renews Attack

"The most detestable thing I know," Pettijohn told the 250 banquet guests, "is the fact that motion pictures, the cleanest form of human expression today, are laboring under censorship in five states.

"Maybe censorship was all right 20 years ago when legislators didn't know what this business would develop into.

"Today the screen is as clean as the front pages of the newspapers of this country, and nobody would stand for interference with the freedom of the press.

"Censorship isn't a political question, but a question of whether two or three people can pass on what 7,000,000 people should see.

Child Protection Farcial

"Censorship of pictures as a protection for children is a farce. Children's morals should be in the hands of parents. Parental care has been shoved into the discard and in its place today is the school teacher, the policeman and censorship.

"Censorship of talkies is a hundred times

Speakers at Ohio Convention

C. C. Pettijohn

M. A. Lightman

R. F. Woodhull

On the Sidelines at Columbus

COLUMBUS—M-G-M stole the convention with an extra edition of the Columbus Citizen. The entire front page of the newspaper was devoted to convention news, sidelights and photographs. Five hundred of 'em were printed and were distributed to the conventioneers by regular newsboys who crashed the afternoon session, startling those present with their cries of "All About the Big Picture Merger." Charlie Deardourff and Bill Bishop of the M-G-M exploitation department put this one over—and put it over big.

To Fred Desberg, general manager of Loew's Ohio theatres, life is just one convention after the other. He had barely recovered from the Philly gathering before it was time to get into the midst of the Columbus meeting.

George Erdmann, business manager of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, made a real speech. It consisted of at least ten words. Last year he made the shortest speech on record. It was confined to one word, "Greetings."

James Re-elected

Columbus—William James was elected unanimously to serve his seventh term as president of the Ohio exhibitor unit at the annual convention. Others unanimously elected are: J. J. Harwood, Cleveland, vice-president-at-large; Ike Libson, Cincinnati; Henry Bieberson, Jr., Delaware; Ed Hiehle, Newark, vice-presidents; Caldwell H. Brown, Zanesville, treasurer; Martin G. Smith, Toledo, secretary; and the following trustees: John A. Schwalm, Hamilton; J. A. Holt, Cincinnati; Henry Greenberger, Cleveland; Frank J. Ruth, Piqua; Fred Desberg, Cleveland, and Burns O'Sullivan, Columbus.

J. J. Harwood, vice-president of the M. P. T. O. of Ohio, was right there with his answer to Mayor James J. Thomas' hearty welcome.

Martin P. Smith of Toledo, the first president of the Ohio exhibitor organization, didn't say much, but he did a lot of work.

Judge Frank Ruth, who made his debut as an exhibitor with the recent purchase of a theatre in Picqua, bore up bravely as chairman of the nominating committee.

Andy Hettesheimer of Cincinnati presided over the nomination committee.

John Schwalm of Hamilton and J. E. Watson of Columbus were given the task of battling with the auditing committee.

Pete Woodhull said he came to the convention just to see his old friends and because he's got the convention habit.

Charley Pettijohn, Oscar Hanson and Pete Woodhull shared a compartment coming over to Columbus. There weren't any more stories to tell when they got through.

Mrs. Georgia Moffett, secretary of the Cleveland Film Board of Trade, and Mrs. Native Suckow, assistant, were here in all their glory, and they shed plenty of it.

M. Lightman showed 'em how a gentleman keeps his temper when he'd much rather roll up his sleeves and finish what the other fellow started.

Bill Skirboll of Cleveland was here. He participated in all the festivities, but committed himself to nothing at all.

Pete Wood, secretary of the M. P. T. O. A., was tireless in his efforts to make everybody happy. And did he succeed? We'll tell the world.

Zoning Plan Sunk as Illinois Showmen Sign Up for Product Under Old Terms

Gets "City Lights"

Hollywood—Charles Chaplin plans to play his synchronized picture, "City Lights," in Publix key city houses, but to the highest bidders elsewhere. The picture is to have its premiere here New Year's Eve. Long term deal between United Artists and Publix keys will send the picture to the Publix houses.

Spurt in United Amusements' Net Shown in Report

Montreal—Evidence of real prosperity is found in the annual financial statement, just issued, of United Amusements, Ltd., operating 20 theatres in the Province of Quebec. The report, which is for the fiscal year ended Aug. 30, shows an increase in net earnings from $3.41 to $3.75 per common share and an increase in the surplus account from $610,828 to $724,200.

Net profit of $296,452 compares with $270,440, which was registered one year ago. Property account was increased by $278,666 to a total of $3,111,224. It is pointed out that current assets do not include investments in other enterprises shown at $422,500. The company now has outstanding a total of 74,137 shares.

United Amusements, Ltd., which is owned principally by residents of Montreal, operates 17 theatres in Montreal, two in Lachine and one in Sherbrooke. The company is now building another theatre in Montreal. Ernest A. Cousins of Montreal is president and George Nicholas Ganetakos is managing director.

Kane Sailing

Robert T. Kane is booked on the Ile de France, which sails Friday night for Paris. He is returning to Paramount's studio at Joinville, where the company is producing multi-lingual talkers.

It is reported, but unconfirmed, that production will be trimmed, but published yarns that the project will be entirely abandoned are understood to be without foundation.

Plans Hollywood Operetta

Hollywood—Oscar Straus is planning an operetta based on Hollywood. He has completed scores for three pictures, "A Lady of Morals," "Daybreak" and "The Danube Waltz," and is going back to Vienna for premiere of one of his new operettas.

Thomas in Para. Pictorial

Lowell Thomas is featured in the current issue of the Paramount Pictorial, recently-inaugurated screen magazine. Thomas speaks nightly over the radio in the Literary Digest Hour.

Independents' Booking Body And Exchanges Satisfied With Situation

Chicago—An Illinois zoning plan, approved by both distributors and exhibitors, definitely became a lost hope for another season at least with the completion of independent buying here this week. The Illinois independents' booking organization, and independent exhibitors not members of that booking unit, have their contracts for the year's product all signed and on file. Nothing, now, could induce them to approve a new plan of release and protection which would nullify those contracts and usurp them with new ones less advantageous, Motion Picture News was told.

"The fact that our buying is done and our contracts on record is indication enough that the deals were satisfactory to the exchanges," said a spokesman for the independent booking organization. "Release and protection in all these contracts is exactly as it was last year and as it has been for many years before. We're satisfied with things as they are and, apparently, so are the exchanges.

"If the independents approve a new zoning plan now," he continued, "it means that we agree to scrap the contracts we have just made and with which we are entirely satisfied in favor of something which we have every reason to believe would be less advantageous to ourselves. How likely do you imagine that is?"

Independent approval of the new zoning plan would scrap the existing contracts, as these contracts carry a clause which specifies that the provisions of any new zoning plan approved by all the distributors and all the exhibitors in the territory will immediately prevail over the existing provisions for release and protection.

Starts Second Comedy

Mack Stark placed the second of his Simple Simon comedies featuring Louis Simon in production Thursday at the Ideal Studios in Hudson Heights, N. J., with direction in the hands of Mort Blumenstock. "Radio Madness" is the working title of the new two-reeler, which is an original story by William A. Grew, adapted by Grew and Rube Welch.

In a Jam

Los Angeles—Paying alimony to two wives is something of a problem in these days of unemployment, particularly when one has only $100 and no job, take it from Luther Reed. The director outlined his tough predicament in petitioning the court to reduce the alimony of his ex-wife, Naomi Childers, to $50 monthly, and of Jocelyn Lee, another ex-, to $75 monthly. In addition, he has been cited for contempt in action brought by Mrs. Reed No. 1, and must answer the charge Nov. 30.

Real Charity

Free noonday meals for the unemployed is the charitable contribution being made in the present situation by Julius Levine at his Brass Rail, popular eating place of film men at Seventh Ave., near 50th St. The initial day, more than 1,500 jobless partook of Levine's hospitality.

Independents in Chicago Escape Score Charges

Chicago—Illinois independents' booking organization completed its buying this week after arranging a rather novel price agreement with all exchanges. Aaron Saperstein, buyer for the unit, met with representatives of the exchanges and, after computing prices on individual films, offered a flat rate per picture, based on an average cost price, for the entire product of every company with whom he was negotiating. An average uniform figure for each picture was agreed upon.

This buying method permitted the independents to contract for Warner and First National product without specifically paying a score charge, which the independents had declared emphatically they would not do, and which Warners, just as emphatically, had declared either they would or else go without Warner and First National product. Thus the resolves and dignity of both parties were preserved.

The independents are satisfied with the uniform flat rate per picture which they will pay, and nothing is said about a score charge in their contracts. On the other hand, Warners and First National are just as satisfied with the price they received, which would indicate that they consider it ample to cover score charges, even though they are not specified in the contracts.

Robbins Returns

J. J. Robbins, head of Robbins Music Corp., affiliated with M-G-M, returns today from Europe where he negotiated deals with Keith-Prowse & Co., Ltd., Alberti and Francis Day Co., these firms to represent the Robbins interests in England, Germany and France, respectively. Julian Abeles, attorney for the music corporation accompanied Robbins. Robbins announced that conditions abroad "were satisfactory, with American music still a great favorite of Europeans, due in a large measure to the success of the talker."

New Representative for Big 4

Milwaukee—William Aschmann, former Pathe branch manager, has been appointed Big 4 sales representative out of the Capitol Pictures at Omaha.

Pettijohn Bitter Attack on Censors Aimed at Horwitz?

more serious than censorship of silent pictures. Don't bother with politics. Take the issue directly to the people," was Pettijohn's advice, and he got a round of applause that proved his dart had shot a bullseye.

Other speakers were: Senator Larry Collister, Harry Busey, managing editor of the Columbus Citizen; "Pete" Woodhull, J. J. Harwood, vice-president of the M. P. T. O. of Ohio and president of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association; Joseph N. Ackerman, senator; Thad Brown, formerly secretary of the state of Ohio and now chief counsel for the Federal Radio Commission; Oscar Hanson, general sales manager for Tiffany Productions; M. A. Lightman, president of the M. P. T. O. A.; Fitch Cooper, of Elwood, Ind.; Col. W. S. Butterfield of Michigan, and Governor Myers Y. Cooper.

Business builders are all ready to hand out advice on what to do after you have garnered your first million. But it remained for Col. W. S. Butterfield to pass out a plan for getting a share of that first million.

"Always tell the truth," said Butterfield, "I have always practiced the principle of telling the public the truth in the show business. Give the public the best entertainment that you can, be one of the public in community spirit, and the result will spell success."

Says Television Far Off

Thad Brown scattered a little cheer when he asserted that, in his opinion, television is a long way off. The Federal Radio Commission, Brown stated, is not issuing any licenses for television operation except for experimental purposes. That statement should put at rest all fear of competition of television in the immediate future.

"Pete" Woodhull, who doesn't represent anybody or anything, answered the convention call like an old fire horse. The convention habit is too strong with him to be broken summarily. He got to his feet at this opening session just to tell the constituents to keep the organization going.

M. A. Lightman, president of the M. P. T. O. A., at the opening meeting explained the new uniform contract and labeled it a "plus contract." The exhibitors, he pointed out, have everything they had in the old contract, and more besides.

The calm waters became ruffled at this point. Exhibitors from the floor questioned the sincerity of the 5-5-5 group which drafted the contract, calling it a 10-5 group, instead of a 5-5-5 group. The challenging exhibitors claimed that the five affiliated representatives were actually producer representatives, and this upset the 5-5-5 balance. Lightman explained how the 5-5-5 committee actually functioned, closing the heated discussion that threatened to become embarrassing by saying, "I think that every man owes to himself the earnest effort to make that for which he stands the best in the world. If he is an exhibitor, he should be the best possible exhibitor. If he is a bootblack, he should be the best bootblack. Every one should serve to the best of his ability."

Seek Censors

Houston—Here in the home town of Will Horwitz, president of the Texas unit, whose campaign for state censorship has drawn fire throughout the industry, the National Women's Temperance Union Convention, adopted a resolution asking Congress to establish a national board of censorship.

Operators' Union Bucks I. A. T. S. E., Convention Told

Columbus—With 79 men working in the Ohio territory, Motion Picture Operators' Union of America is organizing to buck the I. A. T. S. E. in bringing down the cost of projection, F. A. Rinehart, of Cincinnati, told the Ohio unit's convention here. Rinehart conducts an operators' school at Cincinnati, graduate members of which are eligible to membership in the new union, which is independent and not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Rinehart says his union will supply union operators at a wage scale ranging from $35 to $55 weekly, working with one man in the booth, except where the resident operator requires an assistant. The latter is paid 50 per cent of the scale of the former. He declares that the new union is an international and is licensed to give out local charters anywhere.

Building commissioners, says Rinehart, have stated they will give graduates from the trade school an equal chance with I. A. T. S. E. members in securing licenses. One stipulation is required. No contract can exist between the theatre owner and the I. A. T. S. E. at the time of engaging the services of a member of the new union.

Hanson the Host

Columbus—Oscar (Hospitality) Hanson, Tiffany sales chieftain, was hosting all over the place. He staged a 11 A. M. preview of "Ex-Flame" and a Chimp comedy—and had the telephone operators call all the exhibs at 9:30 A. M. to tell 'em not to miss it. Bellboys followed up to make sure the boys (it was the morning after the banquet) were up. As a result he had a full house.

Urges Zoning

Columbus—Zoning of territories is better done in the field, Pettijohn told the Ohio Convention. The only general rule "is to do what's fair and right." Pettijohn recommended that a zoning and protection plan be in readiness for next year's selling and maintained to handle house situations. that continuing zoning committees be He conceded the reference accorded big buying power, but recommended fairness in protection limits with admission price as barometer after first runs. Unlike last year's abrupt ending, the convention members remained until the end of the meeting.

Directors Given Power to Solve Contract Problem

Columbus—Ohio's position on the proposed new standard contract will be determined by its board of directors, the convention having given them full power to act on it. The contract and arbitration were under fire at Wednesday's stormy session.

Ohio theatre owners are delegated to go to the assistance of the army of unemployed by reason of the resolution presented by Judge Frank Ruth of Picqua, chairman of the resolutions committee, pledging members to co-operate with agencies in their respective communities by giving special performances, proceeds of which shall be donated to the work of alleviating distress.

A resolution was also introduced and passed by the body wherein the organization goes on record as favoring the discontinuance of censorship in Ohio and that the officers be authorized to do all things necessary to convey the purpose of this resolution into effect.

The proper celebration of the bi-cenntennial of George Washington, with a fitting historical picture of his life, was another resolution introduced and passed. Score charges were condemned in the resolution, stating that the organization present companies furnishing this service with a request for a reduction in service charges which will make the charges more nearly equitable as between smaller and larger theatres.

Resolutions of thanks were adopted in behalf of Harry Busey, managing editor of the Columbus Citizen, for the unusual amount of space devoted to the convention; to George Bishop and C. C. Deardourff for their novel publicity stunts; to all newspapers and trade journals; to Gov. Myers Y. Cooper, Mayor J. J. Thomas, C. C. Pettijohn, A. C. LaRue of Theatre Underwriters, Joseph Ackerman, L. G. Collister, Oscar Hanson, M. A. Lightman, R. F. Woodhull, W. C. Butterfield, Thad Brown, William James and Pete Wood.

Pratt in Western Erpi Post; Ray W. E. Director

Los Angeles—George C. Pratt, new vice-president of Electrical Research Products, is to have charge of the western division with headquarters here. He also will assume new duties as special counsel for the company and for Western Electric.

Paramount Erred with Outdoor Ad Suggestion

Suggestion that theatre managers divert part of their newspaper advertising to outdoor advertising, as contained in a recent press sheet, was made in error, A. M. Botsford, director of advertising and publicity for Publix, has advised Editor & Publisher. The suggestion does not represent the policy of Paramount Publix in any way, he declares, stating instead that the company for a long time has contended "and still contends that the use of paid advertising space is definitely of the most important value to the selling of pictures."

• Stop Us If We're Wrong •

WARREN (United Artists) Nolan tips us off that Jean Harlow is just 19. . . . The blonde star of "Hell's Angels" has returned to the Coast, where she is to appear with Wallace Beery in "The Secret Six," which George Hill will direct for M-G-M. . . . Joe Merrick, Tiffany's district manager in the Middle West, ambled to the Main Stem for confabs with Oscar Hanson.

Add fun in the studios. . . . The M-G-M P. A. sends us this: Marjorie Rambeau, famous stage star, appearing with Greta Garbo in "Inspiration" at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, is an ardent practical joker. She took a raw oyster, slipped it into the hand of John Miljan during a scene, and chortled inwardly when he had to go through the scene holding the clammy bivalve and still trying to look nonchalant and hide it from the camera. . . . Nize baby!

Tactful

Chicago—Madeline Woods, divisional publicity director for Great States Theatres, has sounded a warning against use in any advertising of the lines, "No children admitted" or "Children barred by censors." Instead, Miss Woods points out, a box should be used in ads reading:

"This picture will neither be understood nor appreciated by children, and therefore is not recommended for their entertainment."

Sees Action Trend

Kansas City—Less talking and more real acting constitutes the trend in talking pictures. Adolph Zukor told newspaper reporters here. Zukor made a brief stop on his way from New York to the coast.

Pictures will be made more on the order of the old silent films and dialogue will be used only as a means of keeping out subtitles, Zukor said. There will be just enough talking to save the space subtitles would take, he believes. A similar belief was expressed by Sidney R. Kent at the Philadelphia convention.

WIDIES is the term being used by National Carbon Co. to describe wide-screen fillums. . . . Ralph Morrow, veteran southern exec, is in Noo Yawk. . . . Boy, oh boy, what a surprise picture Warners has in "The Doorway to Hell." . . . Slipped into the New York Strand without any fuss, and it's been standing 'em up ever since. . . . ## Springs and Weights

On the Western Front—Publicity is publicity these days.

Someone at Radio has taken the time to figure out that Lowell Sherman is supported by two and a half tons of actors in "The Queen's Husband." And that doesn't include the 2,000 extras, but only the 25 featured and bit players.

Incidentally, the title has just been officially changed from "The Queen's Husband" to "The Royal Bed."

'Doorway to Hell' Hot Stuff; 2nd Week, $41,000

It was all Warners in figuring out business along the Main Drag, with "The Doorway to Hell" continuing its sensational run at the Strand. The film, now in its third week, has ridden high over the business slump to chalk up a record for the house. Getting $41,322 in its second week, the film proved a real surprise and its unheralded strength created plenty of talk.

Amos 'n' Andy wobbled badly at the Mayfair on their second week, going under $30,000, a drop of more than $20,000 for the new RKO house. The film now is playing the Cameo and is not setting the world on fire.

The week was marked by the reopening of the Central as an independent first-run outlet. The picture current is "Today," initial release of Imperial Pictures. The Cohan has been slipping considerably, although the current film seems to be holding up much better than its predecessors. "Hell's Angels" is due to fold soon at the Criterion and Gaiety.

"Feet First" to $9,000 High at Oklahoma City

Oklahoma City—Taking the crowds on Harold Lloyd's past reputation and well executed exploitation, the Publix Criterion grossed $9,000 on "Feet First." # 'Big Trail' Held Second Week at Fox in Detroit

"The Big Trail," Fox epic of covered wagon days, was held for a second week at the Fox, and continued to drag the crowds inside. Special tie-ups and exploitation helped boost business close to the gross hung up the first week.

George Bancroft, always a favorite in Detroit, and the second anniversary show at the Fisher drew the crowds to those two houses all week. "Africa Speaks," showing at the RKO Downtown, threatened to set close on the trail of Amos 'n' Andy, and while the gross was of such a nature as to permit a hold-over, the new policy of one-week stands will close the show Thursday night.

To Fete Joe Leo

Joe Lee, Fox New Jersey manager, is to be guest of the New Jersey exhibitor association at a dinner Dec. 4 at the Astor, New York. Thornton Kelly, Dave Snapper, Moe Kridel, Gianoco Sicardi and Leon Rosenblatt.

These Hard Times

There is at least one organization in the business that makes it compulsory for each salesman to report weekly, outlining in complete detail what his sales are, where he didn't close, why, etc.

The other day a salesman covering North Carolina reported this:

"Called on So-and-So on Monday. No sale. His office reported he was out for the day. Fox hunting."

"East Is West," "Extravagance" 13 Grand at D. M.

Des Moines—The Teachers' Convention stimulated theatre business for the last half of the week, but the first half was also good, aided by the Armistice holiday. Des Moines is maintaining a very good rating, retaining the increase registered in the last month. Harold Lloyd's picture at the Des Moines pulled in business with an audience of every age. But it didn't get it all, for "East is West" did business above average. This play is popular here because Fay Bainter, who played here in stock, made it so. This picture played at the Orpheum for the last four days with "Extravagance" on for the first half and going well.

"The Indians Are Coming" is proving a popular draw at the Strand where this serial showed four days with Ruth Roland in "Reno." It rated with "Fast and Loose" for the last half also running high. The popular prices at the Strand seem suited to many family purses.

The picture at the Paramount, "A Devil with Women," was not so strong but the stage shows are popular. "Madam Satan," on for the last half and for the Armistice midnight show, was rated as something new in entertainment with Reginald Denny getting a big hand personally.

"Virtuous Sin" Is Good for $44,000 To Top at Boston

Boston—With no roadshows in town for the first time in several months, Boston's theatres enjoyed an increased business over the previous week and continued to maintain the high average set so far this year.

The Metropolitan, with "The Virtuous Sin" and a special holiday midnight show, topped the week with a gross of $44,000. "The Cat Creeps" at the Keith Memorial, also with a midnight extra, was good for $23,500, which was a drop from the gross of "Check and Double Check" for the previous two weeks but averaged well up in the theatre's regular business.

"Remote Control" at Loew's State was good for $22,500 while "The Last of the Lone Wolf" did $22,000 at the Keith Albee. The Olympia's all-comedy program, headed by "Feet First," went over for $17,000.

12 New Members for Cincy Allied Association

Cincinnati—Twelve new members pledged their allegiance to the Allied cause at the second meeting of the newly-organized Allied Theatre Owners of Southern Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia, recently held in the association's offices in Film Row.

Exhibitors were present from various parts of Ohio and the contiguous states which the unit will serve, but owing to lack of time nothing but general routine business was transacted. Another meeting will be called in about two weeks at which it is expected permanent officers will be elected.

Temporary officers now serving are R. Earl Myers, Chillicothe, O., president; Elmer Shard, Cincinnati, secretary and treasurer, and Fred M. Strief, business manager.

"Widow" $22,000, "War Nurse" 23 Grand at Philly

Philadelphia—The Earle rose to its best week in the last three months with a cool $22,000 with "The Widow from Chicago." Business on the whole was spotty, though the Boyd grabbed a neat $23,000 for "War Nurse" and the Stanton collected $14,000 for "Way for a Sailor," proving that John Gilbert is still a good draw in this town.

The Mastbaum slid off its usual average with $38,000 for "College Lovers," though "The Life of the Party" took a good second week $17,000 at the Stanley. The Karlton took its lowest gross in six months with $3,000 for "For the Love o' Lil."

"Africa Speaks" scraped a rather poor $10,000 for its second week. It is now in its last week, with "Hell's Angels" scheduled to follow Friday night. Keith's held up to percentage with "Her Wedding Night," but at the present time is doing excellent business with Harold Lloyd's "Feet First," putting in special midnight showings every night except Sunday. ## Habit

Tampa—George B. Peck, manager of the Park, always has a good story on tap. This week he has a good one on a manager of a chain theatre.

It seems the instructions of the circuit to the manager were to "square everything with passes." If the uniforms needed cleaning, hunt up a cleaner who had a yen for films and make a trade. So, in his daily rounds for this and that the manager was constantly dipping into his pocket for the passes, which he handed out everywhere instead of cash.

Then came Sunday and the manager's wife took him to church. A little tired, he was peacefully dozing when the contribution box was passed around. His wife gave him a nudge and pointed to the basket. The manager, half awake, got the idea pronto and reached in his pocket, drew forth and deposited a pair of passes in the basket.

"Renegades" and "Cat Creeps" Get High in Portland

Portland, Ore.—Admirers of Warner Baxter welcomed him back to the Fox Broadway and brought many new ones with them to see "Renegades." In fact, the word-of-mouth advertising was sufficient to pile up a slight lead over each previous day. ### Can It Be?

Earl Carroll is somewhat of an optimist, if the publicizing of his new theatre may be taken as a criterion. The new Carroll theatre at 50th and Seventh Ave. is billed as a 3,000 seater which will cost $4,500,000, or just $1,500 per seat, which is heavy dough even in box car figures.

John Gilbert as Tar Gets $23,000 In Balto. Run

Baltimore—Patronage at the first-run houses was fairly good and at some shot up to high peaks, despite the continuous rain which set in Wednesday night and continued through Saturday.

Loew's Century topped the list with the high gross of $23,000 with "Way for a Sailor," all agreeing that John Gilbert makes a strong comeback in this to regain his former top position, with Henry Santry and his band on the same bill.

"Dough Boys," starring Buster Keaton, proved a knock-out at Loew's Valencia with the gross reported at $4,500. Audiences enjoyed this comedy very much.

'Whoopee,' 'Carlo' High in Ottawa; Chevalier Weak

Ottawa—"Whoopee" at the Centre was the sensation of the year when, with the help of extra performances, it grossed no less than $8,000 in a 1,200-seat house at 50c top, the highest rating of any local house in years. The Armistice holiday helped to shove up the receipts, but the weather was mild and the hockey season opening was a counter-attraction. "Monte Carlo" was a big hit at B. F. Keith's with $4,200 for three days, particularly after the Governor-General and Viscountess Willingdon attended a performance. The surprise of the year was that Maurice Chevalier in "Playboy of Paris" proved disappointing at the Regent box-office, despite the big French population here. The gross was $4,100. Other attractions were just so-so.

Film in Legit Theatre

Dayton, O.—It is now definitely settled that the Victory, the city's only legitimate house, which has been dark for several months, will be converted into a full-fledged picture theatre. Sound equipment is being installed, and the house is expected to open late this month, showing First National pictures.

Nuts in "Assorted Nuts"

Hollywood—The next Wheeler-Woolsey comedy for Radio has drawn the title of "Assorted Nuts." Eddie Cline is again scheduled to direct and Dorothy Lee play the feminine lead.

"Africa Speaks" Gets $15,000 in Toronto; Is Held

Toronto—The one picture to go over the top in Toronto was "Africa Speaks," which drew the crowds to the Tivoli to the tune of $15,000 and was held over by Manager James Lynch. The second week of "Whoopee" at Loew's, the first to be held over by Manager Bernstein in 17 years, held up nicely, earning $16,000. The Imperial was not up to the mark with "Scotland Yard," while the Uptown continued its peaceful slump with "The Sea God" and "Blushing Brides." Something is going to happen to the Uptown before long, it is intimated by Manager Knevels, and it will be a stage show policy. Big football and hockey crowds, with mild weather outdoors, put a dent in the show business generally. Incidentally, this was the last week for Jack Arthur's stage presentations at the Imperial, complete Publix units having been booked.

Cleveland Hands $18,000 Each to 'Widow' and 'Wife'

Cleveland—Gloria Swanson in "What a Widow" opened to good business at the Allen and held up well all through the week. "Billy, the Kid," with Realife production, had a better-than-average second week at the Stillman. "Old English" delighted the minority fans who appreciate fine character portrayal, but it was not a mass picture. "The Office Wife" made a good showing at the Hippodrome, and the other attractions made a fair average for the week. Weather was propitious, but unemployment continues in such numbers as to seriously handicap all theatres.

Estimated takings:

'Feet First' Steps Ahead in Montreal To $16,000 Pace

Montreal—The contrasting influences of mild weather and the opening of the professional hockey season combined to rap the theatre business on the nose in Montreal. Despite the observance of Armistice Day as a public holiday, only one theatre scored perfect points on the week's business, this being the Palace with "Feet First," which ran up $16,000. Holiday prices helped to boost receipts, but vacant seats were noticeable almost everywhere. The second week of "What a Widow" at the Princess held up to $12,000, representing 90%, but it might have been more, in view of the holiday. An indication of the business trend was noted in the lack of hold-overs.

Critics Boost "Up the River" to $36,200 in Chi

Chicago—"Skimmed-milk" business ran into its second week in the Loop with only a couple of houses getting a taste of the cream.

In the more or less active group was the Roosevelt, which got $36,200 (124%) from "Up the River" in its first ten days. Swell reviews steered the crowds in and business held fairly steadily. Palace had another big week, getting $26,650. Though "Big Money," the feature, caught nice reviews, the bulk of the "above-average" business is credited to the Marx Brothers, who headed the stage show. "Lottery Bride" got a nice $24,200 at the United Artists, and "The Squealer" finished its second week at the Woods with $15,600, less than two grand off from the first week. Oriental also did well in getting $37,400 with "Her Wedding Night." The little spots, Castle and Punch & Judy, were also strong.

"Big Trail" fell to $24,600 in its third week at McVickers and was replaced by "Feet First." "Check and Double Check" finished three weeks at the State-Lake with $21,200, a little more than a ten grand drop from the second week, and less than half of the first week's gross. Fox's Monroe Theatre, running the first double feature program to be offered by a Loop theatre, had its worst week in a history that includes plenty of bad ones.

Estimated takings:

"A DEVIL WITH WOMEN" (Fox)

CASTLE—(300), 60c, 7 days. Other attractions: News. "THOSE THREE FRENCH GIRLS" (M-G-M)
CHICAGO—(3,940), 35c-85c, 7 days. Other attractions: Stage show, orchestra, comedy, news, novelty short. Picture did only fair business in spite of Cosmopolitan's lavish display ads in Hearst papers. Gross: $44,650. Rating: 93%.

Gross is excellent and may have been held down a little by the fact that only three Marxes showed—Groucho having been hospitalled by appendicitis on bis arrival in town. Gross: $26,650. Rating: 111%.

"JUNO AND THE PAYCOCK" (British Int.)
PUNCH & JUDY—(390), 50c-75c, 1st week. Other attractions: News, comedy. Rave reviews and price cut bringing house's scale to Loop level sent them swarming in here. Gross: $5,400. Rating: 142% (new rating on basis of new price scale).

"Check" Grosses $92,000 in Three Weeks in Detroit

Detroit — After three record-breaking weeks, during which time house records were hung up which will no doubt stand for many moons to come, Amos 'n' Andy checked and double-checked out of the RKO Downtown, total gross for the three weeks being about $92,000.

Over at the Fox "The Big Trail" began to hang up new records also, with 65,000, more or less, passing the gates over the week-end of the opening. The piece will be held for a second week to permit a few more thousands of Detroit school children to see the show.

John Gilbert's "Way for a Sailor" flopped, though big things were expected of it. "Lottery Bride" at the United Artists was held over for an eighth day, to permit "Hell's Angels" to open on Wednesday. The rest of the houses just about held their own.

"Billy, the Kid" Gets Only $1,500 At Minneapolis

Minneapolis—M-G-M's "Billy, the Kid" proved pretty much of a brodie at the Lyric, where it was good for only $1,500 for the seven days. The Hennepin-Orpheum apparently has settled down, after its Amos 'n' Andy box-office spree, with that film grabbing off $2,152 at the Seventh Street, where it went after its two weeks at the Hennepin. Exhibitors here are reported peeved over the second run of the film at the Seventh Street, the neighborhoods figuring they should have been given the break on the picture.

"Feet First" Sets Providence Pace, Grossing $15,000

Providence—The frisky Harold Lloyd in his high and dizzy stunts in "Feet First" did the week's big business at the Paramount, bringing in the crowds to the tune of $15,000, which is oke by one and all. All of the downtown houses were helped by the Armistice holiday, although only half of little Rhody's population was on the loaf.

Loew's, playing "Remote Control" for only six days, clicked into $18,000, which is fair enough, and the Albee with "The Silver Horde" was strong at $11,000. The Majestic, with "Scarlet Pages," caught around $10,500, and the RKO Victory was a bit off with "Today," catching around $7,500.

Opinions on Pictures

The Blue Angel

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

BERLIN enthused over it; London forgot some of its reserve and endorsed it, according to reports. What American audiences will do about "The Blue Angel" is one of those futures that nobody can figure in advance.

The picture, produced by Josef Von Sternberg for Ufa in Germany and acquired by Paramount for American distribution, ranks easily among the finest talking pictures made. By every argument that can be advanced, this picture rates a huge success. Yet, the opposite might easily be true.

Discriminating picture-goers will leave the theatre completely sold that here is an outstanding picture, a dramatic triumph. But when you realize the masses may vote against it, that possibility is enough to make one groan over the futility of creating artistic efforts that won't return a profit on their investment.

"The Blue Angel" touches high spots in direction and histrionics that can be applied to less than a handful of the hundreds of talking pictures produced to date. Its story has power and an emotional kick that are unmistakable. Von Sternberg's handling can be described with only one adjective: superb. Emil Jannings has never done any finer work and Marlene Dietrich, who gets off to a left-footed start in this market in the inadequate "Morocco," demonstrates by this one picture that she is a star against whom few now in pictures can compete.

The story in brief is this:

Jannings appears as Immanuel Rath, professor of literature and English in a German high school. Miss Dietrich is Lola Lola, river-front cabaret singer with a checkered past. They meet when Jannings, discovering his students have been frequenting the dive at night, goes to the cafe with a request that Lola leave his boys alone. He finds himself irresistibly attracted. Lola plays with him and the professor gradually succumbs to her charms. Impending tragedy enters at this point for the first time. The students have been watching through a raised trapdoor and it is obvious that they plan trouble for him.

Jannings finally spends the night with the singer, although the situation is handled with great finesse. The student body, now openly in revolt, refuses to obey his commands in the schoolroom and raise enough din to bring in the head of the school, who naturally asks for Jannings's resignation. He gets it; Jannings asks Lola to marry him, as you would expect a man of his background and inherently fine instincts to do, she consents and, by her act, seals Jannings' doom.

Against his will but dominated by the woman and the love he holds for her, he falls to the level of the theatrical troupe of which he is now a part. He even sells suggestive postcards of his wife and eventually becomes a clown assistant to the magician. Here and there you get signs of revolt, but always Jannings returns. When it is proposed that the company return to The Blue Angel cafe in the town where Jannings once had caste, he refuses, only to accede later.

The climax—a powerful, gripping and intensely moving sequence—comes when Jannings has to appear before the cafe mob in his role as clown and to crow as the magician draws eggs from his nose. He goes mad, rushes from the stage and all but succeeds in strangling Dietrich until finally torn loose. When they release him from a straight-jacket, you see the man, broken in mind and health, tottering out of the cafe to his old place in the schoolroom where death mercifully relieves him of his suffering.

The shades of characterization which Jannings imparts to his role as he breaks under the weight of unfortunate circumstances are as magnificent as they are varied. The man's work is amazing and a sterling tribute to his abilities as an actor of understanding and intelligence. While Jannings dominates the picture, Miss Dietrich likewise does superb work. She indicates in the "The Blue Angel" that she is an actress of wide range and power. She is not only beautiful, but is endowed with a resonant speaking and an effective singing voice. Important, too, is the definiteness with which her personality registers.

The third factor which makes this picture what it is is the appreciative and always telling direction of Von Sternberg. He had a story and two ace players, but the rest he provided and take it from this reviewer, he supplied plenty.

Be careful in selection of shorts in order not to spoil the mood of the feature. If contrast is deemed desirable, try cartoons.

The Lottery Bride

(United Artists)

Illegitimate Opera

(Reviewed by S. A. Kone)

BOX-OFFICES have found in the past that Jeanette MacDonald, surrounded by satin bed clothes, is not irresistible. With "Lottery Bride" they will find that Jeanette in Eskimo Easter suits is just another little girl in another little picture. For the star, in this, is asked to do nothing very important or difficult, and she does it just as any other girl of ordinary talent might have.

"Lottery Bride" is set in Hollywood's conception of what Oslo, Norway, is in the springtime, and what the Arctic Circle is the rest of the year. A plain little story of what mistakenly disillusioned girl and boy lovers will do to spite one another in the frozen north is unwound in a manner that entertains reasonably and surprises not at all. These modest adventures are told partly in song and partly in dialogue, but always with a musical accompaniment that would be excellent even in a more stirring picture. This lovely orchestral background, together with the occasional pleasant resonance of Robert Chisholm's singing voice, comes near to making of the production an illegitimate opera of Norway in English.

The story is that of Jenny and Chris (Jeanette MacDonald and John Garrick), youthful lovers. A lover's misunderstanding sends Chris into the mining town in the far north where an older brother is foreman, and where miners spend all their time in a cozy cafe, drinking and buying lottery tickets on prospective brides recruited by an Oslo agent. In these surroundings Chris seeks to forget the girl whom he believes untrue. The girl, equally disturbed, seeks a similar forgetfulness by offering herself to the lottery agent. Her ticket is purchased in the mining camp saloon by Chris, who, without knowing the identity of his prize, turns the winning ticket over to his older brother, Olaf.

Jenny arrives in the far north, meets her future husband and his brother, her former sweetheart. She takes up her innocent though unconventional residence with them, pending the marriage. Soon after there arrives in the town one Alberto, commander of an Italian dirigible about to make a flight over the Pole. Alberto's attentions to Jennie back in Oslo were the cause of the young lovers' misunderstanding.

When Alberto is ready to resume the polar flight, Chris, realizing that his brother is now genuinely in love with Jennie, joins the crew of the dirigible in order to get himself out of the way of their marriage. The bag is forced down, and Olaf sets out across the ice with a dog team to lead them back to safety. Jennie, back at the mining town, becomes impatient and organizes a crew to man an ice-breaker that steams its way among the icebergs without hesitation, until it has pulled up alongside the particular cake of ice on which Chris, Olaf and Alberto have lain themselves down to die. Alberto having explained away the cause for Chris's distrust of Jennie, and Olaf having renounced her in favor of his younger brother, the way for the reunion on shipboard is made clear.

Performances are uniformly undistinguished. Instances of overacting, accompanied by gestures and lines reminiscent of high school dramatics, are numerous. Singing voices, with the exception of Chisholm's, are only average. Unconvincing action and negligent direction emphasize the story's numerous improbabilities. A comic relief is sought by Joe E. Brown and Zasu Pitts—but never quite attained. A single drinking sequence featuring Brown and Harry Gribbon draws laughs. The fade-out on the ice floes is a color sequence with picturesqueness to recommend it.

The Hate Ship

(British International)

Good Program

(Reviewed by Robert Hage)

STEADY improvement is being evinced by this company in turning out British films for the American market. This one has a good story and is capably acted, its chief fault being that it is too drawn out and lacks comedy relief. Jameson Thomas' work as the villain is outstanding. He is an excellent actor and puts over the part in fine fashion. Jean Colin is a pretty and accomplished heroine and should find favor with American audiences.

All of the action takes place aboard a pleasure yacht, whose owner is trying to force a young heir to invest money in one of his schemes. The young man is mysteriously shot and his friend, who has come aboard as his valet, solves the mystery, discovering the shot is part of a plan arranged by a Russian aboard, who is seeking to revenge the murder of his father, with the yacht owner his intended victim.

This should hold up well in the weekly changes. It has smoothness and charm and is well directed, save for the padding.

Needs comedy relief.

Opinions on Pictures

Under Suspicion

(Fox)

Way, Way Off

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

YOUR contract may compel you to give this a ride, but slip it in and take the rap. "Under Suspicion" is way under par.

The audience may find some amusement in the title. That is, after it lamps the picture, but the proceedings are really sad.

The story has to deal with the veteran formula of the Northwest Mounted Police, but in this instance J. Harold Murray, the stalwart-as-usual hero, doesn't get his man. They made it that much different at least. It seems that Murray, or Smith in the picture, had a war record that wasn't so good. He had shielded a younger brother for the honor of the family and when he joins the mounted in the Canadian Northwest where, the picture would have you believe, civilization and modern conveniences prevail at their best, he finds the past creeping up on him via a jealous and very musical comedy heavy played by George Brent. Murray meets Lois Moran, of course, and the romance develops. That's a startling idea for you.

Brent tries to do Murray dirt by securing his war record from Whitehall and almost succeeds, but Lois' love saves him from disgrace. That's about all there is to it except a pretty good sequence where Murray rescues Miss Moran's father by aeroplane from a dangerous forest fire.

Of suspense, there is none. The acting is extremely indifferent and the songs about on a parity with the rest of the production ingredients. If your public goes for photographic highlights, however, recommend "Under Suspicion." The picture was shot at Jasper National Park in Canada and is beautiful scenically.

On two occasions and for no good reason, Murray, who has a fine singing voice, breaks out into warbles, although his songs have nothing particularly to do with the story development. Through a lot of sequences, a musical accompaniment is supposed to carry along the action, yet it is difficult to figure the why and the wherefore.

The impression is consequently gathered that "Under Suspicion" was produced on the Fox lot before the sales department had time to tell the Coast that musicals had fallen from public grace.

Muster all of the short subject strength possible. The picture needs wholesale support.

The Utah Kid

(Tiffany)

Just Fair

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

THEY'VE invested this with some good production values, but in spite of that fact it registers as only a fair western for the double feature and daily change houses. Rex Lease isn't so hot as a cowboy, which hurts the picture's appeal. Dorothy Sebastian, appearing opposite, hasn't a great deal to do, but she is a pretty heroine and her name probably will help the draw. Walter Miller, Mary Carr, Tom Santschi and Lafe McKee are other members of the cast.

The story has to do with a young outlaw (Rex Lease) who marries a girl to prevent her from being harmed by members of his band. The girl had become lost and wandered into the gang's hands. The girl is engaged to the sheriff, who is hot on the heels of the outlaw. After a battle at the gang's headquarters, Lease determines to go straight. He rescues the sheriff after a gun battle, and when the head of the outlaw band comes for him, they shoot it out. The girl then decides that Lease is the man of her choice.

There is some good action and fine photography in this, but the story misses. Direction is O. K.

Short Subjects

Strange As It Seems

(Universal)

Excellent

THE third in the John Hix series of oddities in all parts of the world, and packed with human interest from start to finish. Photographed in Multicolor and accompanied by a synchronized lecture, the units include a 70-year-old hermit who has created a veritable paradise for himself in the Hollywood hills and makes daily visits to Hollywood in abbreviated garb; a pet animal cemetery in Los Angeles, with a huge mausoleum, an angleworm farm which ships bait to all parts of the country, a Japanese "mentalist" who sticks large needles through himself and his pupils, and some effective views showing how, early in the war, French aviators brought down enemy planes by hurling bricks at the propellors. Fine for all audiences. Running time, 10 minutes.

The Love Punch

Stale

CHARLIE MURRAY and George Sidney again appear as business associates who are constantly quarreling, and who get tangled up with "Poison Ivy," a female whose hobby in life is to marry a man and poison him during the wedding feast. Sidney marries her while she's in jail in order to cash in on a $50,000 legacy—and from that point on the story becomes so insane and the direction so flabby that groans are in order. Directed by Nat Ross. Running time, 19 minutes.

Audio Review No. 45

(Pathe)

Excellent

EXCEPTIONAL scenic views, enhanced by color tones, make this short outstanding. Especially beautiful are the shots of Elk Lake in the Adirondacks and of the Land of Canaan, with several shots of the River Jordan and the stretch of country over which Moses led his people out of bondage. Then we are taken into the forests in the State of Washington, where big men cut down big trees and tree trunks, 9 feet apart, are used as railroad tracks. The issue closes with a tour of a radio studio while Walter Damrosch is conducting one of his national musical appreciation hours. Milton J. Cross is shown announcing the feature, whereupon the musician conducts his program. Running time, 11 minutes.

Golf Nuts

Fine

PAUL TERRY, through draughtsmanship and expert synchronizing of music and sound effects combined with plenty of genuine laughs, succeeds again in scoring a fine cartoon release in the Educational-Terrytoon subject, "Golf Nuts." Broad and humorous treatment of the miniature golf fad, with the play taking place through a course composed of the most ridiculous obstacles and ending up with a fast and furious chase of a miniature auto by a motor cycle squad combine to make the subject one of great appeal to all classes of audiences, kids especially. Running time, 6 minutes.

Tito Schipa

(Paramount)

Misses

ALTHOUGH Schipa's singing is very good, this doesn't rate high as a short, because straight operatic numbers with their inevitable close-ups get boresome and tedious. This has two selections, one the familiar air from the opera "Martha," and the other an original. A little stagecraft in the presentation of this would have helped considerably. Running time, 9 minutes.

Japan in Cherry Blossom Time

(FitzPatrick)

Diverting Short

JAMES A. FITZPATRICK in another of these highly entertaining travelogues. He takes the spectator on a trip to the picturesque spots in old Japan. There are the beautiful cherry trees, which never bear fruit, the Buddhist idol and the sacred temples. It's a well done film which should please generally. Running time, 9 minutes.

Travelin' Alone

(Paramount)

Good Short

ROBERT BRUCE tries something different from his usual line in this subject, which presents a group of hoboes reclining near a water tower. They get off a number of familiar songs, including "Come On, You Seven" and "Frankie and Johnny." It's billed as a scenic novelty, but it's a straight song number, well done and entertaining. Running time, 10 minutes.

Felix Fernandino

Poor

THIS is a pretty weak short, which fails to click. Only the work of a couple of acrobats saves it. An orchestra number sags considerably. Running time, 9 minutes.

Mardi Gras

(Universal)

Good

UNIVERSAL is constantly adding to the production values of this series of sound "Leather Pushers," and they maintain their general interest although the story follows a general formula, a little romance leading up to a prize fight. But inasmuch as Nora Lane and Kane Richmond supply the romance, and the fights generally are wows, there is no lapse in entertainment. New Orleans during Mardi Gras is the setting for No. 5, and there is lots of color, action and suspense in the short. All types of fans should go for this series. Directed by Al Kelley. Running time, 20 minutes.

Par and Double Par

(Pathe)

Okay

THIS Grantland Rice Sportlight is unique in that, after showing Bobby Jones do his stuff for a few feet, it introduces Frank Crumit of radio and stage fame, who sings "Donald, the Dub," at times playing a uke accompaniment and then demonstrating what a terrible dub he recally is at golf. Running time, 9 min.

In Again, Out Again

(Paramount)

Carries Laughs

DEDICATED probably to all the girls who walk home from automobile rides, "In Again, Out Again" with Aileen Cook and Lillian Bond comes through the production mill as a pretty good short.

The gags are funny and the pace generally fast-moving. Story values nil, but after all this isn't the type of short that is supposed to have any. Directed by Howard Bretherton. Running time, 10 mins.

The Mystic Isles

(Pathe)

Good

TOM TERRISS, the Vagabond Director, visits Java and although he doesn't find enough adventure this time to make his voice quivver with excitement, the subject is decidedly interesting throughout. Much of the footage is devoted to showing Japanese native women making Batik and men erecting temples of worship, the entire facade being of carved figures. Running time, 10 minutes.

Up to Mars

(Paramount)

Good, But Misses

DAVE FLEISCHER didn't do as well in this Talkartoon as the subject matter would have permitted. His Mars figures are amusing, but only in a mild way when the opportunity to make them really fantastic was there awaiting execution. However, this will get by nicely. Running time, 7 mins.

One Nutty Night

(Pathe)

Nutty

THIS is such a crack-brained attempt at comedy that your audiences will probably rush for the doors holding their noses. In all departments it is an insult to theatre-goers. Running time, 19 minutes.

Business Off at Small Theatres in Iowa

Des Moines—Business for the smaller houses in Iowa is not so good. Of the 50 houses which generally open for the winter after being closed for the summer there is not one case of a reopening this fall. Towns of 400 to 500 which can not afford sound have closed picture houses. Two houses which closed last week for lack of business are the Rialto at Scranton and the Star at Waucoma.

There are ten or 12 theatres now operating with silent pictures in Iowa, including the Colonial at Cedar Rapids, the Wilton at Wilton Junction, the Star at Davenport, the Grand at Grand River, the Amuzu at Wheat River, the Majestic at Harvey.

Richey Warns

Detroit—Exhibitors of the state have been warned by H. M. Richey against an allegedly fake prize campaign sponsored by E. G. Tumer and a Mr. and Mrs. Brown, under the name of the Illinois Advertising Agency of Quincy, Ill. The scheme provides for the sale of coupons from $2 to $10 redeemable at the box-office for a book of admission tickets.

H. M. Richey

Operators of the campaign, it is said, have a habit of leaving town under cover of darkness, after the sale of tickets is completed. Theatre owners have been asked to notify the state exhibitor unit if they are approached by the firm.

Warners Close Deal for Seven Coston Theatres

Chicago—Warner deal for the Coston-owned theatres has been closed, adding seven houses to the circuit's Chicago holdings for a total of twenty. Concurrently with this deal, James Coston, former owner of the theatres and director of the Warner theatre interests here since last Spring, was given a six-year contract as general manager of Warner's Illinois and Indiana theatres, about thirty-five in all.

The theatres involved in the deal are Coston's Buckingham, Frolic, Julian, Metropolitan, Oakland Square and Shakespeare. The Hamilton Theatre, owned by Jack Rose, former film buyer for the Coston Booking Circuit, now associated with the Warner Theatre office here, was also included in the deal.

Coston was instrumental in closing the deal for the former Federal Theatres here last Spring, which was Warner's first theatre acquisition in Chicago, exclusive of the downtown Orpheum. The deal for Coston's own houses has been pending since that time; disagreement over terms having held back its closing. It is understood a cash settlement was made for the Coston houses.

New Warner House at West Chester Opened

West Chester, Pa.—Warner Brothers' new $500,000 theatre, the Warner, was opened here with much gusto and Davy Lee on hand to greet the crowds that thronged to the new house to see its grandeur.

Amateur Broadcast to Aid Amos 'n' Andy

Wilmington—There will be two "Amos 'n' Andy" programs each night during the week of Nov. 23 over the radio for Wilmington fans. One will be the real program, and the other will be an amateur, and by Nov. 28, when the Amos 'n' Andy film is put on at the Aldine, Stanley-Warner theatre here, Albert Blumberg, manager of the theatre, figures that he'll have the people worked up as much over the radio contest to determine which pair of amateurs is the best, as they are over the financial schemes of the real comedians. Blumberg is cooperating with WDEL, a local short wave length station, to put over the stunt. A radio will be given the winning pair of amateurs.

Theatre Burns at Chilton, Wis.

Chilton, Wis.—The Auditorium of this city was destroyed by fire with a loss estimated at $35,000. John Steenport, owner of the theatre, his wife and four children, who were asleep in their apartment on the second floor of the theatre building, escaped to safety. Talking equipment was installed about a year ago in the building. Steenport recently dropped $5,000 of the $20,000 for which the building was insured.

Pioneer Showman Dies

Milwaukee—John Wagner, pioneer south side picture theatre owner, died here at the age of 51. Wagner is credited with starting the second motion picture house on Milwaukee's south side about 25 years ago. He also owned theatres at Hartland and Waukesha and at the time of his death was owner of the Garden, South Milwaukee. He is survived by his widow and four children.

Sell Football Ducats

Detroit — Allied Theatres of Michigan sold tickets in 100 Detroit theatres for the charity football game played at Ann Arbor Saturday by Chicago and Michigan. The campaign was conducted by H. M. Richey, general manager of the exhibitor unit. Tickets were sold for $3 each.

Correction

In listing newspapers in which the "Check and Double Check" advertisements appeared, the circulation of the Philadelphia Public Ledger was wrongly stated as 129,807. The Amos 'n' Andy double truck was published in the morning Ledger, which quotes a circulation of 134,265, and in the evening Ledger, with a quoted circulation of 206,155.

Studios Abused Music, Color, Critic Asserts

Syracuse—Possible trend toward silents, in the wake of "City Lights," imminence of wide film, uncertainty over color and musical films and the need to win back kid patronage are discussed at length editorially by Chester B. Bahn, veteran dramatic critic, writing in the Syracuse Herald.

"That part of "show business" best known today as the cinema finds itself facing many an important problem these fall days," he writes.

"In Hollywood's executive offices and in the ornate suites of Manhattan where the film industry's money kings hold court, regal brows are creased with wrinkles as they ponder such questions as these:

"Is the musical picture, commonly referred to as the musicinema or filmusical, destined to return to favor by an upward swing of the pendulum of film fashions?

"Will the color picture find a new lease on life in the success enjoyed by such productions as Paul Whiteman's 'King of Jazz' and Eddie Cantor's 'Whoopee'?

"Will Charles Spencer Chaplin's recently completed 'City Lights' so charm picture-goers with its silence that the present supremacy of the talkies will be menaced?

"Can the children, lost to the national box office since the dialog picture transformed the motion picture from family to adult entertainment, be won back by such talkies as 'Tom Sawyer' in which Jackie Coogan returns to the screen?

"Will wide-film, the present advent of which was forecast by The Herald last May in the face of the industry's professions that it was at least a year or two in the future, sweep the theater field?

"For the producer or the business executive of filmdom who can answer any one of these questions correctly, there awaits a sizeable fortune, to be paid by not alone the fans of these United States but of the world.

"In the sphere of theater operation, with which that of production today is closely allied, there are still other problems equally perplexing. But they are problems in which the public has a lesser interest—matters which immediately affect the picture-goer's entertainment to a smaller degree although they may, and do, touch his purse. The question of chain operator versus independent exhibitor, the subjects of film rentals and score charges, and the speculative topic of television may be said to dominate such a secondary group.

Cites Unsound Color, Music Use

"The recent, one might almost say present, disfavor of both musical and color pictures may be attributed principally to an unwise and unsound use of both melody and natural hues by frantic producers. There is something to be said on behalf of the producers, of course. Having been caught napping when Warners pioneered with dialog pictures, the producers proceeded on the good, old theory that it is better to act first and ask questions afterwards when the filmusical and the all-color picture were introduced.

"'Hire us some song writers and some composers. Ship at once,' was the almost literal order telegraphed from Hollywood to New York. New York did just that. Tin Pan Alley was depopulated over night as song writers and composers joined in the new California gold rush.

"The musician, unfortunately for Hollywood, is a creative artist. He can not grind out tunes and ditties on schedule; he requires inspiration and time. Even a genius has his limitations, and in the many called to Hollywood there were all too few geniuses.

"You may find the answer in the really few 'hit' melodies contained in the scores of musicinemas. Four songs alone deserve that rating—'Sonny Boy,' 'Ramona,' 'Jeannine, I Dream of Lilac Time' and 'The Wedding of the Painted Dolls.' Contributing, too, to the flop of the musicinema was the fact that little judgment was employed in selecting many stories for musical treatment. Illusion has been defined as the first principle of the cinema; it was forgotten when stars warbled theme songs here, there and everywhere, and with full orchestral setting. In the cinema, the musical number must be plausibly introduced; dragged in by the heels, it demotes the cinema from the level of a distinct art to a mere and weak imitation of a stage musical comedy. There may be exceptions, but this dictum is generally applicable.

Hollywood Has Learned Lesson

"A frankly personal opinion is to the effect that the musicinema will return to favor when its score and its lyrics are the creations of other than second, third and fourth-raters; when music is an integral part of the theme, not a grafted afterthought, and when the numbers are entrusted to trained voices.

"There are signs that Hollywood has learned its lesson; musicinemas on the way bear the names of Oscar Straus, Jerome Kern, Sigmund Romberg, Rudolph Friml, De Sylva, Brown and Henderson. And there is further guaranty in the casting of Lawrence Tibbett and Grace Moore, although Metropolitan Opera 'names' are not essential.

"Color was abused as sadly as music in Hollywood studios. Perfected color, and it is well on its way, plus its intelligent use, and there need be no producer fear that all-color pictures will not be welcomed by fandom.

"Mr. Chaplin's experiment with silence on the screen is most interesting. The comedian, past-master of the pantomimic art, is gambling $1,500,000 that silent pictures may be made as popular as talkies. 'City Lights,' it may be noted, was placed in production after Al Jolson's 'The Jazz Singer' had set a new fashion. For some months, Chaplin studied the problem; his decision was to continue in his own way.

"Whatever fandom may decide, it would seem that these two statements may be accepted without challenge. First, there are many stories best told in pantomine. Secondly, few actors have Mr. Chaplin's eloquence in that medium.

"In the matter of children's pictures, this: The rising generation, largely denied the spoken drama, needs the cinema; the cinema, in turn, urgently requires juvenile patronage. It cannot stand both the loss of the youngsters' dimes and quarters and the revenue from the foreign market; the latter has been materially reduced by the talkies' rise."

A la Mode

Times have changed. Throwing a custard pie in a girl's face cost a Chicago man a $100 fine recently. In the old days it would have meant a movie contract.—*N. Y. Post.

Remake Question Still Puzzling Studio Chiefs

Hollywood—"It isn't what you make but how you make it," is the belief of many motion picture producers who, in scanning the list of talker remakes, find that there are plenty of fine pictures made from former successes if they are remade in the right manner. While some studios are doing away with the making of pictures which have already been done in silent forms, other studios are buying the rights to former silents and plan on making them in talker style.

Among the pictures which have been remade are "Anna Christie," "The Bad Man," "Common Clay," "Disraeli," "Raffles," "Sally," "The Virginian," "The Border Legion," "Vagabond King," "The Spoilers," "Honey," "Three Faces East," "Seven Keys to Baldpate," "Last of the Duanes," "Manslaughter," "The Aviator," and others, all of which have made money at the box-office.

"Romance," "Moby Dick," "Outside the Law," "Sea Wolf," "Those Who Dance" and "The Storm" have not grossed any great amount, but are out of the red. However, some remakes such as "Back Pay," "Cameo Kirby," "Eyes of the World," "Great Divide," "Her Private Life," "Peacock Alley," "Lilies of the Field" and others have not measured up to the standards of good pictures and have suffered accordingly.

Most producers are going ahead with plans for remaking the older pictures which had good story material and with changes here and there, plus good direction and casts, it is thought they will bring in plenty of dough to the box-office.

The producers believe that any good picture will register at the box-office regardless of whether or not it has been made previously.

Publix Bolsters Texas Chain with Stage Shows

San Antonio, Tex.—In an effort to bolster up its programs, Publix is now sending New York stage shows to its leading theatres in the four key cities of Texas—San Antonio, Dallas, Houston and Fort Worth. Since the resumption of stage shows last soring they have been sent to Texas from New Orleans.

The first of the New York stage shows to play in this city was "Moonbeams," a Boris Petroff production. Jimmy Ellard was guest master of ceremonies and Eddie Lambert was the featured star of "Moonbeams."

The New York shows are also designed to offset the RKO vaude-film shows.

SOME day there will be, in all probability, a mighty rising of the movie fans against Western pictures. One of the blessings—the only one perhaps—of the early experimental talking pictures was the temporary elimination of Westerns from the production schedules. Before the technical experts had brought sound recording to the point where it could be made to select and pick up the right noises from the great out-of-doors and disregard those that were alien, all the talkies were made within the studios. Not being able to crowd any snow-capped peaks or outlying prairie into the studios, it was thought best to deal only with the kind of stories where the characters were permitted to wander from the drawing rooms to bedrooms and vice versa.

The result, of course, was a wholesome cessation of cowboy activities on the screen. But as soon as sound recording became an open-air possibility there was an immediate rush to revive the Westerns. No one stopped to consider that the one thing which really mattered in this type of picture, namely, action, would be vitiated by the introduction of dialogue. As soon as you have cowboys chatting around a campfire you might as well eliminate the cowboys and substitute campfire girls.

Though the Western pictures have shown distinct improvement in recent months, it is apparent that the directors have not yet got it into their heads that action and action and more action is the only thing that can make this type of film worth a hoot. Dialogue should be merely a link to connect up the flow of sequences and you can't have a flow of sequences when everybody is stumbling and pausing over the dialogue.

This fact is clearly shown in three pictures of the past week, "The Big Trail," "The Silver Horde" and "The Girl of the Golden West." Heretical as it may be to say so, the most satisfactory of the three from the sheer point of entertainment is "The Silver Horde." It might be argued that the epic qualities of "The Big Trail" place it outside the category of Western films, and in a sense that is true. Obviously it isn't meant to be sheer entertainment; it is definitely more than that. It is, at times, a magnificent picture from a purely visual point of view, but considering the scope of its subject and the extraordinarily meticulous effort that went into its making, one certainly has a right to demand from it something more consistent in the way of achievement than it provides.—*N. One of this town's best known frivolous sons of wealth accepted the invitation of a certain night life hostess to visit her Hot Spot last night, and Did He Enjoy Himself! IT took America one year to become surfeited with talkie revues, backstage and musical pictures. England got sick of them in three months, and in Germany six pictures were enough to turn the public against them. You cannot give them away in Germany, which has now reverted to heavy, sombre, sordid subjects France is making markedly erotic and impossibly melodramatic pictures.

All Europe is definitely anti-American-film. Our Hollywood producers have a big job on their hands to make talkies that will please everyone in the Tower of Babel. You will grasp the seriousness of this problem when you realize that for years the profits of most companies came from their foreign trade. American theatres paid the cost of production. Export was the velvet that meant dividends.—Photoplay.

Insurance policies have often been issued for strange and unusual risks, but it takes the movies to provide the most unique and amazing policies of all. George Olsen, popular orchestra leader at the Roosevelt Hotel in Hollywood, says Miss Sharon, has taken out love insurance on his orchestra boys to compensate for desertions due to marriage. It is reported that some time ago a well-known director took out temperament insurance for Jetta Goudal during one of his large productions, while Louise Fazenda once had her two pig-tails covered by a $100,000 policy. Ann Pennington has insured her knees for $250,000, Corinne Griffith her voice for $1,000,000. # that — Quips Lifted and Sifted

DURING the past six months I have commented on 80-odd movies in this column. As you know, they represent the best efforts of the nation's fourth industry. As you also know, there are three purifying processes in the industry set up to cleanse this celluloid of all un-American thought, chief sanctifier of all being ex-Harding manager, Will Hays. You may not have heard this, but there is a national prohibition law in some parts of the country, and President Hoover some time ago gave us all solemn admonition to obey all laws.

Thus it is interesting to note in passing that of the 80-odd movies there were 72 that had drinking scenes, bars, bootleggers or in some way an inference that the Volstead act is not a 100 per cent success. Furthermore, the following movies showed either a woman or a man whose chief function in the story had to do with the sale or consumption of alcohol: "Alibi," "Applause," "The Czar of Broadway," "Gentlemen of the Press," "Good Intentions," "Madame X," "Man from Blankley's," "On the Level," "Holiday," "Shooting Straight," "Roadhouse Nights," "Young Man from Manhattan." In the aforementioned feature movies one or more characters drank considerably during the action, if indeed they were not actually portrayed as bootleggers.

In the following movies there was at least one important drinking scene: "All Quiet on the Western Front," "Anna Christie," "The Bad One," "Bulldog Drummond," "The Case of Sergeant Grischa," "The Cohens and Kellys in Scotland," "The Dance of Life," "Dangerous Nan McGrew," "The Dawn Patrol," "The Devil's Disciple," "The Divorcee," "Girl of the Port," "The Girl Said No," "Hot for Paris," "Journey's End," "Juno and the Paycock," "The Lady of Scandal," "Paris Bound," "Safety in Numbers," "So This Is London," "Raffles."

What puzzles me is how Mr. Hays and the boys reconcile themselves to their position. It is impossible, according to their creed, to show a movie representing the breakdown of the courts. Thus "The Last Mile" is too tough for a movie audience, although "The Big House" shows great similarity in places. (The warden is a kind man and the hero goes straight —there are your differences.) I question the fact that Harding Manager Hays would ever let the boys film "Revelry," a good belly laugh at the late lamented gentleman from Marion, Ohio. But I give up. The only answer I can find is that drinking, grafting, and bootlegging are such an accepted part of living today that even Mr. Hays sees nothing malicious in the constant movie dramatization of this integral activity of our land. For the sake of variation, I have a wistful desire to see some new movie plots. Instead of the gangsters, I should like to see some drunken coast guardsmen, a few crooked prohibition chiefs and a bribed judge or two in the next hundred movies. But it is only a vain wish. After all, such stories might give people the idea that Prohibition isn't enforced.—Lorentz in Judge.

A CERTAIN Broadway actress recently was given a long-term contract with a West Coast studio. But the inside story of her job is an amusing one. She was the sweetheart of an important New Yorker who wearied of his love and decided it was time to end things. He had powerful friends among the executives of a big movie company and he asked them to sign his girl friend for a picture. They did and she made a short subject which was quite good. Thereupon the studio officials forgot all about her and she was given no more assignments.

Imagine the man's surprise when one morning she called him from the Grand Central Station. She said she "wanted to surprise her daddicums" by hurrying on to New York without letting him know. He was surprised all right, but not particularly pleased. What good was the trip if here she were back on his hands. So again he got in touch with his movie friends and told them they would have to do something better than that for him. They went into a consultation, with the result that the girl was sent for and told that her first effort had been so satisfactory they didn't want to make up their new schedule without getting her name on the dotted line. She signed, wondering what daddicums would say about another separation, never dreaming the truth. The executives told her that while her new picture wouldn't start for a while, she had better be in the Hollywood atmosphere immediately. And off she went with the relieved ex-admirer simulating tears. Perhaps they were genuine ones of relief.—N. Y. Graphic.

Marie Prevost, who was already a divorcee, has married and divorced Kenneth Harlan. Monte Blue already had been divorced. Adolphe Menjou and his first wife were sundered in 1927. Atlanta—There's one swarthy member of Atlanta's darktown division who can tell you that sleeping in a theatre is not what it is cracked up to be. He's in the hospital now and is getting plenty of rest. Last week a patrolman found the door of the 81 theatre, local colored house, unlocked. He investigated and discovered a husky negro asleep in one of the chairs. He awoke the sleeping one and immediately became the target for a couple of chairs and a torrent of verbal abuse. The patrolman fired from the hip and the negro collapsed. It is thought he will recover, but the odds are ten one his penchant for theatre napping has suffered a serious setback.

MOVIE openings are much worse than those of the legitimate drama. At a picture opening arc lights try to blind you and the hired photographers with the flashlights try to make you deaf. Then, not being able to see or hear the picture, you stand a good chance of enjoying it.

The first thing a movie producer does for his opening is to arrange for policemen to keep the crowds back. They see the cops and want to know what it is all about.

If the picture people would pay as much attention to putting on a show inside the theatre as they do to putting on a show outside the theatre they wouldn't need a new invention to revolutionize the business every year.—Skolsky in N. Y. News.

A toast to Ruth Chatterton!

The accent of a significant and beloved personality sounds through every syllable of your art. On the stage, the veracity and inimitable grace of your characterizations left you practically without a rival; on the screen, today, it leaves you without a peer.

Those fortunate enough to have seen your work * * * still admire that talent in you, inherent or cultivated, which stamped those memorable impersonations with the mark of greatness. Nothing you do, indeed, fails to convey the authentic note, the brevet of perfection.

Earnings Being Maintained, Says Financial Organ

Film companies generally are maintaining earnings, reports thus far released, covering the first nine months of the year, show, it is pointed out by Barron's, financial weekly, in summarizing the position of various companies. These reports "fail to bear out the pessimistic predictions rampant during the spring and summer," the publication observes.

"While September quarter earnings of Fox Film and Radio-Keith-Orpheum are below a year ago, the showing may be considered gratifying in view of prevailing conditions," Barron's states. "Fox reported net after all charges of $3,028,779, against $3,200,121 a year ago, while RKO's net of $886,438 in the third quarter was only $120,893 under the showing for 1929.

"Paramount Publix reported for the September quarter net of $5,100,000, the largest for any comparable period in its history and an increase of 11% over last year.

Nine Months' Record Earnings

"Nine months' figures of the above companies set new records. Paramount turned in net of $13,541,000, an increase of 39% over 1929. Fox increased its net from $8,337,196 a year ago to $10,104,194, while RKO showed an increase of 86%, bringing net to $3,052,571.

"Of the big producers, Warner Brothers undoubtedly will present a disappointing report for the summer months. At the time of financing last August it was stated that the August 31 quarter, last of its fiscal year, would show a substantial deficit.

"Loew's, Inc., report for the fiscal year ended August 31 showed record net earnings of $14,600,332, or $9.90 a share on average stock outstanding during the year. This compares with $11,756,956 net a year ago. Indications are that the 24 weeks ending August 31, embracing the warm weather months, showed net of $6,356,748, against $6,504,998 a year ago.

Experimenting with the Wide Film

"Among the smaller units, Columbia Pictures continues the growth which resulted in record earnings for the year ended June 30, last. Universal Pictures is enjoying a more prominent position in the field. While this has been largely due to the success of its "All Quiet On the Western Front," company has since turned out a number of successful feature films. Its position in the industry has been further strengthened as a result of a booking agreement with RKO.

"The big producers, Paramount excepted, are now experimenting with wide film pictures. RKO is using the Spoor process; Metro, subsidiary of Loew's, has "Realife" reported as being the least expensive; Warner has the "Vitascope"; and Fox Film the "Grandeur." Grandeur films were shown earlier this year and were favorably received.

"The wide film gives the illusion of depth, the much sought third-dimension. Among other reported advantages are better sound reproduction and inclusion of more characters on the film. At the present time, producers by agreement are to show the wide films only in 10 key cities.

Prospective 1931 Earnings

"The amusement industry is adjusting itself to the fact that the attraction of sound films as a novelty is losing its appeal and earnings as large as in 1929 and in first half of 1930 cannot reasonably be expected next year without some new attraction. While feature pictures that are hits are capable of returning record income, revenues from ordinary run of pictures have been disappointing.

"In other words, when sound films were new practically any production was sure of record crowds, regardless of merits. Now earnings will depend more than ever on success in gauging changing popular tastes. As a spectacle, it is attracting large crowds, but there is no reason to believe it will add greatly to the amusement value of a film. Neither is there any reason to believe earning power will be greatly increased for any extended period. Also the wide screen may prove an adverse factor in additional expense to equip theatres for projection.

De Luxe Theatres Lose Patronage

"A number of amusement companies during the summer abandoned stage shows given in the larger theatres. It has been found the falling off in income has been relatively greater in the large de luxe theatres than in the smaller play-houses. This is presumably due to the fact that the public will not pay additional admittance to see a film at a large theatre when it can be seen a few weeks later at lower prices in neighborhood houses. Paramount now is restoring the stage shows and revues formerly given, and also have added personal appearances of stage stars. This has met with substantial success and has increased boxoffice receipts, wherever tried. The larger companies in preparing stage shows present them in a chain of 30 or more houses so that the additional cost for each house is small in comparison with additional income received. Attempts also are being made to bring back the juvenile trade driven away to some extent by the more sophisticated films shown recently. A number of film versions of popular juvenile books are planned for next year.

"All the larger companies the past year or so have added greatly to their theatre chains, and have considerably increased operating officiency while costs have been pared down. The sound film in itself has helped in controlling expenses since a dialogue script means a picture must be carefully planned in advance, not made by the old uncertain methods. Drastic economy programs have been enforced by all leading producers.

Theatre Chains Expanded

"As a result, even with the new problems that have come before the industry there is no reason to think earnings are likely to decline to a 1928 level, barring, of course, a very big increase in unemployment. At the same time, the upward trend in profits which carried through the first half of 1930 is likely to be interrupted.

"In a situation in which the public will be attracted to only outstanding successful films, there is danger that the industry may not have sufficient films of superior quality. A good film, even when produced by an independent, has no difficulty in selling itself to the industry. There is also general co-operation among all larger producers who would rather present a good film made by a competitor than a poor film of their own make, since good film means profitable theatre operations.

"The present situation thus gives the smaller independent film producers, including such companies as Pathe Exchange and Columbia Pictures, which are entirely without theatrical affiliations, a good opportunity to increase their revenues."

Pictures Outdo Justice; Always Spank Criminals

Toledo—Another old reliable exploitation angle bites the dust. Into the discard goes that once serviceable gag line, "Not recommended for children," which so often had the desired effect of making 'em cry for it. No, sir, there's no valid excuse for using it. At least not in connection with pineapple-tossing, jail-breaking, safe-blowing filmellers of the underworld.

Dr. A. W. Trettien, professor of psychology at the University of Toledo, declares flatly that movies depicting crime are NOT harmful to children. Addressing the Toledo Motion Picture Council, Dr. Trettien said:

"The criminal in the picture always gets caught and is punished. Thus the movie teaches a better lesson than life itself, since the American criminal is often successful in evading justice."

The speaker pointed out that the screen's soundest defense is the fact that public sentiment is not against it. And public sentiment he characterized as "the highest and finest product of any democracy."

"When public sentiment breaks down," he declared, "we will become an anarchy instead of a peace-loving nation."

The professor told his audience that the movie, like the pulpit and the press, is optional with society, yet it exercises great influence upon the home, the school and the state in modern civilization.

It's a Fact; All Women Are Bad, Jeanette Avers

Chicago — Jeanette MacDonald headed this week's delegation of transient Hollywoodites who looked in on Chicago en route. Miss MacDonald bore a bundle of volumes that were heavier in content or theme than in avoirdupois, and displayed them a little proudly; even boasting she had read excerpts from all of them. Her remarks while here were confined to business, such as the completion of her recent picture, "Oh, for a Man," and the impending start of her new one, "All Women Are Bad."

"Sure, it's true," she replied to a question. "There's some bad in all women—or else they're uninteresting."

Among others were Harold Lloyd, here to watch "Feet First" in its opening days at McVickers, after just having watched it in its opening days in New York. There was also Ruby Keeler Jolson, and sister, Anna, and "Happy," a pekingese pup that matched Ruby's coat. Ruby was en route to New York to begin work in a musical show.

"Al is going to meet me in two weeks," she confided. "But I don't know whether I can wait that long or not. It seems an age since I saw him last already."

Brookline Prepares for Its First Film House

Brookline, Mass.—Following the vote of this town on a referendum ballot at the state election, in favor of allowing picture theatres to locate within the town for the first time, selectmen have announced that applicants for permits will be given hearings at a later date, possibly all on one date, when the hearings will be open to the public.

Whatever concerns are granted permits will be obliged to construct theatre buildings, for there are no theatres in the town nor are there any halls or large buildings which could be remodelled. It is probable that severals permits will be granted, which will mean a large amount of new construction for the town.

Brookline has a population of over 40,000 and is looked upon as particularly good territory for theatres. It would not be surprising if three or four permits were granted by the selectmen.

Warners and Publix are both anxious to build in Brookline and Warners have gone as far as to secure an option on a lot in the Coolidge Corner district. Applications have also been filed by William Stuart Young and John F. Fleming, the former for a Coolidge Corner location and the latter at Brookline village; Arthur H. Sawyer, for one at 123-129 Harvard street, and John D. Murphy for a theatre with no location specified.

Buckley Has Indoor Course

High and Low On Music Row

THE new regime under the management of Jay Witmark promises a bright future for Red Star Music Co. Already sales of hit proportions on "Under the Spell of Your Kiss," written by M. K. Jerome and Joan Jasmyn, are keeping the shipping clerks on their toes, while two other new tunes, "To Make a Long Story Short," by Byron Gay, and "I'll Never Love Anyone but You," by the three Tobiases, are favorites with the air maestros. Additions to the professional department include Nat Simons, Harry Jentes, Eddie Lambert and Harry Salsbury.

Hard times or no, here's one songwriter, Clint R. Carpenter, writer of "Kentucky," published by Clarence Williams, who is not worrying about a roof over his head. Carpenter owns a large hotel in Bridgeport, Conn.

Popular Radio Hits Corp. has leased new offices at 729 Seventh Ave., the new quarters having been redecorated and remodeled so that there will be four piano rooms and a reception hall. The two main songs on the catalogue are "Will You Be Hating Me Tomorrow for Loving You Tonight", written by Jean Herbert, Al Koppel and Irving Actman, and "Sailing on a Moonbeam," by Art Carter, Ben Gordon and Nat Osborne.

Abner Silver, Inc., last week opened its doors, and a new music publisher joined the ranks on tin pan alley. Abner Silver, president of the firm, writer of many hits, feels that his opening catalogue, which consists of "I'm Up on a Mountain," "Am I Your Once-in-a-While?", "I'd Rather Have You" and "I Hate Myself" will prove that he can also pick 'em.

Santly Brothers made a mistake in "Give Yourself a Pat on the Back," but in so doing accidentally came across another English song, "When the Organ Played at Twilight," which more than makes up for it. This firm has just published a new song, "You're the One I Care For," written by Bert Lown, Harry Link and Chauncey Grey.

This week is "Moonlight on the Colorado Week" for Shapiro-Bernstein, a nationwide plug on that song being the object. Most of the biggest air plugs in the country have promised Jack Glogau their support.

Denton & Haskins believe that "Singing a Love Song That Nobody Hears," their latest fox trot, is destined to take the place of their former smash hit, "Somebody Stole My Gal," which after all these years, is still in great demand among orchestra leaders.

THE Projectionists' Round Table

By John F. Rider

WHILE it is good practice to decide upon the selection of a multiplier to afford a very definite increase in operating range, it is not always possible to obtain the exact resistance desired. This is particularly true if the required resistance involves a quantity representing an odd fraction of 1,000,000 or 100,000 or 10,000.

Thus,it might be necessary to use a resistance of 225,000 ohms, which is an odd value and the nearest approximation in the form of a commercial unit is 250,000 ohms. Such a unit is satisfactory and all that is necessary is to determine the exact multiplying factor with such a series multiplier. If the internal resistance of the meter is 112,500 ohms, the use of a 225,000 ohm multiplier will increase the range of the instrument 3 times. The use of a 250,000 ohm resistance instead of the 225,000 unit increases the range by

$$\frac{112{,}500 + 250{,}000}{112{,}500} = 3.22 +$$

Using a D. C. Milliammeter as a D. C. Voltmeter.—We have mentioned the use of a current meter as a voltmeter. Such a system is actually employed in high resistance voltmeters, thereby gaining in sensitivity and enabling the use of the instrument at points where the current consumption must be low. It is quite common practice to employ a 0-1 D. C. milliammeter with an internal resistance of about 25 ohms as a high resistance voltmeter by inserting suitable multipliers.

Imagine the meter MA in Figure 97A to be the instrument mentioned above. The current range is 1 milliampere and according to the stated internal resistance, the drop across the meter is .025 volt. Rm the internal resistance = 25 ohms. To make the .025 volt drop, which is full scale deflection, the equivalent of 250 volts, we must multiply the operating scale by 10,000, or and the meter when used as in Figure 97B with the series multiplier Rs is a voltmeter.

If we consider the total resistance of the circuit, it becomes evident that the meter has a resistance of 1000 ohms-per-volt, since the total current for full scale deflection is .001 ampere or 1 milliampere. It is customary because of the low internal resistance of the moving element to neglect the meter resistance when improvising a voltmeter from a milliammeter and to consider the meter as a device which will indicate the flow of 1 milliampere and to employ a series resistance of such value that the product of the current and the series resistance will equal the applied voltage or $E = I \times Rs$. In other words, the value of the resistance Rs to provide the required 250 volt scale in the case cited would be 250,000 ohms or hence Ohm's law for resistance governs the selection of the multiplier.

It is significant, however, to note that such mode of operation introduces an error, due to the neglect of the meter resistance. However, this error is small at high voltage ranges but becomes greater and greater as the operating range is reduced and is greatest when the range with the multiplier approaches the range of the instrument without the multplier. For example, neglecting the meter resistance of 25 ohms, and considering only its current indication of 1 milliampere, the instrument would require a series resistance Rs of 1000 ohms to indicate 1 volt. If such a resistance is used with the meter cited, the actual multiplying factor is and if the voltage drop across the meter is .025 volt, the voltage required to give full scale deflection would be $25 \times 41 = 1.025$ volt, which means that an applied voltage of 1 volt would not give full scale deflection. Instead the meter would indicate approximately .96 milliampere. Hence for voltage, in excess of 10 volts it is possible to neglect the meter resistance and the ordinary Ohm's law method of determining the resistance is satisfactory, but for voltage less than 10 volts, it is best to consider the resistance of the meter.

Starting with a 1 milliampere meter and a series resistance of 250,000 ohms, it is a relatively simple matter to boost the voltage scale to 500 volts without using any additional series resistances. All that is necessary is to cut the current through the meter into half of its original value by using a shunt resistance of 25 ohms, or the voltage range is where Im is the current through the meter. Is is the current through the shunt resistance R and Rs is the resistance of the series resistor.

Such operation while satisfactory when the current consumption is limited to 2 milliamperes, defeats the advantage of the use of a low range milliammeter if the range is extended by means of additional or lower resistance shunts. This system is shown in Figure 97C. With the switch S open, the range of the meter is 0-250 volts. With S closed the range of the instrument is 0-500 volts. When the range is increased by shunting the meter, the series multiplier must carry twice the original vale of current or the sum of the current flowing in the two branches of the parallel circuit.

Another method of boosting the voltage is to arrange a number of series multipliers controlled by means of a tap switch as shown in connection with the voltmeter in Lesson 25.

A. C. Voltmeter and Multipliers.—The A. C. meter of the moving iron type may be employed in connection with multipliers to measure voltages in excess of the range indicated upon the scale. The method of determining just what value of resistance is required is the same as in the case of the D. C. instruments and further discussion is not necessary. It might be well, however, to mention that because of the lower internal resistance of the moving iron type of meter, the current carrying capacity of the series multipliers used with moving iron types of instruments must be many times that of the multipliers used with the moving coil meters.

We hasten to qualify this statement because some moving coil instruments, particularly of the portable type have lower internal resistance ratings than some panel type of moving iron instruments. Generally, the preceding statement is true.

For example a Weston instrument rated at 15 volts D. C., and of the moving coil type is rated at 62 ohms per volt, whereas a similar A.C. instrument of the moving iron type is rated at 14 ohms per volt. The former requires about 16 milliamperes for full scale deflection whereas the latter requires about 71 milliamperes for full scale deflection. To multiply the operating range of the latter instrument to 750 volts requires a series resistance of 10,290 ohms capable of passing 71 milliamperes and rated at about 52 watts. In the event that such a multiplier is located where free circulation of air is not possible, the required wattage rating is about 100 watts.

Capacity Multipliers for A. C. Voltmeters.—In contrast to the direct current instrument, the A.C. meter enables the replacement of a high-powered large size fixed resistance with a fixed capacity. In other words, the reactance of the condenser may be used to replace the resistance of a resistor. Such a system would appear as shown in Figure 98A where V is the voltmeter and C is the condenser. The electrical equivalent of such a circuit is shown in Figure 98B, where Rm is the meter resistance and Xc is the reactance of the condenser.

The combination of the voltmeter resistance Rm and the capacity C connected across a source of alternating emf to be measured constitutes an impedance, which we shall assume consists of the resistance Rm and the reactance Xc. We appreciate that the winding within the voltmeter represents a certain value of inductance and, therefore, possesses inductive reactance, but the effect of this reactance with respect to the total impedance is very small, particularly at the commercial frequencies of from 25 to 60 cycles. The impedance of the combination shown is where $R_m$ is the resistance of the meter quoted in the manufacturer's literature and $X_c$ is the reactance of the known capacity C, determinable by means of where F is the frequency of the voltage to be measured.

$$Z = \sqrt{R_m^2 + X_c^2}$$

$$Xc = \frac{1{,}000{,}000}{6.28 \times F \times \text{Cmfd}}$$

Now, the selection of a certain value of C in order to multiply the meter scale by a definite amount is a matter of a fortunate guess, unless one wishes to go through a series of calculations. Since the capacity reactance variation is inverse to capacity, the lower the required multiplier resistance, the higher must be the value of the condenser and vice-versa.

Therefore for a small increase of the meter range, where a small value of series resistance would be required it is more practical to employ a fixed resistance. However, where the multiplication factor is appreciable, and the required resistance is high it is quite advantageous to employ a capacity.

With respect to the use of a high resistance multiplier in connection with a low resistance meter, we cannot overlook the fact that the vectorial form of addition makes possible total neglect of the meter resistance, when the multiplier resistance is high and the meter resitsance is low, because the impedance can be said to very closely approximate the reactance of the circuit, in this case the reactance of C. It is therefore possible to guess at the reactance desired when the multiplication factor is known.

Suppose that we consider a meter with a range of 15 volts and a total resistance of 210 ohms. We desire to multiply this scale to 375 volts. This means a multiplication factor as far as the external resistance is concerned of and $24 \times 210 = 5040$ ohms.

The approximate reactance required is 5040 ohms. The resistance of the meter will naturally influence the total impedance but we can arrive at an answer by approximating the reactance desired and then deciding upon a capacity suitable for use. It should be borne in mind that special values of capacity are not always available, and it may be necessary to use some value of capacity which is commonly available and to extend the range of the meter somewhat beyond that originally decided upon.

The reactance of a .5 mfd. condenser at 60 cycles is about 5300 ohms. This is sufficiently close to allow us to use it in the impedance formula. Hence the total impedance.

$$= 5305 \text{ ohms}$$

This value is the equivalent of the meter resistance plus the series multiplier as used in the D.C. system and the multiplying factor of the combination becomes

$$\frac{Z}{Rm} = \frac{5305}{210} = 25.2$$

In other words, if we use a voltmeter with a range of 15 volts and an internal resistance of 210 ohms in series with a .5 mfd condenser across a source of alternating emf of 60 cycles, the presence of the capacity multiplier increases the range of the meter 25.2 times.

The accuracy of the calculated calibration depends upon two things. First, accurate determination of the internal resistance of the meter. Second, upon the accurate determination of the capacity of the condenser. In fact, it is even more important that the latter be more accurate than the former because by virtue of the relation between the two numerical quantities, a 10 percent variation in the latter displays a much greater influence than a 10 percent variation in the former. Of course, both should be accurately determined, if the system is to be of any use and the readings reliable.

The selection of the condenser subsequent to the determination of the value required is based upon the voltage rating. It should withstand twice the voltage of the maximum range of the meter with the multiplier in the circuit. In other words if the range of the improved high scale voltmeter is 500 volts, the capacity form of multiplier should withstand 1000 volts. Another item of advantage is the use of non-inductively wound condensers.

A. C. Current Meters and Shunts.—Shunts for the extension of the current meter ranges may be selected according to the methods outlined in connection with D.C. instruments but their use is recommended only with the ordinary panel type of moving iron instrument. Special types of units are required for the more elaborate meters and since they do not find application in connection with sound projection a detailed resumé is unnecessary at this time.

Vacuum Tubes

The Emission of Electrons From Hot Bodies.—As was stated at the beginning of this course, during the discussion of the structure of matter and electronic activity, certain metals contain an abundant amount of free electrons. At least, that is the assumption. These electrons are in a state of agitation at all times, but do not acquire sufficient velocity when the metal is cold to leave the boundaries of the substance. However, when heated, the velocity of the free electrons is accelarated to an extent sufficient to cause the electron to leave the heated substance. Such activity is known as electronic emission.

There is another form of electronic emission, which does not involve the heating of an element, it being sufficient to cast illumination upon the element. Such is the photoelectric cell. Let us start with the amplifying tube and then progress into the photoelectric cell and associated equipment.

The basis of all vacuum tubes irrespective of their utility, whether of two, three, four or a greater number of elements is the emission of electrons from one of the elements within the tube. In some instances, a secondary emission is also employed. As to the electronic emission from a solid which is acted upon by heat, the rate of emission is dependent primarily upon two factors; First, the structure of the element; that is, its constituency and second, the temperature or the degree of incendescence of the element. The first is a variable closely allied with the second, because the two combined to afford maximum emission at minimum temperature thereby minimum volatization, tend to greatly prolong the operating life of the element. It is for these reasons that certain metals are more prominently employed as sources of electrons.

Vacuum tubes which depend upon an incandescent element or electrode as the source of electrons employ three combinations of metals. These are in the manner of their prominence, a platinum base coated with oxides, such as barium, strontium and others; a combination of tungsten and thorium and tungsten alone.

For quite a long time, the metal tungsten was used as the electron emitter. Tungsten possesses the properties which made it quite popular for a time. First, it contains an abundance of free electrons and is a prolific emitter. Second, it may be heated to a very high temperature. This second advantage was also a disadvantage as far as ordinary commercial practice was concerned. While it is true that it may be heated to a high temperature, it is also necessary to heat the metal to a high temperature in order that it be a free emitter. To do so requires an appreciable amount of current.

Another disadvantage is that since the tungsten itself is the emitter, and during its period of operation, volatilizes, it gradually becomes thinner and thinner, and changes in resistance. After sufficient period of time, the filament burns out. Naturally as the body of the filament grows less and less, the emission decreases. An idea of the characteristic of a tungsten filament relative to its critical temperature for sufficient electronic emission may be gleaned from the curve shown in Figure 99, which is self explanatory. The values of the emission current may be classed as arbitrary, but it should be understood that the usual normal temperature is at about 2400° Absolute.

After a period of time, the metal thorium was combined with tungsten to comprise a new filament known as the "thoriated tungsten" filament. The purpose of the combination was to obviate the need of a very high operating temperature, since the actual emitter was the thorium rather than the tungsten.

During the time that the tungsten and the thoriated tungsten filaments were in general use in the commercial fields, another type of filament was being employed by Western Electric. This filament consists of a base made of platinum upon which has been located a number of coatings of oxides, such as barium and strontium. These oxides are placed upon the filament as individual layers, each layer being baked at a temperature of approximately 1000 degrees C.

The salient features of this combination are numerous. First, because of the prolific emission of electrons by the oxides named, the filaments are good emitters. Second, this emission is possible at a comparatively low temperature, hence the current consumption of the filament is comparatively low and it is not necessary to heat the base to a very high temperature. Third, is the advantage that the function of the base is merely to heat the oxide coating.

During operation the coating burns off and the end of the operating life is reached after the oxide has been completely exhausted. Since the platinum base serves merely as a heater it remains intact after all of the oxides have been burned off. Furthermore, the tube may be operated at a constant potential or at a constant current since the volatilization of the base is negligible.

As to the effect of the presence of the barium, it has been found that the emission is greatly increased. With a constant temperature, the electronic emission from a platinum filament coated with barium is 100,000,000 times as much as the emission from a clean platinum surface operated at the same temperature without the barium coating. At the same time it might be well to mention for several reasons other than those which are stated at this time, that operation of the coated filament at temperatures in excess of that determined by the rated current and voltage results in very rapid demise of the tube filament. Not that the filament will "burn out" but that the oxide is exhausted with unnecessary rapidity and the tube life greatly shortened. This comment relating to the coated filament may be said to be applicable to all of the tubes now employed in sound equipment, at least to those tubes which are normally operated at a "cherry red" temperature, a characteristic of coated filaments.

Chicago's Mayor Vetoes "Flip-Up" Seat Ordinance

Chicago—The theatre seat ordinance which was passed by the city council here last August before local exhibitors even knew of its existence was vetoed by Mayor Thompson. In commenting on his veto the mayor said the ordinance, if passed, would be vigorously contested and that, inasmuch as its constitutionality was doubtful, it would probably be thrown out eventually at the cost to the taxpayers of considerable litigation. The mayor's attitude makes it reasonable to suppose that no further attempt to gain enactment of the ordinance will be made by its proponents.

The theatre seat ordinance provided that all theatres be compelled either to install the "flip-up" type of seat or widen distances between seats to a minimum of fourteen inches. The ordinance was introduced in council and passed without the knowledge of local exhibitors who, consequently, had no opportunity to appear and give their side of the question.

Pals Roll Log For Chi Author

Chicago—M-G-M's "Remote Control" ran into a lot of unlooked-for publicity when it opened at the Oriental this week, thus making the jobs of Balaban & Katz publicity men that much easier.

A co-author of the play is Al Fuller, former Chicago newspaperman, still in his twenties, and still on the scene here. His old buddies on the various city desks were glad to do him the favor when "Remote Control" came to town. Fuller covered the Chicago hotels assignment for the City News Bureau for three years; then became publicity man for the new Palmer House. It was in the broadcasting room of KYW, located in the Palmer House, that Fuller conceived and developed the idea for his modern play, which had a turn on the stage before being adapted for the picture.

Fuller still guides the Palmer House name into print here. The publicity his associations gained the picture included, in addition to several elaborate reviews, frequent mention of his part in its authorship on the various movie pages and an occasional photograph of the author on the picture pages.

1 Marx Out, So Patrons Demand Rebate of 25%

Chicago—For the first time in their professional history the Marx Brothers were billed as "Three" instead of "Four" at the Palace Theatre here this week.

Arriving in town Friday to start their week's engagement the following day, Groucho was suddenly taken ill and rushed to the Michael Reese hospital for an appendicitis operation. The operation was performed immediately and Groucho was reported well on the road to recovery by Monday morning. Meanwhile, Harpo, Chico and Zeppo saw to it that the show went on, but a few disgruntled Palace patrons thought they scented a publicity stunt in Groucho's opening-day attack and tried to collect a 25 per cent rebate. Just tried.

"It wasn't an appendix they removed after all," Groucho wired Ashton Stevens from the hospital. "It was an Austin."

Groucho, however, was still in Michael Reese hospital when the brothers' week at the Palace was over. His lines and stunts were taken over by Zeppo, who gave such a perfect impersonation of his brother that intimate friends of the two who witnessed it were confused. Zeppo, it is said, can substitute equally well for Harpo and Chico, too, but none of the others can take Zeppo's place. He's the "good-looking" one.

Theatres' $2,850 To Needy Crooks

Chicago—This town's expert members of the Rod and Blackjack Club on their regular Sunday night pilgrimmage knocked over two theatres for a total take of $2,850. Warner's newly acquired Hoosier at Whiting surrendered $2,500, while the Paulina gave up $350.

At the Warner theatre, Michael Evan, the manager, after being forced to open the safe, suffered the indignity of having his overcoat tied about his head by the bandits, who escaped in an automobile. Evan's bride of one day was inside the theatre viewing the performance when the robbery took place. Apprised of what had happened, she collapsed.

At the Paulina, seven patrons were held at bay by one robber while a second relieved Bernice Snow, cashier, of $350.

George and Karl Give Free Show

Chicago—"Ain't they the derndest cut-ups!"

Such was Chicago's opinion of the fun-loving George K. Arthur and Karl Dane, when the team of screen buddies arrived here and immediately set to work entertaining a handful of listless Sunday morning transients at the Dearborn St. station. The boys just couldn't resist cutting a few capers after their 68 hours of enforced lassitude en route from the Coast.

After a few days in Chicago the buddies will journey onward to Grand Rapids, where they are to begin a vaudeville tour.

Swank Is Sunk

Chicago—Machat's Punch & Judy house of swank, which opened here in September with a $2.50 top admission and all seats reserved, dropped into the bourgeois class this week when its third price cut in two months brought the tariff to four bits for matinees and six for evenings. House also opened as a two-a-day but is now on grind from 1 to 11, and no reserved seats. Machat gave away coffee and cigarettes, but Chicagoans who pay more than a buck for a movie expect wrist watches and tiaras. Hence the price cuts.

Bill's Race Track

Chicago—Bill Brumberg has installed a race horse chart in his office to indicate the progress of that bunch of personality salesmen of his from day to day. Every Monday shows the boys at the post with Contract up. The finish is scheduled for Saturday, but this week three of the boys got to the stretch by Wednesday and wanted two days off to go duck hunting. Frank Young threw his jockey, jumped a barrier and took a short cut diagonally across the field after closing a contract with a booking circuit.

Elect Meltzer, Mindlin

Chicago—Sol Meltzer and Fred Mindlin were elected to vacancies in the Illinois Independents Buying circuit this week. Meltzer succeeds Robert Gumbiner as treasurer of the organization, and Mindlin replaces George Burdick as secretary. Both Gumbiner and Burdick resigned recently to accept assignments outside Chicago.

Tensen With N. S. S.

Chicago—H. E. Tensen, formerly in a technical capacity at the Warner Hollywood studios, has been placed in charge of the special service department of National Screen Service here. Lee Verschuur, formerly in charge of the department, is vacationing in North Dakota prior to assuming a position outside the film industry.

Publix local theatre departments may be moved into the new Paramount exchange on Michigan avenue in the near future. Home office wants the consolidation, but it looks as though another floor would have to be added to accommodate. The third floor, only one vacant, won't hold them all comfortably.

Bennie Benjamin, formerly RKO exchange manager here, is now Central States division manager for Columbia with headquarters at Kansas City. His territory includes Des Moines and Omaha in addition to K. C.

"Hell's Angels" finally opened here. It took as long for Chicago to get it as it did for Howard Hughes to make it. This means Chicago is playing day and date with Hencoop Crossing, Indiana.

Essaness opened the Vogue (formerly the Chateau) this week. Every time Essaness closes one it opens another. Noticed it?

B. & K. P. A. Gets Front Page O. K.

Chicago—Some smart publicity work by B. & K. netted the organization Page One space in local dailies with a story on ground breaking for a new theatre. The stunt was pulled by making the construction work look as though it were being attempted merely to provide employment in sore times. The philanthropic angle landed plenty of extra space with mention for a half-dozen B. & K. officials thrown in. Ordinarily it would have rated a paragraph in the Real Estate sections. Morning papers, however, ignored the yarn entirely, the break coming from the P. M. sheets only.

The Paramount (tentative) Theatre in Englewood, plans for which have been under way since early last summer, was the basis of the ground-breaking yarn.

Double Features Boost Trailers

Chicago—The unprecedented number of houses double-featuring here has brought joy to at least one branch of the industry—the trailer houses. One company alone—Filmack—reports that orders for thirty trailers announcing impending double feature attractions at various houses were received during the past week.

Opposed to this are the continuing complaints from exchanges over the short prices obtained from double-featuring theatres, and from short subject distributors who point out that the practice is cutting into their business with increasing severity and seriousness.

Local Fox houses are the most recent to capitulate and start running two.

Presidential Timber

SAINT NICHOLAS, PATRON SAINT OF CHILDREN:

Saint Nicholas Day and not Christmas is the children's festival in Holland, Belgium and parts of Germany, serving as a preliminary to Christmas. Many of the customs that we associate with Christmas are observed at this time.

"We have our holiday, Christmas, on the 5th and 6th of December," said an immigrant from Holland, on being interviewed, "because the 25th is the birthday of Christ and it is a holy day; then we go to church and we hear the story of Christ, and we come back to our houses and have chocolate and little cakes. But on the 5th and 6th we have awfully good times. Saint Nicholas comes and fills our shoes after he has taken out the grain which we put there for his reindeer."—Outlook.

Saint Nicholas is also the patron saint of Russia, of sailors, travelers, and merchants; he is especially the saint of school boys.

Serials Staging Big Comeback in Canada

Toronto—Serials are performing a comeback in Canadian theatres and, in talking form, are being readily absorbed by both adult and juvenile audiences. Thirty theatres in Ontario have already booked "The Lone Defender," featuring Rin-Tin-Tin, while Universal's "The Indians Are Coming" is arousing wide attention. "Tarzan, the Tiger" has also been given a cordial welcome in various towns.

City Buys Theatre

Toronto—The board of control has authorized the purchase by the city of the Princess for $391,600 for a street extension project. The Princess, a legitimate house, was to have been wired when the city made the offer.

New Governor of Kansas Favoring Tax on Theatres?

Topeka, Kan.—Harry Woodring is the new governor of Kansas and what his election means to the picture industry as yet cannot be determined. Woodring, elected on the Democratic ticket, defeated his Republica opponent by 319 votes. It was known that Frank Hancke, the Republican nominee, was friendly to the business, having indirectly expressed himself as being opposed to blue laws and amusement taxes.

Governor-elect Woodring undoubtedly will push his theories regarding the tax situation, having declared that "the problem can be solved only by co-operation on the part of the governor and the legislature in finding the way to take some of the burden from the farms and homes." That means, according to some, that theatres may be called upon to carry some of that burden. His attitude toward Sunday shows, long a subject of controversy in Kansas, is not known. Censorship, rigidly enforced under the present governor, Clyde Reed, probably will remain unchanged, although the present censor board was appointed under a Republican administration.

Don't Wake Me Up!

HE is the manager of his theatre in every sense of the word. When he starts to work out a campaign on one of his coming attractions he is able to enthuse over the stuff he is putting back of his ideas. No thought enters his mind that someone will come along and say "Nothing doing, too much money."

And if by chance the b.o. returns are below his expectations he does not sit on the uneasy chair waiting for the call-down from the home office. He just starts out to make up for the little disappointment by working harder for the success of his next lay-out.

And he has a light heart because tomorrow he is off and will be able to enjoy himself for the day and spend a little time with his family. And next summer will find him with two full weeks of vacation to be used for complete relaxation and a chance to forget business, with its manifold problems, for that length of time.

In the theatre he's the boss If the hired help don't function to his entire satisfaction, he replaces them with the kind of help that he wants. If his assistant happens to be a real assistant, he need not worry that the district manager will come along and switch assistants with some other house on the circuit.

He circulates around the town meeting with the leading lights in community and civic life. The newspaper boys call him a "regular" and enjoy dropping in on him for a chat whenever they are in the neighborhood. And the paper's advertising manager is all attention when a suggestion for a co-operative double-truck is advanced. In fact, he looks to this theatre manager to create such ideas. Don't they all gain something in the long run?

He is looked up to in the entire community as one of its leading citizens. Rarely does an event of any importance take place that he is not called in and consulted for advice and help. No worthy cause is passed up by this manager for fear of a veto from someone higher up. He's the real manager of the town's leading amusement centre and functions as such.

And better still, he goes about his job planning months ahead. Why not? He's not afraid that he'll be checked out Sunday night or switched to the sticks, bag, baggage and family. Take it and like it—or quit.

He is his own boss and capable of holding his job because he knows his business and can function without interference from a dozen bosses, many of them far removed from the town he is in.

It's a grand dream boys, please don't wake me up. Maybe it will come true.

Harold C. Lee Has His Say On: "What Is Exploitation?"

With so many showmen hastening to pass along their comments on "What Is Exploitation," it was only natural that Harold C. Lee, manager of the Babcock Theatre in Bath, New York, should shoot in his say on the subject. Lee has been in the show game for a number of years, and so he is capable of making some emphatic statements. His article begins:

"Every one has his own ideas about exploitation and every theatre has a different situation. No one can sidestep the fact that exploitation is more important than ever before in getting results today. You have got to let the public know what you have or you don't get them in. I do think that it is given more thought since the talkies came.

"Exploitation in the smaller towns, in my mind, has a different angle than in the larger towns. You can go out and tie up with the police department, fire department, stores, etc., and you are advertising your attraction to the people in the town itself. But what about the patronage outside of the town? How do they know that you tied up with the police department on 'Manslaughter' unless they happen to come in? Any one in the smaller cities today will tell you that 70% of the business comes from outside towns and rural centers. This also applies to ballyhoo, unless you go to the expense of hiring a truckman to drive through the country with banners and cutouts on his truck.

"The public will come out to good attractions well presented. The main factor in the small town today is to keep them posted on your theatre EVERY WEEK. Since the Fox organization installed sound in this house I have been giving considerable time and attention to our outside patronage. The best advertising mediums I have is the weekly program and trailers. At the present time I have a regular mailing list of 400 names and a call box list of 1,000. This covers eight nearby towns (small and R. F. D. boxes). These programs are mailed out every Thursday night and are delivered by Friday afternoon. It is a sure way of getting them into the homes. We also place three or four hundred in the newspapers that are delivered in town on Friday night.

"It takes considerable time to write the program up, direct the envelopes and get them out, but I am positive we are getting results. An occasional follow-up on the following Wednesday with a dodger advertising the Thursday-Friday and Saturday is also used. This reminds the public of your week-end attractions. The newspapers also carry ads, but they are all weekly and do not mean so much.

"I believe that money spent for this form of advertising brings better results than any other form of exploitation.

"Now, then, after you let the public know what you are playing, the next important thing is to see that they are satisfied after they get into your theatre. To do this you must watch the projection, quality of the sound, temperature and courtesy of your staff. Start this with the cashier, doorman and ushers. Let people know that you appreciate their patronage, be ready to answer all questions and make them feel at home. This is one of the things I have always considered important in this game today. In the larger houses it is a little different matter, but in the small town a manager knows everybody and the more attention he can give his patrons the more they will enjoy coming. I always try and be in the lobby before the show opens and when it breaks. In doing this patrons don't get the idea that your company has no interest in them only to get their money. In other words keep the GOOD WILL toward the house for the company the same as you would for yourself.

"Possilbly this does not follow the lines of exploitation, but in my 14 years in this game I have found that it pays better than some forms of exploitation.

"Another thing I believe is a good-will builder is to visit the nearby towns once a month or so. Talk with the business men (this applies to towns without theatres), give them an idea on what you have coming, slip them a couple of passes occasionally, get them away from the idea that you are hurting their business by pulling patrons to your theatre. I have actually run up against just such people in one of the towns near Bath, and by calling on them once in a while have made them good patrons. There are still people in the smaller towns today that have an idea that, because the theatre is operated by outside interests, it does not mean a thing to the town. This is all wrong and when I find such people I give them an idea of how much business the house brings to the town and what the town would be without a theatre. Also the small towns are getting the same type of entertainment today that the larger centers are, which was not the case a few years ago."

Thanks, Harold. We are sure that your fellow members are glad to hear your views on the subject. Let's have some more.

Guy Martin Carried On When Telephone Company Stopped

Since the telephone companies in various parts of the country have recently discontinued giving time service to its patrons, it occurred to Guy Martin, district manager of the Central Indiana district for Publix, that here was an opportunity for more service of the Publix type.

Several towns in Martin's district were so affected, so it was decided to run an underline in the daily newspaper ads, which read as follows:

> PUBLIX SERVICE!
> Telephone the Indiana Theatre, number 2500, any time between 9 A. M. and 12 midnight for the correct time. (Western Union.)

Upon receiving a call, the cashier gives the time and informs the caller that she is Miss So-and-so, the cashier, and that she would like to remind them that the Indiana theatre is showing Nancy Carroll's newest picture, "Laughter," etc.

Several theatres are using the idea with highly gratifying results. Patrons invariably thank the girl for the information. As high as 40 calls daily are reported in a town of 25,000 people.

Listen, Mr. Martin! We'd like to hear what else is going on around your district. When you display showmanship like the above, there's bound to be other angles, too. Let's have 'em. And include a photo of yourself.

Stage Coach Formed Part of Campaign Used by H. Cuffel

One of the reasons why Hal Cuffel, manager of the Orpheum Theatre, Grand Forks, N. D., did good business when he played "The Santa Fe Trail," was his street parade that he staged to ballyhoo the film of old New Mexico days.

He secured a 75-year old hack which at one time was doing duty as an ambulance, a driver and a pair of horses for $5.00. Cuffel then promoted from a radio service company amplifier equipment—placing four loud speakers on top of the hack.

The hack was decorated with large signs "We are riding the Santa Fe Trail with Richard Arlen—Orpheum Theatre." However, one sign was given over to the radio company in exchange for the equipment, this sign reading, "Real pioneers—Richard Arlen in SANTA FE TRAIL and the Philco Radio." 20 railroad torches were also promoted, which were hooked on top of the hack.

Cuffel had previously advertised for 50 boys dressed as cowboys and Indians to ride the Santa Fe Trail with Arlen.

Eight cowponies were also promoted and the riders on these ponies were togged out in cowboy and Indian costumes as well as wearing signs on their backs.

The parade, consisting of the hack, 50 cowboys and 8 cowponies started out at 7:15 on opening night of picture—parading through the streets and around the football field during halves at an intercollegiate football game.

Good work Hal. And next time, when you send us in a contribution, shoot us in your photo, too, so that we can give you and intro via it. Oke?

Lovett Continues To Display A Lot Of Fine Showmanship

"The Most Talked About Theatre In the City," is the way J. Fred Lovett, sub-bills his house, the Royal Theatre, Olneyville Square, Providence, Rhode Island, on his house organs. After looking at Fred's campaign for "All Quiet On the Western Front," we think that if he is going to turn out winners like this consistently, he should bill it "And the most talked about showmanship, too."

For his selling of the war film, he tied-up all of the local newspapers. As a street ballyhoo, he sent out trucks, manned by three soldiers apiece. The trucks had German machine guns mounted on them. 8,000 special heralds were distributed. A special ad was inserted in a veterans' paper, and editorial comment was also given. The paper containing the editorial comment was mailed to 5,000 veterans in the state. We are showing a photo of the lobby display that was used for the picture. The war material was loaned the theatre by the veterans.

The entire house staff was dressed up in German military attire. The doorman blossomed forth as a Major, complete even to the monocle. The ushers were German privates, and the head usher a lieutenant. The ticket seller was transformed into a German Red Cross nurse. 1,000 newspapers containing the "All Quiet" editorial were passed out two days before the opening. On the opening matinee, 24 Civil War veterans were invited to attend the show. Before the house opened, the ushers, who had been drilled in the goose-step, gave an exhibition.

Nearly every possible angle was covered by Lovett on the campaign, even to the extent of his making speeches at three American Legion posts in the town. So it's small wonder that the picture wowed them, packing the house from opening to closing.

Along with this story, we are reprinting the copy that appeared on the front cover of his program. In this special edition he gives ten reasons why the people should see and hear his shows at the Royal. Maybe you can make use of these reasons on your own programs. At times, Lovett varies this make-up to put in plugs on his kiddie business and other angles. The heralds are printed in black on yellow stock paper.

Miller Tied Up With Local Cops And They Plugged Picture

Still another way of cementing friendly relations with the local police is that used by F. J. Miller, manager of the Imperial Theatre in Augusta, Ga., whenever he has a picture to play on the type of "Manslaughter," which incidentally happened to be the film he made on this recent tie-up.

Fifty cardboard signs were placed at all curves outside the city and on traffic towers within the city. Copy on these cards read: "You are urged to drive cautiously and avoid the possibility of MANSLAUGHTER."

A number of the sidewalk traffic stands were placed in front of hotels, theatres, public buildings and all other locations where parking is not allowed. Copy on these signs read: "Do you realize it may mean a conviction of MANSLAUGHTER if you run down a person through reckless driving? DRIVE CAREFULLY is a City Ordinance Requirement."

Arrangements were also made with an authorized wrecker service to place a large banner on all cars pulled in one week in advance; copy on these signs reading: "Be Careful and Avoid Being Tried for MANSLAUGHTER." This tie-up was made with the city officials, who employ a wrecker.

Saturday before Monday's opening, small cards bearing copy about picture, theatre and play dates were distributed in autos and other places. This was the first announcement of the much-discussed title being a picture.

Fred Johnson Says That Business Is Oke at His Theatre

The ad that we are showing was run in the Oil City Blizzard, of Oil City, Pa., by that personal show blizzard, Fred Johnson, manager of the Latonia Theatre. The reason why we tack the appellation of blizzard on Fred is because his work literally snows under any sort of business depression. "No bum weeks for me," shouts Fred.

To show that he means it when he states that he doesn't believe in business depression, Fred tied-up with the South Side Business Men and ran a Prosperity Week. The ad that we are showing is one of a group run in the morning and evening papers. Look over the lay-out; it is probably one that you will want to use at an early date.

There's no use of our going into a big discussion on what Fred did for "Prosperity Week." Those members and readers of the Club pages, who have been following this showman's activities for the past two years, will know that no grass grows under his feet whenever a campaign is to be put across. Every possible angle is taken care of. If there were more of that spirit displayed in the show game, such as Fred Johnson displays, little would be heard about poor business. This statement is applicable to the business world also. They spend more time in trying to find out what's wrong, than in ascertaining what's right. We think that showmen like Johnson, Averill, Holden, Lawrence, Resnick, McDonald, Rinzler, Latta, and the host of other names, all uncomplainers, who have appeared often on our pages, are doing plenty to fight back any form of business depression in the show game. More power to them. And let's hope that we'll always have men like them.

Bolivar Hyde Sold Town on Fashion Show at Paramount

Fashion shows are always good box-office builders. The one turned out by Bolivar Hyde, Jr., recently, at the Paramount Theatre in Montgomery, Ala., was no exception.

Hyde's show was well planned. He has been in the show game long enough to know how to cover every angle. The leading dealers in town were tied up, every window display well done, and the newspaper stories written so that the residents would read them. The show was staged with the showing of "What a Widow." One of the biggest stores in town, A. Nachman, took a very big part in the style show. They furnished most of the wearing apparel, as well as the models. They also co-operated to the extent of running a large ad in the newspaper. The show was run for three days, and the third day found the house still doing good business, the word-of-mouth comment having gotten around that the Paramount was featuring something worth while.

Along with this story, we had intended showing a copy of the front that Hyde fashioned for "Du Barry," the new Norma Talmadge film, but the photo was too poor to permit our making a reproduction of it. The color scheme, as well as we could make out, from the photo and description given us, seemed to be one that packed a selling punch. The center piece of the display was very effective, being the combination of Norma's head set against a background upon which was placed a number of stills from the picture.

Listen, Bolivar, we'd like to hear from you some more on what you plan to do for the rest of the season. We are sure that you have plenty of tricks up your sleeve, and will shoot them to us, as soon as they click for you. Right?

NEW YEAR'S EVE!

Are you making any plans for a New Year's Eve show?

In past years the gala stage acts which featured these performances always predominated. We are wondering whether the box office reaction will be as good for straight screen entertainment.

Many out-of-town showmen tell us that they are going to offer vaudeville acts as part of their New Year's Eve show. In fact they are depending on the vaudeville to get a regular admission price for this show.

But regardless of just what you have decided on for your show, you must be pretty well set mighty soon if you are going to run any kind of a show at all. Especially if you are going to sell all seats reserved. This requires plenty of advance plugging to stimulate advance buying.

Get busy and tie all of those loose ends together so that this New Year's Eve show will be the occasion for a great time for everyone.

Special Section Helped H. Herman Sell Amos 'N' Andy

A newspaper section was the first thing that Harry Herman, manager of the Paramount Theatre in Waterloo, Iowa, brought into play to see the Amos 'n' Andy film, "Check and Double Check." He garnered 386 inches of free newspaper advertising for the picture, in a six-page section.

When Herman booked the Amos 'n' Andy picture he set out to devise an exploitation stunt that was big enough to make an "imprint" on his prospects. After discussing the "sichiation" with the advertising manager of the Daily Courier they decided on a "propolition" that they felt would appeal to local advertisers. Their "propolition" was good for 386 inches of extra space.

Local merchants were visited and a plan outlined whereby copy about their store and its products should be expressed in Amos 'n' Andy dialogue copy. Herman wore out two typewriter ribbons preparing the copy for the merchants and in the layout of each ad was inserted two single-column cuts of Amos 'n' Andy with their names and the title played up in 36 and 48-point type.

The merchants were pleased with the results. The newspaper was grateful to Herman for presenting them an idea that would increase their lineage, and Manager Herman is counting up the profits.

The merchants were pleased with the results, the checking and double checking of their gains being accountable for the joy. And, of course, Herman profited also.

BUSINESS IS "DEAD"!

The ad that we are reproducing above appeared in one of the Detroit papers, exactly as shown. The black border is ours. Listed under the head of "Obituary," the ad of the Hollywood Theatre, upon observance of its accidental placing, prompted this remark from Thos. McGuire, manager of the house!

"We know show business has not been a bed of roses in Detroit lately, but this is the first time theatre ads have appeared under "obituary."

Fall Fashion Revue Was Executed By Weinberg & Crew

The work that Dan Weinberg, district manager for Warner in Virginia, and his crew is turning out is sure to be up among the circuit's top-notchers if it continues on its present routine.

The latest activity staged in Weinberg's district was a Fall Fashion Revue, run in conjunction with "On Your Back," in which the largest department store in Staunton, Va., co-operated and furnished costumes. The costumes were worn by local models, Weinberg feeling that interest would be enlivened by an angle of this sort. He wasn't wrong, either. Many persons were on hand on the two nights when the show was run. The local papers gave it plenty of publicity, and the local model again came through a winner, by virtue of the fact that a two-column list of the names of the models, and the costumes they would wear, was published.

The revue, as is generally found to be the case, went over very well, the theatre cleaning up on business, publicity and good-will. Along with his contribution, Weinberg also inclosed a mimeographed booklet on "How to Promote a Stage Wedding." This booklet, compiled, we believe, by him, was complete in its layout, carrying even the newspaper stories. The booklet is distributed to the various managers in Weinberg's division, and doubtless is a great benefit to them when they are planning a stunt of the kind.

Since he has joined the Club, Weinberg has shown his activity. Well, we're looking at your division, Dan. Let's see what else you and your boys have up your sleeves.

Did You Ever Have An Experience Like This? Pass It On

The show must go on!

The stern law of theatredom is that the curtain must never ring down until the performance is concluded. Many unique situations have arisen as showmen—in what we may term "the performance of duty"—have tried to adhere to the tradition. H. Shulgold had to keep the show going recently.

Shulgold is the manager of the Roxian Theatre, a 1,400-seater in McKees Rocks, Pa. A short time ago, just when his evening show was at its peak, the generators at the local power house discontinued functioning. Zip! Out went all the lights in the theatre. The emergency lighting system was immediately brought into play. A phone call to the lighting company brought back the information that a break of a half hour would be necessary before power could be again transmitted. Shulgold announced to the audience that a wait of 15 minutes would be required. He figured that if they would hold on for 15 minutes, they would wait the additional time.

Fifteen minutes passed, but then the mob started to get restless. The monotonous clap-clap-clap—the bane of every showman's existence—was started. Clap-clap-clap. Then the balcony let loose. Hoots, shrieks, yells and catcalls. The orchestra seat occupants picked it up, and in a few moments it looked as though the theatre would shortly be out of control. It was a crucial moment. The only way it could be combatted—from all appearances—was to give a refund to every person in the theatre. In view of the fact that the house was jammed, the plan did not appeal to Shulgold. And besides, the show must go on.

He started for the stage, angrily. Leaping upon it, he took a spot from the booth. This gave him confidence. A moment later he was kidding the audience and daring them to venture upon the stage and display any talent they believed they possessed. The tough crowd took him at his word. First one and then another climbed up on the stage. The audience guyed and applauded each impromptu act as it merited. For two and a half hours, embryonic talent of countless variety was displayed. Singers, dancers, musicians, comedians—every form of entertainer was represented.

All this time, the assistant manager of the theatre had been in constant communication with the phone company. At last a definite answer came through. There would be no power transmitted that night! What an obstacle Shulgold had to hurdle. He had given the crowd two hours and a half of real entertainment. He was reluctant to give them their money back. He had fulfilled his part of the showman's credo—the show had gone on. And now it looked as though he was licked. Finally he decided to put the question to the audience. Did they have an enjoyable evening? They did. Did they want money or tickets in return for leaving the theatre without seeing the picture? Money! Tickets! came back the reply.

In order to avoid paying money, Shulgold, displaying rare showmanship—we might say inspirational showmanship—announced that all persons wishing cash step over to a certain section of the theatre. The crowd was shamed. But fifteen of them, braving the stares of the others, went over. The rest of the audience accepted passes. In a short time the theatre was cleared. A check-up revealed that the total cash refund totaled a little over ten dollars. The theatre, despite the unfortunate happening, had a good evening. Shulgold's showmanship had saved the show.

It has been quite some time since an incident of this sort has come to our attention, the most recent example of quick thinking that we recall being the case of a house manager of a Broadway legit show, who, noting that, due to a mistake in cues, his curtain had been rung down in the midst of a very important scene, immediately brought up his house lights. A minute later the curtain rose again, and the audience believed the lowering had donated a lapse of time. They had been blissfully unaware of the mistake.

Mr. Shulgold has just sent in his application for membership in the Managers' Round Table Club and we want to extend him a cordial welcome. And we are sure that the rest of the Club is right behind us. And every one of our members, too, say, THE SHOW MUST GO ON!

Novel Signs On The Columbian Marquee Sell Attractions

Taking advantage of space on his marquee, Sam J. Wheeler, advertising manager of the Columbian Theatre in Wamego, Kan., placed cut-outs on it to dress it up.

We are showing a couple of photos of the finished product so that you may better see what we are endeavoring to stress.

The frame of the large sign, "Common Clay," is 70 inches high and 180 inches long, and is made of one by two-inch cypress lumber. The frame is made by cutting two pieces, measuring 15 feet, for the top and bottom rails. The two ends are next cut. They measure 70 inches long. All pieces should be mitered at 45 degrees to insure a good joint. When the pieces are nailed together, place an eight-inch brace across each corner to prevent their falling apart. Next cut and fit in the long centerpiece, which should measure 176 inches. This may be done by using a one by two-inch piece of thin, white pine lumber as a splice, which serves to keep the face of the sign smooth. Starting 45 inches from the end, put in three rib braces, keeping them 45 inches apart. The braces should be about 32 inches long and spliced with a one by two-inch piece of thin white pine. A good piece of cheese cloth or canvas should then be tacked on. It should not be stretched, but have plenty of play. It is sometimes advisable—and we have found this from experience—to put wrapping paper on the frame before the cloth is tacked on.

The poster is wet by unfolding each section and letting water enter it two days before use. The poster is not touched again until it has dried thoroughly. The poster is laid out on the frame before it is cut. Plain parts of the poster are used to match in the spaces. A medium thick paste is the best mixture to use. Smooth out the paper, also. You will find that your cloth will stretch when it is wet, but after drying will return to normalcy. Do not place the cloth in the sun to dry.

The head is made of insulite, nailed on 16-feet-long legs, which are three feet apart and firmly braced. Insulite is placed on the frame or top part of the legs, six feet wide and nine feet high, to allow for 18 inches of leeway above the frame so that a key-hole saw can cut around the head. Two sets of braces are placed on the head, once set 18 feet; the other, 14. A guy wire runs from the big sign up to the window. The wire is 45 inches back from the end. Two wires on each side of the sign, attached to the sign and top of the window, prevent the sign from swinging.

When using other 24-sheet cut-outs, lay out the poster before wetting and measure the head to see how wide to place the leg supports. Sometimes it is possible to cut the old one down, or salvage the insulite and frame. These signs get the business when others fail. They can be used on almost any 24-sheet. It is illuminated with three 100-watt bulbs in a reflector. Another reflector containing a 500-watt bulb is also used.

Well, there's the whole low-down. Look it over, and if you think it means anything in your town, you can give it a break. This is Mr. Wheeler's first contribution since joining the Club and if he continues his activity we think that he'll be listed as an active member. Let's have your views, Sam.

"All For One And One For All"?

WATCH THOSE DRAFTS!

It might be a good plan for you to try sitting in various parts of the house during the course of a performance and see if you feel any drafts.

This troublesome annoyance can hurt your theatre as much, or more, than rotten entertainment. It drives patrons away and keeps them away. Yet, unless someone calls your attention to this condition you may never know that it exists.

Once a person gets chilled in a theatre and has to put on a coat, they rarely every warm up again while in the house. Therefore it is important that the house be warmed up sufficiently before the doors are opened to the public and a careful watch kept on the heating plant.

If drafts are found they should be traced to their source and corrected immediately. Make sure that they don't occur again. Entrances, such as lobbies and foyers, must be kept warmer than the auditorium on account of opening and closing of doors to the street. This creates a cold breeze through the lobby and into the rear of the house. If the lobbies are kept good and warm you will not be troubled in this respect.

Drafts from back stage particularly should be watched as they are the tricky ones which are hard to trace and harder to eliminate. Make certain that your stage skylight is not open or too much wind coming through. Modern theatres carry heating coils around the skylight on the stage so this evil is minimized.

This angle requires a most careful check-up. See that it is not overlooked or entirely left to others.

Fred Perry Turned Out Fine Campaign On Recent Picture

With Fred Perry giving the films that play the Strand Theatre in Binghamton, New York, a royal send-off in the form of knockout exploitation, it was a certainty that when "Our Blushing Brides" blushed into the house, everything would be rosy at the box-office of his theatre.

Special stories and art work were landed in all of the daily papers on the Wednesday before the opening date. Two special style stories were landed on the Women's Page of the Sun. The leading department store in the town gave Perry a window, in which was placed stills of the production and a notice of the special style show the store was featuring. Two thousand tabloid stories on the picture were inserted in all packages and shipments leaving the store. The tabloid stories bore an imprint calling attention to the style show being given by the department store. The store paid for the imprinting.

A want ad was run on the classified section of the two local papers, for two weeks in advance. The ad requested that all girls contemplating marriage during the current month communicate with the theatre, where they would be given information on receiving valuable gifts in connection with "Our Blushing Brides."

The campaign clicked with every angle that was used. We are glad to see that Fred is still displaying that live-wire showmanship which has characterized his work ever since he has been in show business. Keep it up Fred, and remember to keep us posted on the rest of your work.

NON-LAUGHERS GIVEN PASSES

One that had them talking for days out in New Albany, Miss., was pulled by C. B. Anderson, live-wire manager of the Ritz Theatre in conjunction with the selling of the picture "Night Work."

Anderson advertised that anyone sitting through the feature picture without laughing would be awarded a month's pass to the theatre. Forty persons entered the contest. Two prominent business men acted as judges. Of the forty entrants, seventeen managed to hold straight faces, the other twenty-three gave up.

The house was jammed on the night of the contest. As the passes were good for only one admission, Anderson stated that he expects to profit by reason of the fact that the person bearing the pass will bring along a companion, at regular admission price.

How about you pulling a stunt like it?

Laughing Gallery Is Good Stunt For A Break In Newspaper

Whenever a showman wants to plant a contest in his local newspaper it can generally be arranged if the contest has any sort of interest value. Roger Drissel, manager of the Loew's Columbia Theatre in Washington, D. C., got his house a lot of publicity when Jim Lundy, the Loew press agent for the city theatres, planted a "Laughing Gallery" contest in one of the papers, the Washington "News."

The "Laughing Gallery" is an idea that has not been pulled for a long time. Some showmen may know it, though. It consists of running two pictures daily, one showing a star, with facial characteristics distorted, of the manner that you see when you look in concave and convex mirrors at the amusement parks. The other photo is a straight still, but not of the same star. The idea is to save all of the pictures until the contest is concluded, match them up, and then submit the set to the judges. This stunt looks as though it is going over big in Washington. The local editors think a lot of it. A two-column notice was run on it, thus giving the theatre free advertising.

A special throwaway was turned out by Lundy for the midnight show on Hallowe'en Eve at the Columbia. We think that this throwaway merits reproduction, so we are reprinting it here. Remember that you can use the same slants yourself. You don't need any special picture to make use of this sort of herald. The copy was in black and white, printed on paper used for mimeographing. Incidentally, the party was a great success. We want to thank Drissel for passing these angles along to us. Let's hear from you again, Roger.

Brown's Merchandise Nights Are Winners With His Patrons

Up in Moose Jaw, Sas., Canada, Charles Brown, manager of the Royal Theatre tries to keep them coming up to the box-office window by every means available.

He has found out that one of the best ways is to give some form of merchandise away free. His tie-ups with the local merchants are proving extremely profitable. Once a week he visits a dealer and prevails upon him to donate some of his wares, in return for which advertising is given him. Brown's first was a sack of potatoes. The next was a juicy roast, promoted from the local butcher. The roast was cut on the stage of the theatre. The person holding a number corresponding to one called off from the stage was entitled to the roast or whatever form of merchandise was being given away.

This is an angle that may, perhaps, be of some value to you. It might be an excellent Saturday night feature for you and help you build up business somewhat. We want to thank Brown for passing this along and we hope that he will keep us posted on his future work as well. Thanks, Charles.

Look At The Stunt Used By Lashley; It May Help You Also

When a stunt creates a sensation in a town, it must have good points to it. The gag that H. T. Lashley, city manager for Publix in Burlington, N. C., used recently went over very well for the Paramount Theatre when the house played "Whoopee" with the inimitable Eddie Cantor.

We are showing a cut of this page so that you may see what the stunt looks like and how Lashley used it. The residents were supposed to call up the 12 numbers, fill in the names of the firm and the product they dispensed, and mail the completed page to the editor of the Times, with name and address attached.

|---|---|---|---|
| 340 | 474 | 16 | 114 |
| 101 | 936 | 487 | 740 |

The name and addresses were placed on the mailing list of the theatre. Perhaps you'd like to try a stunt of this sort. The local paper should be glad to cooperate with you on this angle, likewise the merchants. Give it a little consideration. The question regarding whether any one will make 12 calls to receive a free ticket to the theatre doesn't mean anything. As is the case in a town like Burlington, many persons already know the numbers of the local merchants. They will put down the numbers without calling up.

Another stunt that went over well on the picture was that of calling persons on the phone and informing them that the film was playing at the theatre, and also mentioning a special "Booster Matinee," on a certain day, to which persons were admitted at a price reduction for one hour. They flocked to the house on this one. Other activities on the selling of the picture included a novelty "Whoopee" card, made on the order of the "Kibitzer" gag, so well known to showmen, that has appeared on our pages before, stickers were also distributed to local dealers, and they placed them on all packages leaving the stores. The local department store gave the theatre a window for a display of Stetson hats, and also mentioned the picture in their ads. The entire campaign was well doped out, with the result that Lashley profited at the theatre. This is the sort of showmanship that bears out our contention that any picture worth playing is worth plugging. No matter how big the star or the picture is, nearly every film needs some form of exploitation. We are glad to note that Lashley handled this one very capably, and we hope that he will keep us posted on his future work. How about it, "H. T."?

Lourie Elected To Presidency Of His Local Organization

Now that he has been elected president of the recently organized Betterment Association in Dorchester, Mass., Albert Lourie, alert manager of the Morton Theatre, isn't going to sit still and rest on his laurels. No, sir! His work put him at the head of the new organization, and his work is going to keep him there. Incidentally, the story of his election crashed the front page of the local paper. Maybe you, too, can organize a club of this sort. If you want any dope on it, drop Lourie a line and we are sure he'll answer.

As a contribution to this year's election stunts, Lourie passes along a card that he used to plug "Anybody's Woman," when it played the theatre. The card, a sample of which we are reproducing here, was made up in black and white. It measured five by three and a quarter inches. You can note the effective copy by studying the cut. The angle proved a very timely one, all of the heralds being distributed and the house rating extra business as a result of it. Lourie states that credit on this angle should go to his capable assistant, Nick Feenon. Oke, Nick?

We are also showing a photo of a resolution signed by automobile owners of Dorchester, When "Manslaughter" was booked into his house—and desiring to get an advance plug in on it—Lourie placed a resolution board in the lobby of the theatre. The copy read: "Resolution to Registrar of Motor Vehicles—George A. Parker (address). Whereas . . . 'Manslaughter,' Paramount's All Talking Sensation Coming to the Publix Morton Theatre Four Days, Starting (play date), Teaches a Great Moral Against Reckless Automobile Driving. We, the Undersigned, Resolve That as Automobile Drivers We Will Exercise Due Care and Caution at All Times—and As Pedestrians to Stop and Look Before Crossing Streets. We Are Also Resolved to Do Our Share to Bring to a Minimum Mishaps, Accidents, Deaths (signed)." Over fifteen hundred signatures were obtained. The board was mailed to the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles. The story crashed the local papers and helped boost the gross on the picture.

Another stunt on the same picture that went over very well—and again credit must be given to Feenon, who supplied the idea—was the car and truck that Lourie promoted, which we are showing in the photo. After being towed about the streets, the car was deposited in front of the theatre. This wrecked car gag also helped put the picture over to successful business. The work Lourie is turning out up in his district is certainly a wonderful representation of the live-wire showmanship that the New England showmen are so capable of displaying. We are sure that he is going to keep us posted on the rest of his work, so that we can pass it along to his fellow Club members. Are we right, Al.?

Have you talked it over with the Welfare Organizations?

Has the Salvation Army promised their aid?

Have you started talking about it?

Evans Has A Good Variety Of Stunts In Show Repertoire

Giving his town an eyeful of showmanship, Howard Evans, manager of the Richmond Theatre in Richmond, Va., pulled some stunts that sold the town on the pictures the house was playing.

For his selling of "What a Widow," he tied up a local department store and they consented to furnish him with models to run a fashion show every evening at the theatre. The show was held on the mezzanine, giving plenty of diversion to those who were forced to wait for seats, and also furnishing more entertainment for those who had already witnessed the screen performance. A round-trip plane flight to New York was also promoted for the winners of an essay contest, the subject of which was "What Makes a Widow So Fascinating," and was run in co-operation with the local newspaper.

A novel herald was turned out for him on "Animal Crackers." The herald was made up to resemble a fence, showing the heads of the Four Marx Brothers behind it. Copy on the front read: "The Four Funniest Men on Earth Are Waiting for You Behind This Fence." The inner and last pages were devoted to copy on the picture. The herald's novelty attracted attention, with the result that the message intended was conveyed. A few other stunts on this picture were those of running a guessing contest, in conjunction with 20 grocers. The grocers placed bowls, filled with animal crackers, in their windows, and persons were invited to guess the amount. This stunt, too, clicked. A local baking company supplied the theatre with 20,000 envelopes, containing one or two crackers in each, which were distributed at the theatre.

This is Mr. Evans' first contribution to the Club pages, as he has just hooked up with house. However, Harold, we look to hear from you real often now, because we know that a lot of showmanship goes on around your neck of the woods.

Granite Monument Was Given Irwin For Lobby Display

A showman who takes a great deal of pride in his town is George D. Irwin, manager of the Paramount Theatre in St. Cloud, Minn. He secured a granite monument in the form of a vase, valued at a thousand dollars, at no cost to the theatre and placed it in the lobby to typify St. Cloud's largest and most prominent industry. We are showing a photo of the vase.

The thought behind the monument display is the fact that a great many tourists visiting St. Cloud attend the theatre and are impressed at that time with the main industry from which the City of St. Cloud has got the name of being called "The Granite City."

Since the placing of the case in the theatre lobby, business men and visitors have praised it as a superb bit of granite craftsmanship, and have warmly commended Manager George D. Irwin for his initiative in having a local concern place it in the lobby. It is another step in Irwin's career in St. Cloud as theatre manager to make his institution an integral part of the city.

A two-column cut of the monument appeared in the front page of the local newspaper together with a description of the vase monument as well as mention of the theatre and manager.

It is certainly a pleasure to see that showmanship of this sort continues to be displayed in St. Cloud. Keep up the good work, George, and let's hear some more from you very soon. And include your photo, too, will you?

Meyer Had A Great Campaign For Selling Of "Good News" Film

"Good News" meant good news to the box-office of the Alhambra Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis., the house managed by Fred S. Meyer, when it played there recently. What a campaign Fred turned out! Every angle that he could grab hold of was covered and re-covered by Fred.

The orchestrations of the theme songs were placed with both radio stations in the city, the numbers and theatre being announced when played. Every prominent dance orchestra in town was given a set of orchestrations. The local Davidson Theatre in the city opened with road shows for Sunday. The leader of the orchestra played the picture's song hits for an overture. Title pages and streamers were secured from the music publishers and placed in all of the music stores and music departments of department stores. The records were also given a plug.

Window displays were secured in a number of sporting goods stores, poster sheets being used to effect the tie-up. The sheets showed football scrimmages. A tie-up with the National Family Stores was obtained. They sent out 12,000 letters to their customers. In the downtown store, 100 tickets were given away to the first 100 persons correctly solving a certain puzzle. The puzzle stunt was also landed in one of the Milwaukee dailies.

A wire to the M-G-M studios was productive of a telegram from Nick Grinde, director of "Good News," and a former University of Wisconsin graduate. The wire was presented to the manager of the Western Union, who had duplicates made and mounted on boards. The boards were placed on display in the windows of 25 Western Union offices. The heading read: "GOOD NEWS" From the Director of "GOOD NEWS." Marquette College, to whose publication was given an ad, permitted the stuffing of heralds in the three thousand copies sold to the students. The move was a corker, the students all expressing their intentions of witnessing the picture.

A collegiate Ford, photo of which we are showing, was driven about town by students from Marquette College. It parked at busy streets, with crowds gathering about it to read the notices on it. The Ford was on the streets for three days, attracting comment all the time. One of the local papers had been giving out a season football schedule. Through a tie-up with the advertising manager, Meyer sold him the idea of giving out a score card for the opening football games. He liked the idea, and printed up a quantity of the score cards. The cards were numbered. A notice was placed on them to the effect that if the number corresponded to any published in the paper, the holder of the card would receive a free ticket to the theatre.

An excellent front display was turned out by McDaniel, the house artist, and, in no small measure, it tended toward the success of the film. On the newspaper advertising angle, a double truck ad was landed in the Milwaukee Leader. Soda fountains were covered, streamers being supplied them for the mirrors back of the fountains. Ten miniature golf courses were tied-up and furnished with score cards, the back of which carried a plug on the picture. Printing cost was borne by theatre and golf courses.

With so complete a campaign, it was no small wonder that Meyer had the town flocking in when the film unreeled.

KURLAND KUTTING KAPERS!

Meet Robert Glick Of Neth's Eastern In Columbus, Ohio

And now here's another showman from the J. Real Neth Theatres in Columbus, Ohio. Robert C. Glick, manager of the Eastern Theatre, enjoys the double distinction of being the youngest showman on the circuit and of managing the only house in town that provides headphones for the hard of hearing of the Ohio city.

Fifty seats in the Eastern are equipped with the hearing device. Glick keeps a record of all the persons using the phones in the theatre, and to date his book holds over 495 names and addresses, included among them visitors from as far away as New York and St. Louis. Letters sent to the theatre, to Mr. Neth, and to newspaper critics prove that the earphone installation was a most excellent move. A list of coming attractions for four weeks ahead is posted in the reading rooms of the Columbus League for the Hard of Hearing, thereby enabling members to plan parties in advance. There is no advance in price to audiphone users. The stunt has done much to boost up the good-will stock of the house. And certainly it has given the theatre plenty of publicity.

We'd like to hear some more about Mr. Glick's work and we hope that it will be soon. And, oh, yes! We want to express our thanks to Miss Jean La Roe, publicity director of the circuit, for keeping us posted on the chain's goings-on. We want to hear from her again, too.

Milton Wight Had An Ad That Sold His Patrons On Picture

We've presented many accounts of the activities indulged in by the live-wire managers of the Inland Theatres, Inc., the circuit headed by Sr. and Jr. Mercy—and we are sure that you will agree with us that they were something worth talking about. We've had Frank Hill, Lyman Lynn, Arch Bartholet, Ray Myersick, Milton Wight and others too numerous to mention who have passed along work that contained something of value to their fellow showman. Their steady flow of contributions are typical of the real Club spirit. And the real Club spirit may be seen on the Mercy chain also. The men are "All for One and One for All"—a standard that probably accounts for the success of the circuit.

We have another contribution to pass along today. This one is from Milton Wight, manager of the Liberty Theatre in Pasco, Wash. In the time he has been in the show game, Wight has made use of every moment. He has tried to keep his house before the public in every way possible. One of his recent means for doing this came to light when he played "Holiday." All of the stores in Pasco are closed on Sunday, the day when a new picture opens at the local playhouse. Desiring to secure big business on his opening day, Wight made up a bunch of door hangers. Copy on them read: "Today Is a Holiday—We Will be Closed Today, So We May See 'Holiday,' Now Playing at the Liberty." Persons on the street were, of course, attracted by the unusual sight of the closed signs on the doors of the leading business establishments. They made haste to inquire the cause by reading the card. As a result, the plug for the picture proved valuable, the reader no doubt deciding to see the show. The slight cost involved in the printing of the cards was more than paid for in the additional business that resulted from the stunt.

THE SHOWMAN'S CALENDAR!

This great exclusive feature of the Club pages is now well over a year old and we can recall no other showman-aid, in any trade publication, which can be compared in value with this.

Thousands of members and readers plan most of their future activities by following the Calendar weekly, if YOU are not doing the same you are passing up a marvelous bet.

Dozens of the items published may just apply to your house, yet, if you don't see it in the Calendar you may never know until the event is over that you had a natural for boosting business or tieing into some attraction.

The Showman's Calendar contains a wealth of information for the live-wire exhibitors who are quick to grasp every opportunity to pep up the b.o.

Along with this story, we are showing an ad that Wight used to sell his week's show. There's a humorous angle that we want to point out. The ads for the theatre are run weekly, the local paper making only one appearance. With a whole week's show to sell, Wight's ingenuity is taxed to the utmost to get the best results out of the expenditure. In this layout, we want to single out the ad on "Her Man." Wight did not receive his press sheet on time, thus he knew very little about the picture. The result was a solid type ad. The remarkable part of this ad is that the copy just fits the picture. There's nothing excessive in it. The film, if we recall, is a thriller that makes an excellent audience picture. A perusal of the review in the Sept. 13 issue of Motion Picture News will bear out our statement. So without press sheet, Wight turned out an ad that sold them. And it doesn't detract from the lay-out. It makes the picture stand out. Being a good picture, it deserves to be plugged. If a film has the goods, it can be plugged to the nth degree.

We are glad to see that Wight is still delivering at his house. Keep it up, Milton, and let's hear from you and the rest of the showmen on your circuit real soon.

Forrester Released Bunch Of Golf Balls As Advance Stunt

When "Follow Thru" played the World Theatre, Kearney, Nebraska, Eddie Forrester, manager of the house, conducted a triple-threat campaign that won his theatre a touchdown, judged by the box office receipts.

Miniature golf equipment was borrowed from an outdoor course which went broke, and three holes of the course were moved into the lobby of the theatre. All patrons were allowed to play the course, and for every hole-in-one, a guest ticket was issued. The course was called "The Follow Thru Course—Tiny but Tough." Cut-outs were advantageously spotted on the course.

In addition to his regular screen advertising, Manager Forrester used a stunt inside the theatre three days in advance that created a great deal of talk about town. On the screen, it was announced that 24 golf balls would be released from the back rows of the theatre and they would roll down under the seats. Patrons were to try to catch them. If the number on the golf ball corresponded with the numbers in the box-office at the end of the show, the holders of the lucky numbers would receive free tickets. When released—the golf balls would hit the iron legs of the seats and bounce in every direction. The patrons entered into the spirit of the thing and were down on their hands and knees looking for the golf balls.

The Kearney Daily Hub ran a two-column 7 inch line cut of Buddy Rogers and Nancy Carroll, which was used as a basis for a coloring contest.

These activities more than put the picture across. We hope that Eddie will keep us in touch with his future work so that we can pass it along to his fellow Club members.

Try This One Yourself!

You may have a tough time believing that the picture below represented a truck used as a ballyhoo for Warner Bros. Theatres out in Hollywood. But where else, outside of the Movie capitol, would they pull a gag like this? At any rate it strikes a new note in unusual ballyhoos and if it failed to create the attention and interest of the prospective theatre-goers, then they ought to stop ballyhooing out in Hollywood.

Although details are lacking, close inspection of the picture reveals what appears to be a radio or phonograph which furnishes the music for the dancing girl on the truck.

Whoever thought this one up is deserving of a lot of credit. We'd like to tell you who he is but we don't want to hold up publication of the gag.

Joseph Luntz Still Displaying Show-Manship in Town

Another excellent lobby display plug for a coming attraction was turned out by Joseph Luntz, manager of the Valley Stream Theatre in Valley Stream, Long Island, N. Y.

The last time that he gave us a look at one of his displays, he enclosed a photograph with his letter. Unfortunately, the photo was too small for good reproduction. This time, Joe, sent us in a large photograph, but it was so creased up that it was impossible for us to make a cut from it. We will have to describe it to you.

The lobby plug was used on "Song O' My Heart," the movie starring John McCormack. A massive heart was constructed, from beaverboard. The heart was banked with flowers. In the center, four cut-out heads of McCormack were placed. At the foot of the heart, a replica of a scene in an Irish countryside was built, complete in every detail, down to the small cottage with the thatched roof. Imitation grass furnished the meadows. The display was illuminated by means of colored lights, secreted among the flowers. A spot also played on the entire display, a color tone being trained upon it that brought out all of the highlights.

Everyone stepping into the Valley Stream lobby was heard to make some complimentary remark towards the display. Their interest aroused they would be sure to be on hand when the playdates rolled around. The work that Luntz is turning out along these lines has been the subject of a lot of comment from the residents of the town who patronize the theatre. Keep it up Joe, and we predict that you'll be crashing through with so many records that you'll have to open a music store. Oke!

Jones Supplied Fans With Football Cards That Plugged House

Meeting football competition with co-operation, Burton Jones, manager of the Rivoli Theatre, Beatrice, Neb., is taking advantage of every opportunity that presents itself to plug his theatre.

For the high school games in Beatrice, Jones prepares an attractive four-page booklet containing the names and numbers of all the players on the inside two pages with his advertising smeared all over the front page. The back page is sold to two or three local merchants each week to cover the complete cost of the printing. So the theatre gets its advertising before 1500 to 2000 potential patrons each week at absolutely no cost.

He also crashes the sports page daily by offering a guest ticket to each person who can pick the winning team in each of ten contests scheduled for the following week. Two or three 'tough' games to decide are included in the line-up and that coupled with the usual upsets have kept the guest tickets down to a maximum of eight or ten each week in return for which Jones gets a break each day on the sports page. The name of the picture for which the passes will be issued is always mentioned in these stories.

That's what you call alert and active showmanship. Keep it up, Burton, and let's have some more accounts of it.

Lamb Turns Out Good Showmanship On Every Attraction

In Danville, Illinois, the sirens were shrieking when Russell Lamb turned out his excellent campaign for "The Big House," when the prison film played the Fisher Theatre not so long ago.

Two halftone likenesses of Wallace Beery and Robert Montgomery were run in the local paper as teaser ads. Simultaneously with the appearance of these teaser ads, reward circulars, bearing the same photos, were distributed throughout the city and within a radius of 20 miles. The circulars offered a reward of theatre tickets to the first fifty persons sending in the correct identifications to the theatre.

Five bookstores in the city featured full window displays of the book, a group of stills serving as background. Art cards announced the theatre and playdates. Along with these displays, the book stores distributed 2500 special bookmarks containing copy on the picture, as well as playdates. 3,000 copies of the local newspaper were overprinted in red with sensational scarehead copy on the picture. The stunt was worked on back numbers of the paper. On one of the inside pages, a colored herald on the picture was pasted. It gave name and date of the film.

An Anagraphic contest was run in the paper, prizes of tickets being given. The paper ran a special story on the contest. A large, new banner, containing four-foot cloth letters in red, was strung across the street from the theatre to the building opposite. The banner was used a week in advance. The theatre art display was excellent, an atmospheric front plugging photos of the stars being used.

Lamb had covered the campaign well, so it was not surprising to him to find that on the opening night they were in line waiting for tickets. We understand that he is always displaying good showmanship. We'd like to hear from him again.

Picture-of-the-Week!

Here's an idea that you might want to adopt. Herman Shulgold, manager of the Roxian Theatre in McKee's Rocks, Pa., in his weekly program, "Filmdom," imprints on the front page an ad or scene mat from one of the pictures he is playing during the week. A head: "Our Picture Choice for This Week." lends a novel touch to the front page. Maybe this would go over in your town, too. Maybe it wouldn't. Let's have some comment on the advisability or inadvisability of using the stunt.

MIDNIGHT PREMIERS!

For some reason or other many theatres formerly starting their big attractions with midnight premiers have discontinued that practice. What we are wondering is: did falling off of attendance prompt this discontinuance or did the theatres believe that such a gag was being overdone?

Theatres located in thriving, busy communities might easily get by with such performances regularlgy once a week or for the opening of their bigger attractions, but the smaller community house was certainly gambling when they tried to put over such shows.

If you are still running midnight premiers please write and tell us how you are doing it and how they are panning out. This information will form the basis for a series of short articles dealing with this phase of business building.

F. K. O'Kelly Will Be Represented in Future Club Issues

Though he hasn't been represented on our pages in quite some time, F. K. O'Kelly, manager of the Colonial Theatre, Bluefield, West Va., promises to be more active than ever, on this season's product.

One of his first stunts—used as part of his campaign for "Animal Crackers"—was the distribution of sample bags of the cookie confection to the patrons. No copy tying in the picture was used. The copy read: "Food for thought—see if you can figure this one out—you'll eat it up." Upon opening the bag, and seeing the animal crackers, the recipient would mention the title of the picture.

Kelly made sure to follow this slant up with his other plugs on "Animal Crackers," with the result that the picture was given some widespread publicity. Incidentally, the picture went over very well. Listen, "F. K.," we want to hear some more from you very soon. And when you send in your next contribution, include your photo, too, will you?

Willis Grist Had Fair In Lobby On Prosperity Week

A Fair Week was held in his lobby during Paramount Prosperity Week by Willis Grist, manager of the Carolina Theatre in Greenville, N. C. Fifteen merchants were sold on the idea; each had built-in booths in the theatre lobby. To give Prosperity Week added emphasis, the Mayor issued a proclamation proclaiming the week as Greenville Prosperity Week, with everyone invited to take part.

Every one of the 15 merchants had attractive booths in the lobby—setting forth some of their best merchandise. As the newspaper article explained it, the booths were on display during the entire week, but the regular hours for the fair was between 3 P. M. and 5 P. M. and between 7 P. M. and 9 P. M. During these hours demonstrations were given and all questions answered concerning the various articles on display.

Although an event in itself, the indoor fair did not interfere in any way with the regular screen entertainment. The merchants gave away prizes nightly and many of them gave away prizes in the afternoon, too. The merchants also ran co-operative newspaper ads which further helped to put over the fair and incidentally to promote business at the theatre.

Every angle was thoroughly covered, with the result that the theatre turned in records for good-will and business. We would like to hear some more about what this showman is doing to keep them filing up to the box-office window. Keep us posted, Willis. And, by the way, when you send in your next contribution, you might also include your photo and a little dope on yourself. What do you say?

Live Baby Gag Had Sioux City Buzzing About Mickey Gross

They did an awful lot ot talking around Sioux City, Ia., a short time ago. The whole town buzzed with suppressed excitement. The reason for the strange occurrence lay in the fact that Mickey Gross, manager of the Orpheum Theatre announced that a live baby was to be given away at the theatre on a designated night.

The stunt had never been pulled before in the town and it gave them plenty to talk about. Heralds were freely distributed about the town announcing the fact that a live baby would be given away during the showing of "Little Accident." The merchants all carried cards in their windows announcing the fact. In the lobby of the theatre, Gross constructed a setting which served as a background for another plug on the picture. We are showing a photo of this setting, so you can look it over and see how well he engineered the gag. A baby carriage, baby clothes, etc., were in prominent display. As most of our members know, the live baby is a live pig. How the audience laughed when the squealing animal was brought onto the stage and deposited into the arms of the blushing winner. All during the gag, the newspapers had run stories on it, and on the following day they devoted more space to it. It was a very well planned and executed campaign and Gross chalked up a record night's business.

He does other things besides giving away babies. When he played "Rain or Shine," he tied up with a local insurance agency and they agreed to issue policies, not to exceed a thousand dollars, as a protection against anyone dying from laughing at the picture. Real policies were given out at the theatre to all patrons. The gag had them laughing and talking, with the result that the film was given some valuable word-of-mouth publicity that resulted in box-office gains during playdates.

With Mickey continuing to turn out such ace work, we hope that we will have some more of it to pass on in the near future, as we know the Club is interested in what he is doing. Oke, Mickey?

School Tie-Up Aided Sams In Boosting Theatre Good-Will

Whenever opportunity presents itself, showmen will take advantage of the school tie-ups that have helped them along with the selling of their shows and added to the so necessary good-will building. A. F. Sams, Jr., manager of the Playhouse Theatre, Statesville, N. C., made an advantageous school tie-up recently.

A letter was dispatched to the local teachers worded in this manner:

"It is our desire to co-operate in every possible way with the educational forces of our community, and we will appreciate your calling on us whenever we can be of service to you.

"If you desire to bring your class at any time, just phone us and we will make you a special rate.

"Maybe you would like to give away some tickets at the end of the month to students excelling in deportment studies or any other phase of work? We will give you as many as five tickets free this month and for future months, if you care to use them. Tickets will be turned over to you to be issued by yourself to the honor students.

"If you desire to give this a try-out, just fill in the blank below and forward to the writer. At the time you designate, we will mail tickets to you.

"Yours very truly,"

(Manager)

The letter was printed on theatre stationery. A blank was left at the bottom for the teacher to fill in and return, stating the number of tickets desired. Sams also had special passes made up for the stunt. The passes carried a head: "For Excellence in Scholastic Work." The stunt went over well for Sams, many blanks being returned. The good-will gained by this angle was plenty and we think that he is going to make a term feature of it. Let's have some more of your work, Mr. Sams, so that we can pass it along to the rest of the Club. And include your photo and a little dope on yourself, with your next contribution. Will you?

Fitzpatrick Picked A Winner On Stunt; Ray Klein Assisted

A harmonica contest that attracted no end of comment was run recently by J. L. Fitzpatrick, manager of the Castle Theatre in Irvington, N. J. Raymond Klein, publicity man, assisted Fitzpatrick.

During the first week of the contest—which ran over a period of four weeks—Mayor Lovell of Irvington was presented with a gold harmonica on behalf of the contestants. At the presentation of the harmonica, the Mayor voiced his approval of the stunt being run by the theatre. Before the final contest was held, Klein pulled an ace stunt that helped the harmonica gag. He gave a gold harmonica to Joe Penner, a comedian playing in a revue at the Shubert Theatre in Newark. Klein and Penner are seen in one of the photos we are showing.

MEMBERSHIP CERTIFICATES!

On the fourth Saturday of the contest, a parade was held throughout Irvington, which took in all of the main streets and wound up in front of the theatre. A tie-up with all of the auto dealers in Irvington was effected, every dealer entering a car in the parade. Commissioner Harry J. Stanley of Irvington awarded prizes to the winner of the finals. We are showing the youngster's picture here. The boy was given a wrist-watch, harmonica, gold medal, sweater, and a ukelele.

A corking good week was turned in by Fitzpatrick on the stunt. We hope that we will hear from him and Klein again. What do you say "J. L."?

McKenna Used A Variation Of The Plane Passes Stunt

Here's another slant on the plane stunt which you may want to make use of in conjunction with some future selling of your shows. It was worked by John McKenna, manager of the Lyric Theatre in Jackson, Tenn. He tied up twelve merchants on the stunt as part of his selling of "The Dawn Patrol."

A full-page ad gave details of the contest and each merchant listed on the page stated what he would give to the holder of the lucky-numbered parachute. On the afternoon of opening day of picture, a plane soared over the "court square" dropping 37 parachutes. Twelve of them were numbered from 1 to 12 inclusive. The person finding one of these numbered parachutes took it to the merchant whose number and ad appeared in the paper—and then received the gift. The other 25 parachutes were good for two tickets each to see the picture.

The cashiers and ushers made the parachutes at a cost of $4.50. Material used consisted of nine yards of unbleached homespun material, six dozen strands of fishing cord—using eight strings to each parachute—one-quarter yard of muslin tied to a small lead washer. The stunt proved to be a very popular one and also served as a fine medium in publicizing the picture.

Listen, John, we'd like to get a picture of you and a little dope on your career so that we can give you a regular introduction and let the rest of the Club meet the showman who is turning out some great stuff in Jackson. What do you say?

Mike Zalesny Had Original Relics as Part of Campaign

Riding rough shod over the showman range in pursuit of business for "Billy the Kid" M. F. (Mike) Zalesny, manager of the Rio Grande Theatre, Las Cruces, New Mexico, tracked it down through the keen-sighted showmanship he uses to sell his shows in the southwest territory.

The important part that the real Billy, the Kid has taken in the affairs of New Mexico enabled Zalesny to exploit it from the history angle to excellent results. The famous character was well remembered in Las Cruces and the vicinity, thus Zalesny was able to effect some valuable contacts. These contacts, made with schools, colleges and local museums, netted him additional business on the picture, displays for his lobby and store tie-ups and innumerable other valuable slants, all tending towards a great run during playdates.

We are showing one of the window displays he obtained. The most striking part about this window is the fact that everything in it was original, the relics figuring in some part of the history of Billy the Kid. Plenty of persons stopped to look at this window, and the chances were that they were going to be right up at the box-office when the film opened. It is almost unnecessary to say that Zalesny's campaign went over like a prairie coyote streaking for a hole. Thanks, Mike, for letting us see what you are doing. Keep up the good work; and remember, keep us posted on what you are doing. And, oh yes! let's have a photo of yourself with your next contribution, will you?

Here's Still Another Way to Secure Publicity Inexpensively

This one from H. C. Brown, manager of the Modjeska Theatre, is one that means something to you, not only because it is inexpensive, but because its novelty is going to command attention from every one coming in contact with, or using, it.

When he played "Animal Crackers," Brown made up a special rubber stamp which read: "The 4 Marx Brothers in ANIMAL CRACKERS Week of Sept. 1 at MODJESKA."

Permission was secured from leading department stores, the Georgia Power Co., physicians and dentists to use this special stamp on the back of envelopes in which their monthly statements were mailed.

The rubber stamp was also used on many thousand paper napkins at leading drug stores, lunch rooms, etc. And also on paper bags in all of the prominent grocery stores. Brown also used a dummy flag pole sitter on top of the marquee. A card underneath the dummy read, "Waiting for ANIMAL CRACKERS to come to the MODJESKA." This stunt was used in advance of picture.

We'd like to point out that you can probably inject a comedy touch, too, into your rubber stamp by running a cut of the Marx Bros. Blue ink would be preferable in a stunt of this sort. However, you know better than we, since you are located right in the field, as to what would go over best, so dope it out. Thanks, "H. C., for letting us see this one because it will no doubt go over very well and find a berth with your fellow members. Let's hear from you again real soon.

A Showman Handed Out Gee-Gee Tips At the Race Track

A wide-awake exploitation man in Washington, D. C., pulled an excellent stunt recently when he hopped over to a nearby race track and handed out a load of heralds plugging the attraction at his house.

The town, wherein he is located, happens to contain many racing fans—so we are told—and this set the exploitation man to thinking. The result was a novel herald, printed in striking colors. The front and back pages contained copy: "RED HOT TIPS." Upon opening the heralds the inner pages were found to contain plugs on the picture, copy of which was worded: "Tip No. 1, 'A LADY SURRENDERS'—a sure-fire wild filly—100-1 shot. Play her at the (theatre, play dates). Tip No. 2, 'EYES OF THE WORLD'—another sure-fire 100-1 shot—a real stake horse! Play it at the (theatre, play dates)." The heralds were plenty effective. Every one at the track read them. For a trifling expenditure, this live-wire exploiter cleaned up plenty.

We think that we are going to keep our eyes trained on this showman, as the work he is turning out merits representation on our pages. Watch every issue; we'll have some more to pass along soon.

Happiness Week Was Seven Days of Joy At B. O. for Levey

They celebrated "Happiness Week" on the Century Circuit, one of New York's biggest independent chains, recently; and Bill Levey, manager of the company's Beacon Theatre in Port Washington, Long Island, New York, was right there delivering the goods.

Levey contacted every merchant of prominence in his town, and arranged for them to donate a ten per cent reduction on all merchandise purchased during "Happiness Week." The merchants were more than pleased to acquiesce to any plan Levey put before them; which is one of the reasons why he was enabled to procure the full page co-operative ad that we are showing. This was the first time that a full page ad had been used in this manner, and its novelty attracted plenty of attention and comment. Another valuable tie-up that Levey obtained was with a local jeweler. The jeweler agreed to furnish the theatre with a gold and silver pass, the gold pass permitting the holder to see free shows at the theatre for six months; the silver pass, three months. The passes were given to the writers of the best letters on "What the Beacon Theatre Means to Me." Many answers were received on this contest, and the judges—newspaper and business men—had difficulty in selecting the winners, all letters submitted being excellent; but the task was finally completed and the passes awarded to the writers of the missives.

The papers came through with some excellent publicity on "Happiness Week," and we note with interest that one of the local sheets broke with a story of Levey's career, as part of a series of articles on prominent Port Washington Business Men, written by a local journalist. This man Levey seems to have done a lot of traveling in his day, the paper informing us that he has traveled the globe, served in the Army, worked as an usher, done bits on the stage, worked in the real estate game, and many other experiences. He is one of our regular contributors, and his many showman stunts since he has been on our pages have, no doubt, been followed with interest. With a successful "Happiness Week" to his credit, we hope that he is going to make the other 51 weeks just as convivial. Right, Bill?—then let's see what happens.

Circus Ballyhoo Was Winner For Fishkin On Selling Of Show

Keeping right in line with the rest of the Brooklyn, N. Y., showmen, Louis Fishkin, manager of the Tuxedo Theatre, is displaying activity at his house. We want to introduce Mr. Fishkin to you, so we are showing his photo.

When he was at the Castle Theatre in Long Beach, Long Island, last season he had an excellent run on "Swing High." The picture's success was due, in no small measure, to the ballyhoos and other exploitation mediums he used. One of his best plugs was an atmospheric front, conveying the circus tone of the picture. Flags, balloons, etc., were placed under the marquee. A cut-out of a circus barker was placed out front. During busy hours, a man, dressed in costume similar to the cut-out barker, plugged the picture. A non-sync attachment over the box-office ground out the theme songs. Plenty of attention was paid to this angle.

In the inner lobby, striped awnings were placed along the walls to serve as a background for various stills and cut-outs. Colored spots helped to lend a pleasing tone to the effect. Any one entering or leaving the theatre was sure to be sold on the picture. (The inner lobby was also used as an advance plug.) A ballyhoo angle that clicked was a stilt walker who paraded about the town distributing heralds on the picture. He caused plenty of comment. The strength of Fishkin's campaign was seen in the capacity business that the house enjoyed. We are sure that Louis is going to display a lot of that showmanship at the Tuxedo—if he is not already doing so—and that we'll present it on the Club pages. What do you say, Louis?

The Real Club Spirit! "All For One And One For All"

"TIP US OFF"

There is no finer news than an announcement of advancement for any showman in this business and when such an event takes place you should, by all means, drop us a note so we can carry the news on these pages.

Remember, not only the members and readers of these pages want to know about it, but your personal friends and acquaintances in different parts of the country will be equally as delighted to hear such good news.

Personal publicity of this sort is far from "blowing your horn." It is just as consistent from the publicity angle as a news announcement from the heads of a national theatre chain or distributing organization. They use just such means of letting the industry know what is happening in their outfits, so you, too, should avail yourself of this method of passing along good news of your own doings.

Baby Golf Course On Huge Cake Was Ace Window Display

A window display that had them craning their necks to look at it, was the one used by Elmer R. Daniels, manager of the Capitol Theatre in Worcester, Mass., when he set out to sell "Follow Through" to the town.

The Federal Bake Shop made a cake weighing approximately 70 pounds. This cake had a miniature golf course on top, made of frosting showing Nancy Carroll and Chas. Rogers playing golf.

The cake was on display in the bake shop window for a week in advance. In addition to the attention value derived from the frosted golf course, cards in the window stated that the ten persons nearest estimating the correct weight would receive guest tickets to see the picture.

The cake in the window was surrounded with stills from the picture, photos of Carroll and Rogers and art panels playing up the picture, cast, theatre and play dates.

We understand that Daniels makes a habit of injecting novelty into his show selling. We'd like to hear some more about it. Let's have some dope on your work, Elmer, and include your photo, too. Will you?

Tent Reminiscences Gave Reaver Break On House Publicity

Just another of the many ways that showmen have found will get publicity for themselves and their house is the personal story in which the showman relates in detail his experiences while in some form of the amusement world. Vernon Reaver, manager of the Ritz Theatre, in Birmingham, Ala., grabbed off a flock of space this way recently by giving a full page of "dope" to a reporter on the Birmingham News-Age Herald.

The story, which related incidents in the life of Reaver when he was in the circus game, was well and interestingly written, carrying some real low-down on the inner workings of the members of the tent fraternity, in which their tricks were blandly exposed, much on the fashion of the disclosures to be found in "Circus Parade," the Jim Tully book. Reever, too, knows his circus. This is more than evident in the article, and we believe that he would be very glad to send any of you a copy of it, if you would drop him a line.

As a number of Club members have worked on the lot, we know that they will be more than glad to look at the old scenes again. But that's neither here nor there right now. We pointed out, at the start of this story, that this interview gag is a good way to get publicity; and we still say it. There are any number of showmen who can furnish the papers with interesting material, boosting their good-will stock, and house publicity, by the move. If you have the time to engineer a stunt of this sort, go to it. It will mean something for your house.

RUSSELL'S HOUSE OPENS SOON

"Glad to see you," postcards Colonel R. J. Barbour Russell of the Russell Theatre in Maysville, Kentucky. The Colonel's new house is rapidly nearing completion, and by the use of a cut of the theatre, imprinted on the back of a Government postcard, he tells his friends in Maysville that the theatre will open soon.

John McManus Gives St. Louis Views Of His Ace Showmanship

In one of the photos we are showing you will note a man on stilts. This man is said to be "highhat," the reason for it being that the stunt in which he participated went over very successfully. The man on the left, in the photo, is John McManus, manager of the Loew's State Theatre, in St. Louis, Mo., and the showman responsible for the execution of the gag.

Since McManus has been located at the State he has been turning out excellent showmanship. It seems that "we knew him when," and upon referring to back files of the Club pages, we find that he was a very active contributor when we first started the Round Table ball a-rolling. At the time the letter was placed in the plane, the airport was crowded with about 3500 people. The letter had been sent to McManus from New York. Upon receipt of it, he decided to despatch it to Greta Garbo at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. The other photo we are showing will give you an idea of the size of the letter.

Let's go back to the flying field. Look at the boy on stilts again. His name is "Hi" Arnold, and he's pretty well known about the city. The crowds at the airport were very friendly to him, and taking advantage of this, he jumped and cavorted around, having a wonderful time while plugging the show at the State.

Now that we have Mr. McManus on our active file again, we hope that he will keep us constantly posted on what he is doing to bring them up to the box-office window at the State. We think he will. Right, Mac?

His Radio And Local Talent Show Proved Winner For Miller

In North Platte, Neb., Chet Miller, manager of the Fox Theatre, continues to heave forward passes down the line and grab off box-office gains for his theatre. With the co-operation of a group of radio dealers, he recently engineered a very successful radio show—the first one in the town—that had the residents talking for a week after its finish.

Six dealers co-operated. A radio set from each one was placed in the foyer of the theatre, with a card announcing style, price and dealer. This angle alone drew considerable interest. The radio contest itself was a knockout. On the stage each night local talent was introduced. The talent competed for various gifts contributed by the dealers, who were right behind the gag every minute. The local talent danced, sang or played musical instruments. In order to enhance the entertainment value of the stunt, Miller had the contestants make phonograph records on the night they made their appearances. These records were run on the same night. The stage set resembled a radio station. The actors, etc., sang into the mike, which picked up their voices and transmitted them to the record room, where they were recorded on to the disks. The winners in the radio show contest were judged by audience applause, so you may be sure that a capacity audience was on hand the last night.

The dealers came through with a full-page ad on the radio show. We would like to have shown this ad, but postal regulations would not permit our using it. Before closing this story, we'd like to say a word or two about the student ticket that Miller uses at the Fox. The student card entitles any student to a discount on any picture at the theatre. The tickets break the price between the children and adult admission. If you want any more dope on this slant, drop Chet a line at his house. Thanks, Chet, for passing along your work. Let's have some more.

Kiddie Party Was Silverman Stunt That Helped Biz.

Kiddie business at the Belmont Theatre in New York City is on the up-and-up and going higher, all because David Silverman, manager of the house, sees to it that the kids in his neighborhood are kept informed on the many features that the house regularly presents to pep up business.

As a Hallowe'en stunt recently, Silverman arranged a party, to be held after school. The kids paid the regular admission price. A visit to a number of local merchants netted the theatre cookies, ice cream, lollypops, etc. Arrangements were made to take care of five hundred kids. The party was so successful that Silverman had to go out and buy supplies for five hundred more. Over a thousand kids showed up as a result of the Hallowe'en party. Look at the photo we are showing and you'll get a small idea of the crowd.

The front of the theatre was decorated in the Hallowe'en tone, as was the inner lobby. The kids more than liked the party. As an additional treat, a gentleman known as Uncle Robert, a well-known announcer at kiddie radio broadcasts, was present and spoke to the youngsters. He spoke about the party the next day over his regular station. This stunt gave the house some excellent publicity.

The kiddie business that Silverman boosted up as a result of this party will no doubt continue. It is a certainty that the good-will gained will help the theatre throughout the coming season. We understand that Silverman is continually turning out work of this sort at his house and we hope that he will pass some of his future work along.

Special Newspaper Section Obtained For Amos 'n' Andy

There was no question but that the special section engineered by Vogel Gettier, city manager for Publix in Grand Island, Neb., and Rowan Miller, district advertising manager for the Central Division, could be checked, double checked, and even triple checked, so foolproof was it as an advertising medium for the selling of "Check and Double Check," the Amos 'n' Andy cinema opus, when it arrived on the wheels of the Fresh Air Taxi at the Capitol Theatre.

The section contained eight pages of ads, interspersed with publicity stories, news stories and regular ads. The Amos 'n' Andy ads stood out like a Scotchman at a charity ball. They carried clever copy in the form of the eight ball babies' well known dialect. The copy tied in the local merchant running the ad, and upon close inspection, and noting the way the copy is carefully planned, we are led to believe that Gettier and Miller put in plenty of extra hours to make this thing possible. We are showing the front page of the section so that you can obtain some idea of what it looked like.

When the paper first appeared there was plenty of rushing done by the residents to look at it. And they did plenty of laughing, too. This section, more than any other part of Gettier's extensive and well-planned campaign, sold the picture. The merchants were well pleased at the way the thing was handled and they also reported that it helped to bring business up. And just as a matter of interest, we'd like to pass along the news that Grand Island doesn't think there's any such thing as business depression. The way they flock into the local theatres proves it. The Capitol drags down a lot of business, and the other houses report that they are not flopping.

With campaigns of this sort being turned out, there is no reason why the house should not enjoy substantial success. It is always a source of pleasure to us to see showmen chasing away the business depression bugbear in their respective towns, thus doing their bit to chase the terror out of the country. Keep it up, Vogel and Rowan!

They Got What They Wanted!

In the above statement is contained the whole plot of the publicity gag engineered by Al Selig, head of the publicity and exploitation department of Tiffany Pictures, who, at the recent MPTOA convention in Philadelphia, accomplished his purpose by giving the assembled showmen a line of his company's new film "She Got What She Wanted."

The question mark hangars, a cut of which we are showing, were placed about the hotel housing the exhibs. They contained nothing but the title of the picture. Should you decide to use this gag, you will note that a space on the hanger is left for a theatre imprint. It is not necessary for you to play this film in order to use the hanger. The idea is there. And it's a corker.

The hanger is so made that it may be easily hung on doorknobs, on wires, on auto door handles, and many other spots of value in the selling of a picture. The original of the cut was about eight inches high. If you can use a stunt of this sort, you will find it to be a change from the regular run of things, and its novelty a good attention getter. Figure it out, from all angles, to fit your local conditions.

Roy H. Rowe from Raleigh, N. C., Joins Round Table Club

A little dope on Roy H. Rowe comes to light. Roy has just joined the Club, and, though we haven't a photo of him to present to you, we are going to pass along the bit of his biography that we have been able to dig up.

He is the manager of the Palace Theatre in Raleigh, N. C., having been appointed there immediately following his graduation from the Managers' Training School maintained by the Publix circuit. He had several years of theatrical experience before attending the school, through owning and operating a theatre in eastern North Carolina before joining Publix a year ago. He studied the circuit operation in Charlotte and Spartanburg.

The Palace Theatre is a pretty little house, featuring a policy of split-week and week-ends. First-run films are played there. The house comes under the supervision of W. G. Emloe, the city manager. The town offers Rowe an opportunity to do some show-selling that will be of value to his fellow members—as well as to himself and his house—and we are of the opinion that he is going to prove a very active member. Drop us a line, Roy, and let's know what else is going on around your town.

Cromwell Busts Into High Dough Class; Buys Ford

Chicago—Richard Cromwell, 17-year-old Los Angeles youth, who stumbled into the name part of Columbia's "Tol'able David," got a big kick out of being photographed by the newspaper muggers when he stepped off the train here en route to New York for personal appearances.

"Do they really want my picture?" he inquired of the Motion Picture News representative.

On being assured they did, he remarked: "Well, they're not kiddin' me anyhow. I know there's no film in those cameras."

Richard ignored questions which sought to determine to what he attributed his success. Delving into his past, however, he recalled he had been a service station attendant in Los Angeles. With the advent of important dough, his thoughts naturally turned to motors, with the result that his first purchase was a brand new Ford car.

"Now," he said gleefully, "when I get back to L. A. I'm gonna drive that ole buggy into the service station where I used to work and make my old boss fill it up for me. Hot dawg!"

Red Ink Still in Demand at Pathe

Pathe again took it on the chin in the 28 weeks ended July 12, 1930, to the tune of $657,030. This includes profit and loss credits of $96,736 representing income on pictures which previously were the subject of charges to surplus because of excess book values as of April 21, 1928.

This compares with profit of $524,336 in the 28 weeks ended July 13, 1929, in which period there was charged against surplus or special reserve $834,961 in excessive book value of pictures as of April 21, 1928.

Little Value in Breaking Up Present Structures Seen by Wall Street

Banking circles hear that plans to consolidate Fox and Loew's have cooled off and that, despite the 660,000 shares of the latter stock held by Harley L. Clarke, both organizations will continue their separate ways.

The inside reason, as Wall Street credits it, revolves around a reported belief on Clarke's part that the advantages won't match up the effort, plus the difficulties experienced by all industries at large in arranging to swing finances necessary for an amalgamation of this magnitude.

Two events in the last ten days are regarded by financial observers as adding strength to the belief that merger conversation has ended. First was the election of Clarke and H. M. Rice, of F. W. Lafrentz and Company, bankers, to the Loew directorate to replace Albert M. Greenfield and Jacob L. Ruhenstein, the latter having represented Fox Film under the William Fox management.

Secondly was the re-election of the present Loew roster, headed by Nicholas M. Schenck, as officers of the corporation for the next fiscal year. This took place Monday.

Stay in Background

The dopesters figure that if the Clarke interests were moving on the merger plan, they would have assumed a more formidable position on both the directorate and in the executive line-up. The inside story, on the other hand, is that Schenck was left free to designate the personnel of the board as he saw fit.

The president of Loew's plays another important angle in the situation, it is further reported. Once declared to have been in favor of the combination provided he was to be the operating head of both companies, the belief now prevails that he prefers to stay at the helm of Loew's and M-G-M, advising and aiding the Clarke group if and when called upon.

Loew's, which controls M-G-M, recently reported a net of $14,942,017 for the fiscal year ending August 30, 1930, or the highest earnings in its history. Inside reports of an extra dividend, an unusual procedure in corporate history in any business in the last six months or more, were confirmed during the week. An extra of $1 a share was declared, payable on December 31 to stockholders of record at the close of business on December 13.

Alice and Billie Billing Is Cut by Warners in Philly

Philadelphia—That Stanley-Warner systematically is playing down discarded First National and Warner stars is indicated in the advertising copy for "The Widow from Chicago" and "One Night at Susie's," both current in the neighborhoods here.

The first film, made originally as an Alice White vehicle, is being advertised with Edward G. Robinson and Neil Hamilton featured and nary a word about Miss White. The latter film, once a Billie Dove starring picture, is being advertised with Doug Fairbanks, Jr., as the headliner with no mention of La Dove in the advertising copy.

Kent Not Partner In Checking Firm

Chicago—S. R. Kent of Paramount is not connected with the Federal Theatre Accounting Service, as has been at various times reported, Motion Picture News authoritatively learns. The stock of the company is owned by Harry Ross, his son and a Chicago attorney, each of whom has a one-third interest in the company, formed to check percentage engagements.

Reports that Kent was interested financially in the venture sprang from the fact that Ross for 14 years was connected with Paramount, is a staunch supporter and personal friend of Kent, received the latter's encouragement and aid in establishing the service, and since its formation has received checking work in Publix houses.

THE GOVERNMENT REVISES THE RULES OF THE GAME

THOSE Supreme Court decisions outlawing arbitration and credit systems hit the industry like a bombshell. The stunned in distributing ranks are running into large numbers.

The worst that was expected was an even break on the two trade practices under government fire, but chances for a double-barreled victory for Washington hardly were given serious thought.

Since the Thacher decree put the skids under arbitration, distributors consoled themselves with the comforting thought that the high court would order a reversal. The week's developments took an entirely different slant.

Distributors Find Plans Shaken

CONFIDENT of judicial approval, it was the distributors' intention, as expressed several times during the 5-5-5 conferences, to reinstate the old system if the Thacher decree should be reversed.

Failing in this, it was the credit system and its teeth which were relied upon to influence exhibitor use of voluntary arbitration. By employment of credit ratings through key city committees authorized to pass upon each exhibitor's standing, it was anticipated bad boys in the theatre business would be taken care of effectively and with dispatch.

Court Tangles In the Air

NOW that the credit system, as a collective act, also has been defeated, distributors face the problem of exhibitors running out on contracts. This is often done through transfers and fake sales of theatres and runs into millions yearly. Just how much is problematical, but an idea may be conveyed by the thousands of changes in the theatre field as reported by Film Boards yearly.

With the credit system removed, it is easily conceivable that distributors will be forced into costly litigation against those unprincipled theatre operators who may try to throw contracts into the scrap heap.

A New Industry Worry

THE prospect of losses on unplayed and breached contracts, therefore, burdens the industry with an entirely new and formidable problem. Bankers, quick to feel the industry pulse, already are greatly interested. They see a strong weapon placed in the hands of unscrupulous exhibitors and may insist that their producer clients return the deposit system to insure against diminution in revenue.

If, on the other hand, theatre operators take undue advantage, they must entertain the probability that distributors will jack rentals in order to bridge their losses.

The Sting of the Weapon Removed

SO far as this forum has been able to observe, all fair exhibitors favor equitable arbitration. Recognizing its manifold advantages, it is reasonable to assume widespread support of voluntary arbitration will be forthcoming.

The objections to the compulsory aspects under the old plan, which is now legally dead, hinged largely around the claim, often advanced, that the practice placed in the hands of distributors a boycott weapon instituted in the case of default on decisions which resulted in many theatres going out of business.

That, of course, is now removed from the industry's structure, as it should have been long ago.

Hughes Deal Off

Los Angeles—Although it had been announced officially, Howard Hughes' deal for purchase of one-half interest in Art Cinema Corp. has not been consummated, confirming an exclusive Motion Picture News report to that effect. Hughes is joining United Artists as an independent producer, and is to make three pictures during the year for release by the company. Hughes was to have brought approximately $5,000,000 in new capital into Art Cinema.

American Males Thrill Lya-Lys; Craves Gilbert

Chicago—Confessing a weakness for John Gilbert and an ambition to play opposite him in her forthcoming pictures for M-G-M, Natacha Lya-Lys, attractive foreign actress with a Sorbonne education, passed through Chicago this week, Hollywood bound.

"America, eet ees graaand. Such men!" exclaimed Natacha, reminiscing on her experiences to date, which have included a brief New York visit during which one of those men took her for what she described as a "fly over the city." "Are the Hollywood men as nice as the New York ones?" she wanted to know. The replies both surprised and discouraged her.

A Russian refugee, Lya-Lys fled to an aunt in Switzerland, and later to Paris, where she studied law at the Sorbonne. At twenty, she left school to go on the stage; and later made a French film, a German film, and a Spanish film, before being invited to Hollywood. M-G-M will use her in four pictures—more if she proves popular.

"Maybe they let me play opposite John Gilbert," she smiled. "What you think? He ees so graaand."

U.A. May Handle Columbia Distribution in England

Arthur W. Kelley, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution for U. A., and Joe Brandt, president of Columbia, are discussing a deal for distribution of the latter's product through the former's exchanges in England.

"Purely in the conversation stage," is how both executives describe the situation.

London—Joe Schenck's ten per cent salary cut is understood to sit any way but well with Allied Artists, U. A.'s British distributing company, which is doing the greatest business in its history. The story has it the English staff cannot understand why it should be penalized for conditions over which it had no control.

Skeptics Doubt That Head of United Artists Will Erect Theatres

Whether Joseph M. Schenck will go through with his proposed theatre circuit, announced with a fan-fare of trumpets in the Fox West Coast-United Artists jam, or will build a handful of houses at best, is a query being voiced in film and financial circles.

"It would greatly surprise me if Schenck builds any houses," was the substance of comment of one executive close to the situation. The impression prevails that the circuit is a threat to bring about satisfactory outlets for United Artists films.

Another factor which leads to doubt is the failure of the Howard Hughes-Art Cinema deal, which was to have brought about $5,000,000 in new capital into the company.

Schenck stated on the Coast that the circuit would be national in scope, the plan being to specialize in small-town houses. Sol Lesser, a few years ago, had plans for such a circuit, intending to develop Principal Theatres nationally. Lesser and Lou Anger are listed as Schenck's assistants in selecting sites and organizing the proposed circuit. Theatres at Santa Ana and Pasadena are planned as starters, with 25 houses the publicized California allotment, five of them in Los Angeles.

Seeks Franklin Hook-up

Schenck is quoted on the Coast as saying he looks forward to an alliance with Harold B. Franklin. He also stated there would be no competition with independents except in situations "where a monopoly exists." Independents in closed territories will be aided financially in building up presentation standards, it is promised.

Under the plan, 51 per cent of the new theatre firm, to be organized as a California corporation, would be absorbed by United Artists and the remainder purchased by individual company members.

Salary Boost and Cut Keep Lichtman On U. A.'s Roster

Hollywood—Al Lichtman has rejected the five-year contract reported offered him by Warners, and will continue with United Artists. The proposed agreement called for a high figure for the U. A. distribution chief, but its terms were met by Schenck. Lichtman's new deal calls for a salary increase and percentage, it is understood.

Under the old deal, Lichtman was drawing $1,800 a week, after the ten per cent cut recently enforced was deducted.

Franklin Denies

Joe Schenck may be looking forward to a theatre alliance with Harold B. Franklin, but he's taking a lot for granted.

Harold B. Franklin, in New York for ten days, told Motion Picture News this week that he is going ahead with plans for his own circuit entirely on his own.

Goldwyn Is Art Cinema Chief as Hughes Deal Flops

Los Angeles—Twenty or 21 pictures comprise the United Artists schedule for the year. Art Cinema Corp. is to produce six; Samuel Goldwyn Prod., four; Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks, one each; Gloria Swanson, two or more; Roland West, three, two of which will star Chester Morris; and Howard Hughes, three.

Goldwyn is taking over all production activities of Art Cinema, in addition to his activities as an independent producer, following failure of the Hughes-Art Cinema deal. This is to release Schenck for his reported plan to build up a national theatre circuit. Schenck intends to divorce himself entirely from production. Goldwyn has been a member of United Artists since 1926, prior to which he was head of the former Goldwyn company. He arrived in New York Thursday for conferences.

Schnitzer Stays on Coast To Keep Radio Costs Down

Hollywood—Joseph I. Schnitzer's original short-term visit to Radio Pictures' studio is lengthening into a real stay with no signs of departure for New York on the horizon.

With William Le Baron at the helm, Schnitzer will see to it that production costs remain within reasonable bounds.

Hiram S. Brown, president of RKO, is back in New York from Hollywood. Hy Daab, director of publicity and advertising of Radio Pictures, accompanied him East.

Fifi's Style Crimped By Laryngitis Attack

Providence—Laryngitis put a crimp in the vocal antics of Fifi Dorsay during her engagement at Fay's. Fifi was met at the City Hall by Mayor Dunne and given a great reception. Her act went on as planned for the first three days of the week and then came the quietus. Fifi appeared, however, said "bon jour" to all, but songs and dances were out. Audiences were disappointed, but gave the little French gal a big hand.

INSIDERS'

WARBLE the bankers:

"You're spending so much on production, but your rentals are only so much. How come and what about?"

Reply the executives, slightly embarrassed:

"Well, it's like this . . . "

Then comes a long spiel about Hollywood and the intangible somethings or other that enter into the making of pictures. Coupled with this is the word passed along to the banking fraternity that cuts will be made.

The company heads, of course, then take the situation up with their left and right arms. Production balks, but promises to behave more decorously after it's pointed out that retrenchment is essential. Distribution squawks and passes a lot of the blame, not all of it, to production.

But the sales departments go further. They make it very clear that, unless the studios produce what will sell, there isn't any use of talking about the impossible any longer. They point out that, if the selling crews are to be charged with bringing home the financial bacon, it is the general sales manager who should have considerably more to say in the production than he has today.

In brief, you now have a graphic picture of one of the complex and interesting situations in big company management as it stands today. Production maintains it should have the final voice, tempered by advice and suggestion from distribution naturally. Distribution is beginning to think otherwise, purely on the basis of responsibility.

It seems to the insiders both sides have a lot of arguments in their favor. There must be a limited number of prestige pictures made every year regardless of whether or not they make money. Don't snicker. It's so, if you look at this business with anything approximating a broad vision.

Distribution is interested firstly and lastly in making money. The big danger there is that, if sales managers have the final word in the matter, production may find itself limited to a restricted number of sure-fire picture-making formulas with the result that innovations in styles and limitations in faces may prevail.

Regular

It was just the germ of an idea that hadn't been reduced to writing for a scenario, and was outlined to a friend, with the suggestion that the two collaborate in writing the yarn for production. The friend, who had an in for sale of a script, agreed, but in the rush of things the pair didn't get the idea into motion.

Then a series of misfortunes befell the chap who had suggested the yarn. He couldn't go through with the collaboration, but the friend remembered. He set the idea to paper and succeeded in selling the yarn. By this time his friend had dropped from sight, but rather than take the advantage he made an extensive search. When it was rewarded he sent a generous cut to his friend, and the money was a godsend. Who says there still isn't sentiment and square-shooting in this man's business?

By Way of Proof

The Insiders, in dissecting some of the winter ailments besetting the business, last week discussed the foreign market problem and its relation to the theatre scheme right here in the domestic field.

The point, you may remember, revolved around the possibility that the major producers will find their revenue from overseas reducing itself to a level where, in order to pick up the slack, rentals in the United States will have to be jacked up.

They Say—

THAT two until-now-satisfied partners in a picture enterprise that runs into millions aren't hitting it off so well these days and that something or other may happen to their deal in the next few months.

That the picture business is to develop more changes in the next twelve months than the leopard and its proverbial spots.

That a number of Hollywood gentlemen, much accustomed to their own way, are verra considerably disturbed over the severity of the orders emanating from New York and

That they don't like the idea of submitting to the close check-ups on costs which headquarters advises will be instituted from this day on.

When a certain personality agreed to sign that contract with a big producer it was the vice-president of a competitive company who looked it over before the deal was struck.

Also that if the big producer knew about it, he'd turn mental contortions all over his elaborately outfitted office.

That the bankers are annoyed to death over management in one of their pet companies and that it's going to be their way—or else for the chap who now sits in the president's chair.

A splurge in detective work during the week uncovered a set of circumstances which further establish the authenticity of the reasoning.

Here's all the dope, minus the names of the two principals:

One of the biggest circuit deals in recent months was finally consummated because the independent who sold out to the producer who made the buy was keen enough to realize what impended.

The independent outlooked further than his nose, being a smart bozo, and came to the conclusion that rentals might prove too much for him to pay next year. He arrived at his answer by digging into the foreign tangle where he was quick to see that as the gross nosedived abroad up would go prices here.

Shortly thereafter, he made his deal.

Hollywood Whisper

Charles Bickford is off the M-G-M lot at last, but that's only part of the yarn. Bickford has caused Leo's studio executives a lot of grief, most of it centering around the fact that he had a load of money, didn't worry much about finances and wanted to play parts which the studio couldn't see. Now comes his release, via the mutual consent route.

Bickford may go to Warners. He also may go to Paramount—if that contract with George Bancroft can't be worked out.

Bancroft out, perhaps; Bickford in? Now you've got the idea.

Seething

Reports of unrest in the equipment field are heard from the field. The keen rivalry existing between the various firms is accentuated by a maze of conflicting stories, some of them designed primarily to build up sales resistance against rival companies.

Quite a few equipments are being yanked out of theatres for failure to keep up payments, it is said, and various companies are surveying the field in order to adjust operations to existing conditions. Tales of a new inexpensive reproducer, soon to be placed on the market, are in circulation. Some feel that a big cut in equipment prices is in prospect.

Pathe Takes RKO

A headline which ordinarily would cause something of a sensation, but this time in reference to a basketball game in which Pathe was the victor.

OUTLOOK

Report that Loew's is in the red during recent weeks is without foundation, according to Barron's, financial weekly. Based on figures for the 12 weeks ending Nov. 23, earnings for the new fiscal year, which started Sept 1, will be only slightly behind 1929, the publication states. It is safe to estimate, the publication stated, a maximum shrinkage of but 15 per cent, with net for the 12 weeks of about $2,600,000 as against $3,078,184 for the 12 weeks ended Nov. 22, 1929.

Net for the year ended Aug. 31, 1930, was $14,600,322, equal after preferred dividends to $9.90 a share on 1,378,352 average shares of common and to $9.65 a share on 1,413,573 shares outstanding at the end of the year. As a result of the profit increase, dividend rate is expected to be increased to $4 from $3 a share at the November meeting.

Roxy-Clarke to Talk Turkey

S. L. (Roxy) Rothafel and Harley L. Clarke have a heavy date a few days hence, when they are expected to get together on the former's future.

Roxy is seeking release from his $3,000-a-week contract which has a coupla years to run, since he wants to join RCA in conjunction with the new Radio City in which he is slated to be managing director of a theatre larger than the Roxy. While that project will not be completed for a score or more months, Roxy plans to devote his time to broadcasting in the interim.

When Roxy went to Europe, this Insider pointed out in the face of denials that the veteran showman did not plan to return to the Roxy and had so informed his staff. His RCA contract calls for a two grand weekly hoist, or $5,000.

One of the big points of discussion between Roxy and the Fox president will be over use of the Roxy name. Fox probably will try to prevent him from using his famous monicker in the new project on the ground that it will be injurious to the Roxy theatre.

The Case of Billy Prosser

One of the real tragedies of show business is the case of William J. ("Billy") Prosser, for 20 years manager of the old Keith theatre at Columbus, Ohio. Physicians say that death was due to cerebral hemorrhage, but his friends say that it was due to a broken heart.

Billy Prosser lived show business, and when the Keith Palace was being built at Columbus, he had every expectation of being its manager. However, almost on the eve of the opening he was let out. Maybe age, maybe not. Who knows.

Prosser never did get over that shock. He tried selling life insurance so he would continue to meet people, but it was no use. As William James, a big time operator himself before he sold his Columbus houses to Loew's, puts it:

"Billy was a man without a home when he was out of his theatre. He couldn't do anything else because his heart was in the theatre."

Don't Gag on This

One of the town's funsters says there's a new gag line resulting from Sam Katz's economy and "service 'till it hurts" program.

It's "Publix Pallor."

Time, the Healer

IT'S all one happy family in the M-G-M household once again.

In the closing days of 1930 what happened in the early days of 1929 has been forgotten and the differences between Nick Schenck and Dave Bernstein on the one side and Louis Mayer, Irving Thalberg and Bob Rubin on the other have been cleared away.

When Schenck, in conjunction with Bernstein and Arthur and Dave and their mother, decided to sell their holdings to Fox Film, history will recall that the news sounded like an explosion of the entire western front to Mayer, Thalberg and Rubin. They didn't believe at the time and openly said so. This Insider knows.

But facts were facts and, once established, served to develop the greatest schism ever known in the entire career of the Loew and M-G-M organizations. It had to be healed and now has been—completely—but the procedure was slow. It took the recent trip westward of Schenck and Rubin to finally cement the cordiality of relationship that prevailed before the sale to Fox.

They sat around the same table and virtually clasped hands. The family was reunited once more.

LONG distance theatre operation at its silly best:

The circuit is a big one. Has houses everywhere. Recently a deal running into several millions added to the list a chain built up by a well known independent operator who figured he could pull all the showmanship gags any producer-owned string could pull and a few which the executive line-up in New York didn't know about. He, therefore, held on until the pot was so sweetened he no longer could refuse to sell.

So it was the theatres changed hands. Then the System moved into line, flanked by rules on one side and precision on the other. And this is what is happening:

On Monday, an expert on projection tells the manager what and how to do it.

On Tuesday, the last word on lobby displays expounds his ideas and the manager, dutifully enough, takes the tip.

On Wednesday, it's newspaper advertising and tie-ups and again the manager does as he's told.

On Friday, the divisional manager makes the loop and raises hell because the booth isn't being run properly, the lobby looks terrible and the keynote of the newspaper advertising is all wet.

What's the answer?

The houses, smooth running and efficient under individual ownership, are now hotbeds of unrest and chaos. Nobody knows which way is the right way, least of all apparently the distinguished representatives of the brainstormers in New York.

If you conclude that profits are dwindling, you conclude directly.

If you imagine that morale is a thing of the past, that, too, is correct.

Maybe It's Temperament

On the set she's a love, is a certain Hollywood headliner. The whole studio is commenting on her meekness, her desire to do all that her director tells her she must do. But after the studio gate closes behind her—that's different. For instance:

The other night this fair damsel visited her director. The neighbors for long stretches around the house found sleep impossible what with the wild shouts and the choice miscellany of the King's English that rent the night air. Then doors slammed, a motor purred and around and around the block went car and star, sometimes on two wheels and sometimes on less than that.

It didn't take long for the outburst to peter out, the atmosphere to quiet down and the neighbors to resume their slumbers—until the next time.

Perhaps it's temperament. Maybe a protest against the studio that bids fair to ruin the clever player unless some judgment in selecting her pictures is displayed. You can't tell.

Bolstered by U. S. Court Ruling, Allied Seeks Protection, Block Booking Death

Steffes Demands Independents' Right to Participate in Solving Problems

Minneapolis—With compulsory arbitration and the credit committee system outlawed by the Supreme Court, Allied States Association next will train its guns on extended protection and block booking.

A round table discussion at which independents would have a voice in the future conduct of the industry and at which extended protection and block booking "of necessity must go out of the window" is proposed.

If that fails, exhibitors are prepared to carry their fight to the public, as well as go before "every legislative body in the United States to seek the outlawing of these two practices."

Stand of Allied on protection and block booking was outlined by W. A. Steffes, general manager of the Northwest exhibitor unit. He terms the Supreme Court decisions "complete vindication of Allied's endeavors to stabilize the industry."

"Allied leaders," he said, "have been termed bolshevists and destructionists. I believe the Supreme Court decision will place the shoe on the proper foot. In the future, Allied should be hailed as the most constructive element in the industry.

"It goes without saying that it would be impossible to conduct an industry as large as ours if part of it is operating illegally. Distributors, perhaps, will wake up and realize that independents have a place in the sun and that the domineering, unlawful and tricky tactics they have been forcing on the theatre owner are a thing of the past.

"I only hope that they see the light of day and withdraw their unreasonable protection demands before independents are compelled to resort to the court for last resort. Distributors may well be assured that Allied is going to turn down unreasonable protection just as sure as they fought down unreasonable, unlawful compulsory arbitration. Protection and compulsory block selling have no business in this industry.

"If producer first-run theatres cannot survive on showmanship in the class of theatres they operate, without demanding protection, in my opinion they should go out of business and make room for some one who can.

Sees Block Selling End

"Block selling will be defeated in the industry within the next year even if the fight has to be carried to every legislative hall in the United States and the public and press of the nation.

"Theatre owners are tired of being bulldozed and told what they must buy and play, when and under what terms they must play it. If the industry is going to be solidified for the various legislative battles brewing in 44 states, there must be several immediate round table discussions at which the independent exhibitor is given a fair voice in the future conduct of the industry, and at which protection and block selling of necessity must go out the window at the first session.

"It is not only independent theatre owners who are tired of being told they must buy features and 170 comedies in order to secure a desired picture. The public also is getting tired of this treatment. They insist and have

Myers Hails Decisions as "Vindication"

Washington—"Complete vindication of the principles for which Allied States Association stands," is the way President Abram F. Myers sums up the Supreme Court decisions in the arbitration and credit cases. The decisions, he says, "have an important bearing on other activities of the producers."

"The smashing victory won by the government means that producers, acting through the Hays organization, no longer can impose their arbitrary will upon exhibitors," he declared.

"Fortunately, the way is left open for the solution of all problems of the industry by negotiation between representatives of the real parties in interest, such as was attempted in the 5-5-5 conferences."

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES
No. 95. October Term, 1930.

The United States of America, Appellant,
vs.
First National Pictures, Inc., et al.

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

(November 24, 1930)

Mr. Justice McReynolds delivered the opinion of the Court.

The court below denied the relief sought by the United States. The parties are the same as those in No. 83, just decided—Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation et al. vs. The United States of America—and the opinion there contains sufficient description of them, their business and operations.

In 1926 the appellee distributors caused each of the 32 Film Boards of Trade to adopt written rules for establishment and operation of a local credit committee. These committees were promptly organized and have continued to function as required. The prescribed rules provide:

That to correct abuses and unfair practices the president shall appoint a credit committee of three members to investigate and report the names of all persons who have acquired, by purchase or transfer, theatres in the territory within which the Film Board operates. The secretary of the Film Board shall be secretary of the committee and to him sales and transfers of theatres shall be promptly reported. These shall be placed upon a "credit information list" and copies furnished to all members of the Film Board for their confidential information. Upon receipt of such list each member shall advise the secretary concerning its existing contracts for exhibition of pictures at the listed theatre and shall state whether the transfer provided that the new owner should assume and complete outstanding contracts.

That immediately upon receiving information of the transfer of a theatre the secretary shall request the new owner to furnish within five days' references concerning his credit standing, etc., and to secure this information a prescribed form of questionnaire shall be sent out. The credit committee shall meet weekly to examine and report upon the credit standing of new owners and furnish a copy of their report to members as confidential information. If a new owner fails to respond to the questionnaire, this fact shall be noted upon the credit information list. Also the credit committee shall indicate on the list every sale or transfer of a theatre which upon investigation it concludes was made by the previous owner for the purpose of avoiding or being relieved of uncompleted contracts for exhibiting pictures at such theatre. There shall also be indicated opposites the name of each theatre listed (excepting those whose new owners have agreed to assume and complete all existing contracts entered into by he prior owners, and of which agreement notice has been given to or received by the credit committee) the amount of cash security, not exceeding $1,000, which in the judgment of the committee is a reasonable sum that members shall require to be deposited as security for the full and complete performance of each contract thereafter made and entered into for the exhibition of picturs at such theatre.

That no member of the Film Board shall enter into a contract for the exhibition of pictures at any theatre listed on the credit information list for a period of ten days from the date of the first appearance of such theatre upon the list nor thereafter unless the new owner or lessee of such theatre shall have paid in cash to such member with whom such owner or lessee desires to contract for pictures the amount of security specified on the credit information list. Certain contracts for "spot-booking," hat is, for a picture to be delivered in the immediate future, may be made within the ten-day period and prior to the committee's report. The credit committee may from time to time remove from the credit information list the name of any theatre owned or operated by a new owner and thereafter membrs of th Film Board may contract with him.

That members upon demand of the credit committee shall furnish desired information, permit examination of books and records with respect to any exhibitor who has sold or transferred his theatre and has failed to provide for the assumption by the new owner of existing contracts. A member of the Film Board who violates any of these rules shall be subject to suspension or expulsion.

A copy of the "Questionnaire" is printed in the margin. (We reproduce at the end hereof.) It asks for many particulars concerning the new owner or transferee of the transferred theatre and especially demands specification of outstanding contracts for film service made by the previous owner and a declaration as to whether the new one has or will adopt them.

The definite point of attack in this proceeding is the agreement for the creation and operation of the credit committees and their use under prescribed rules to restrict freedom of sales by distributors and of purchases by exhibitors.

Ten producers and distributors of films, controlling 60% of the business, agreed to contract with exhibitors only according to a standard form and then combined through 32 local film boards of trade with other distributors, who with themselves control 98% of the entire business. The film boards appoint credit committees and these operate under the rules above outlined. The obvious purpose of the arrangement is to restrict the liberty of those who have representatives on the film boards and secure their concerted action for the purpose of coercing certain purchasers of theatres by excluding them from the opportunity to deal in a free and untrammeled market.

Reference to what has just been said in No. 83 and to the opinions in Eastern States Lumber Ass'n vs. United States, 234 U. S. 600, United States vs. American Oil Co., 252 U. S. 371, Binderup vs. Pathe Exchange, 263 U. S. 291, and Anderson vs. Shipowners' Ass'n, 272 U. S. 359, will suffice, we think, to show the challenged arrangement conflicts with the Sherman Act.

The court below erred in reaching a different conclusion and its decree must be reversed. The cause will be remanded for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion. Reversed.

Voluntary Arbitration, Individual Credit Sought to Offset U. S. Edict

Relationship Clarified, Is Hays Comment

With the relationship with regard to arbitration and credits clarified by the Supreme Court decisions, distributors and exhibitors have made progress in developing a new system of voluntary arbitration to the end that the values of arbitration may be saved without including any compulsory provision, Will H. Hays states. The industry, he points out, last October dropped the plan questioned by the government. In the matter of credits the new decision, he said, "simply means that individual distributors will determine with individual exhibitors a system of credit in each case."

Washington—Text of the Supreme Court's decision in the arbitration case follows:

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES
No. 83. October Term, 1930.

Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, et al., Appellants,
vs.
The United States of America.

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

(November 24, 1930)

Mr. Justice McReynolds delivered the opinion of the Court.

By this proceeding the United States seek to prevent further violation of Section 1, Act of Congress approved July 2, 1890 (Sherman Act), c. 647, 26 Stat., 209, through an alleged combination and conspiracy to restrain interstate commerce in motion picture films.

Appellants are the Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation and nine other corporations (distributors), producers and distributors throughout the Union of sixty per cent of the films used for displaying motion pictures by some 25,000 theatre owners (exhibitors); the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, a corporation with class "B" membership composed of the above-mentioned distributors; and 32 film boards of trade, which severally function within certain defined regions.

Each distributor produces and then distributes films through its own exchanges maintained in 32 centrally located cities—Albany, Atlanta, Chicago, Los Angeles, etc. Each of these exchanges has a manager and under his supervision contracts are made for the use of his distributor's films within the designated territory or region and thereafter placed in the hands of the exhibitors. Other distributors, who with appellants control 98% of the entire business, also have managers with like duties in the same cities. In each region all of these managers are associated through and constitute the entire membership of the local film board of trade.

Under the common practice, in the spring, when most of the pictures are still only in contemplation, each distributor announces its intended program of distribution for 12 months. After this announcement exhibitors are solicited to enter into written contracts for permission to display such of the pictures as they desire. And as no distributor can offer enough pictures to supply the average exhibitor's full requirement, he must deal with several.

Under an agreement among themselves appellant distributors will only contract with exhibitors according to the terms of the Standard Exhibition Contract, dated May 1, 1928. Ordinarily, neither party gives security for compliance with such agreements, by cash deposit or otherwise.

This Standard Contract is an elaborate document, covering eight pages of the record. Under it the distributor licenses the exhibitor to display specified photo plays at a designated theatre on definite dates. Provision is made for cash payment three days in advance of any shipment, time and place of delivery, return of the prints, etc. Section 18 (copied at the end of this opinon*) provides in substance that each party shall submit any controversy that may arise to a board of arbitration, in the city where the distributor's exchange is located, established under and controlled by written rules adopted May 1, 1928; accept as conclusive the findings of this board; and forego the right to trial by jury. And further,

"In the event that the exhibitor shall fail or refuse to consent to submit to arbitration any claim or controversy arising under this or any other standard exhibition contract which the exhibitor may have with the distributor or any other distributor or to abide by and forthwith comply with any decision or award of such board of arbitration upon any such claim or controversy so submitted, the distributor may, as its option, demand, for its protection and as security for the performances by the exhibitor of this and all other existing contracts between the parties hereto, payment by the exhibitor of an additional sum not exceeding $500 under each existing contract, such sum to be retained by the distributor until the complete performance of all such contracts and then applied, at the option of the distributor, against any sums finally due or against any damages determined by said board of arbitration to be due to the distributor, the balance, if any, to be returned to the exhibitor; and in the event of the exhibitor's failure to pay such additional sum within seven (7) days after demand, the distributor may by written notice to the exhibitor suspend service hereunder until said sum shall be paid and/or terminate this contract."

The Rules of Arbitration provide for a board, three of whom shall be members of the local film board of trade and three proprietors or managers of theatres in its region. This arbitration board shall have power to determine the controversy, make findings, direct what shall be done with respect to the dispute; "and shall fix the maximum amount" (not exceeding $500) which each distributor may demand as security pursuant to the arbitration clause in the event of the failure of the exhibitor to submit to arbitration or to comply with the award. The secretary of the Board of Arbitration is required to notify the secretary of the Film Board of Trade of the name and address of each exhibitor found to have refused to arbitrate or comply with an award, and the maximum amount of security (not above $500) found by the board. "On receipt of any such notice, each member having a contract (or representing a distributor having a contract) containing the arbitration clause with any such exhibitor shall demand payment by such exhibitor of such sum as in the judgment of such member or distributor shall be sufficient to protect such member or distributor in the performance of each contract with such exhibitor. Said sum shall not exceed the actual value of any print thereafter to be delivered under each such contract plus the maximum amount fixed by the Board of Arbitration as aforesaid. Thereafter each distributor (represented in the membership) to whom such exhibitor shall have failed within seven (7) days to pay the amount of security so demanded by such distributor shall proceed to suspend service under each such contract until such exhibitor shall have furnished such security or complied with the decision of such Arbitration Board. If service under any such contract shall be so suspended for a period of 10 days of such contract, at the option of the distributor, then be cancelled. No member or distributor having so suspended service under any such contract with such exhibitor shall thereafter resume service under any such contract unless and until such exhibitor shall have furnished said security to such member or distributor or shall have complied with the decision of the Arbitration Board. Upon the happening of either of such events service under such contract shall be promptly resumed by such member or distributor."

The record discloses that ten competitors in interstate commerce, controlling 60 per cent of the entire film business, have agreed to restrict their liberty of action by refusing to contract for display of pictures except upon a standard form which provides for compulsory joint action by them in respect of dealings

New Standard Contract Relied Upon to Help Bridge Gap Caused by Government

New standard licensing agreement drafted by the 5-5-5 conference and the adoption by the various companies of individual systems for handling credits will be relied upon by distributors to meet the situation caused by the outlawing of arbitration and credit systems in two decisions made this week by the United States Supreme Court.

The decisions upheld the Thacher decree declaring arbitration illegal, and reversed the other Thacher decree which held the credit system legal.

The proposed new form of contract, known as the Standard Licensing Agreement and drafted by representatives of the M. P. T. O. A., Allied States Association, affiliated exhibitors and distributors embodies a voluntary arbitration agreement without any compulsory or punitive provisions. The agreement has been approved by the M. P. T. O. A., and three units of Allied to date, indicating its general acceptance by all exhibitors.

Under the plan, a master contract will be submitted to all exhibitors for signature, which will signify his acceptance or rejection of the agreement. If he accepts, then the contract will be effective so far as he is concerned, and business henceforward will be done on a short-form contract, which will embody the provisions of the master form. The short form will be concerned only with price and playing arrangement. If he rejects, then business will be done on the company's individual contract.

In the matter of credit each company will chart its own course.

Old Arbitration Illegal

In the decisions the Supreme Court upheld the Federal Court in New York in its opinion that the arbitration provisions of the standard contract violated laws regarding restraint of trade, the other reversing the findings of the same court in holding that the credit committees did not violate those laws.

The arbitration case was brought against Paramount Famous Lasky and a number of other respondents; the credit case was brought against First National and others. Both involved the same respondents, but were conducted separately.

The court's decisions were read by Associate Justice McReynolds. The arbitration provisions of the uniform contract, it was said, had a "necessary and inevitable" tendency to "produce material and unreasonable restraint of interstate commerce in violation of the Sherman Act."

"The court below accepted this view and directed an appropriate injunction against future action under the unlawful plan," the court continued. "We agree with its conclusion and the challenged decree must be affirmed."

"It may be," the court said, "that arbitration is well adapted to the needs of the motion picture industry, but when under the

Prohibitions of Trust Statute Can't Be Evaded

with one who fails to observe such a contract with any distributor, all with the manifest purpose to coerce the exhibitor and limit the freedom of trade.

The United States maintain that the necessary and inevitable tendency of the outlined agreement and combination (described with greater detail in the opinion below) is to produce material and unreasonable restraint of interstate commerce in violation of the Sherman Act. Eastern States Lumber Ass'n vs. United States, 234 U. S. 600, 614; Binderup vs. Pathe Exchange, 263 U. S. 291, 312. The court below accepted this view and directed an appropriate injunction against future action under the unlawful plan. We agree with its conclusion and the challenged decree must be affirmed.

The appellants claim: (1) The Standard Exhibition Contract and Rules of Arbitration dated May 1, 1928, having been evolved after six years of discussion and experimentation, are reasonable and normal regulations; so that whatever restraint follows falls short of unlawful coercion. (2) Arbitration is well adapted to the needs of the motion picture industry. (3) The manner in which the Contract and Rules have worked out in practice, and the significant absence of complaints, reflect their reasonable character. (4) The decree is inconsistent with the stipulated facts, also with the court's findings of fact.

"Founded upon broad conceptions of public policy, the prohibitions of the statute (Sherman Act) were enacted to prevent not the mere injury to an individual which would arise from the doing of the prohibited acts, but the harm to the general public which would be occasioned by the evils which it was contemplated would be prevented, and hence not only the prohibitions of the statute, but the remedies which it provided were co-extensive with such conceptions." Wilder Mfg. Co. vs. Corn Products Co., 236 U. S. 165, 174. "The purpose of the Sherman Act is to prohibit monopolies, contracts and combinations which probably would unduly interfere with the free exercise of their rights by those engaged, or who wish to engage, in trade and commerce—in a word, to preserve the right of freedom to trade." United States vs. Colgate & Co., 250 U. S. 300, 307. "The fundamental purpose of the Sherman Act was to secure equality of opportunity and to protect the public against evils commonly incident to destruction of competition through monopolies and combinations in restraint of trade." Ramsay Co. vs. Bill Posters' Ass'n, 260 U. S. 501, 512. "The Sherman Act was intended to secure equality of opportunity and to protect the public against evils commonly incident to monopolies and those abnormal contracts and combinations which tend directly to suppress the conflict for advantage called competition—the play of the contending forces ordinarily engendered by an honest desire for gain." United States vs. American Oil Co., 262 U. S. 371, 388.

The fact that the Standard Exhibition Contract and Rules of Arbitration were evolved after six years of discussion and experimentation does not show that they were either normal or reasonable regulations. That the arrangement existing between the parties cannot be classed among "those normal and usual agreements in aid of trade and commerce," spoken of in Eastern States Lumber Ass'n vs. United States, supra, 612, is manifest. Certainly it is unusual and we think it necessarily and directly tends to destroy "the kind of competition to which the public has long looked for protection." United States vs. American Oil Co., supra, 390.

The Sherman Act seeks to protect the public against evils commonly incident to the unreasonable destruction of competition and no length of discussion or experimentation among parties to a combination which produces the inhibited result can give validity to their action. Congress has so legislated "as to prevent resort to practices which unduly restrain competition or unduly obstruct the free flow of such commerce, and private choice of means must yield to the national authority thus exerted." Eastern States Lumber Ass'n vs. United States, supra, 613.

It may be that arbitration is well adapted to the needs of the motion picture industry; but when under the guise of arbitration parties enter into unusual arrangements which unreasonably suppress normal competition their action becomes illegal.

In order to establish violation of the Sherman Act it is not necessary to show that the challenged arrangement suppresses all competition between the parties or that the parties themselves are discontented with the arrangement. The interest of the public in the preservation of competition is the primary consideration. The prohibitions of the statute cannot "be evaded by good motives. The law is its own measure of right and wrong, of what it permits, or forbids, and the judgment of the courts cannot be set up against it in a supposed accommodation of its policy with the good intention of parties, and it may be, of some good results." Standard Sanitary Mfg. Co. vs. United States, 226 U. S. 20, 49.

Upon examination of the record we cannot say that the decree of the court below is inconsistent with the stipulated facts or with proper regard to what that court held in respect of the facts.

The challenge decree must be affirmed.

The decree then cites the arbitration clause of the contract.

Individual Credit Sought to Offset Government Edict

guise of arbitration parties enter into unusual arrangements which unreasonably suppress normal competition their actions become illegal.

"In order to establish violation of the Sherman act it is not necessary to show that the challenged arrangement suppresses all competition between the parties or that the parties themselves are discontented with the arrangement."

"Upon examination of the record we cannot say that the decree of the court below is inconsistent with the stipulated facts or with proper regard to what the court held in respect of the facts," the decision concluded.

The Ruling on Credits

Reversing Judge Thacher's decision in the credit committees case, the court held that the "obvious purpose" of their organization was that of "coercing certain purchasers of theatres" by requiring them to comply with certain rules regarding their acceptance of a requirement that they complete contracts held by former owners or operators, etc.

"Ten producers and distributors, controlling 60 per cent of the entire film business, agreed to contract with exhibitors only according to a standard form and then appointed their 32 local film boards of trade with other distributors who with themselves controlled 98 per cent of the entire business," it was pointed out.

Further, the court continued, "the film boards appointed credit committees and these operated under the rules above outlined. The obvious purpose of the arrangement is to restrict the liberty of those who have representatives on the film boards to secure their concerted action for the purpose of coercing certain purchasers of theatres by excluding them from the opportunity to deal in a free and untrammeled market.

"The definite point of attack in this proceeding," the court said, "is the agreement for the creation and operation of credit committees and their use under prescribed rules to restrict freedom of sales by distributors and of purchases by exhibitors."

Apart on Credit System

The committees, it was pointed out, were set up in 1926. The declared purpose of the distributors in forming them was to safeguard themselves from evasion of contract by unsatisfied exhibitors who might quit themselves of responsibility by disposing of their houses.

The companies claimed that the contract and arbitration rules, having been evolved after six years of consideration and experimentation, were reasonable and normal regulations, and that arbitration was well adapted to the needs of the industry, and that the manner in which the rules and contract worked out in practice and the "significant absence" of complaints, reflected their reasonable character.

These contentions were contested by the Government, which alleged that the arbitration provisions constituted a conspiracy in unlawful restraint of interstate commerce, that they were unjustly enforced, and that the evidence in the case indicates that a great majority of exhibitors whose theatres are not owned or controlled by distributors or producers disapproved of the provisions.

The Federal Court at New York, in a decision rendered by former Judge Thacher, ruled arbitration illegal and the companies appealed.

In the credit committee case, in which Judge Thacher had ruled in favor of the distributors, the Government had appealed on the contention that to require that exhibitors acquiring theatres bind themselves to complete contracts made by previous owners or operators was in violation of the laws relating to restraint of trade.

Allied Seeks End Of Protection, Block Booking

a right to choose what pictures they shall see, which is impossible under the block system in closed situations where only two or three changes are made per week.

"A few round table conferences may be able to straighten out these difficulties. At least, I am hopeful, but in case distributors don't realize that block booking and protection must be eliminated from the industry at once, there is only one thing left to be done and that is for the independent exhibitor to prepare himself for a fight which must be carried through the press and to the public and every legislative body of the United States.

Should Honor Contracts

"It behooves the independent to give some serious thinking to old contracts, especially. Unless the independent is given some kind of assurance that he will be allowed to stay in business, I am afraid to think of the millions of dollars in contracts that will be thrown out the window. This, in my opinion, would be a destructive step, and I believe can be avoided and ironed out if the proper parties are brought together for a series of serious conferences.

"However, if the other branches of the industry do not see the advisability of lending their ear to independents for a little common sense, there is only one thing left for the independents and public to do: Bring to the attention of the powers-that-be that the unreasonable protection that the producers, through the Hays office, have foisted on the independents is just as unlawful and just as illegal as the old standard exhibition contract and compulsory arbitration as protection is being forced through concerted methods of local film boards in their respective territories."

Hollywood—They beat the New York influence to it on the M-G-M lot. Slashes of overhead were instituted on the big Culver City lot fully two weeks before Nick Schenck, Bob Rubin, Charles C. Moskowitz and Felix Feist arrived here.

As a result when the Eastern contingent appeared in Hollywood to point out to Louis B. Mayer and Irving Thalberg the need to trim costs, they were met with a program and figures to demonstrate that this was already being done with additional cuts on the way.

Prior to decision of Schenck to go West, New York headquarters had been telephoning the Coast with far more frequency than prevails under the normal routine of studio business. Those calls emphasized the necessity of effecting economies wherever consistently possible.

The studio took the hint.

Wall Street Moguls Stunned by Intricacies of Industry; Willing to Wait

Early indications from the field of battle indicate that the major companies of the industry, on the spot with their bankers because of high overhead and rising production costs, will win the conflict.

Spurred into action as a direct result of a bankers' mass meeting down town some weeks ago, at which the entire situation in the business was reviewed and decision reached that something had to be done about it, industry executives, as noted, seized the hint and prepared to get their houses in order. This is now actively in work.

The bankers decided, as pointed out in Motion Picture News last week, to give the trade full opportunity to effect the adjustments necessary in slashing budgets. The inclination now is to continue their behind-the-scenes activity without stepping into the business any more actively than they have thus far.

The reason for this revolves around the realization that motion pictures are a perishable commodity and entail handling by experts who know the ropes. The bankers are believed to understand that, while their knowledge of assets and liabilities may adjust the balance of the scales on a more even keel, they are lacking in the fundamentals of showmanship knowledge which mark operations in the three major branches of the business.

Jack Hess Sees Too Many Stars

Chicago—Jack Hess pulled a speedy one in utilizing Mae Tinee's estimate of the two Spoor exhibitions as a composite review. Adding up Mae's two estimates, Jack found they totalled seven "stars," and properly advertised the bill as a seven-star program. Correct, but confusing to a lot of people who hadn't seen the reviews. These latter perplexed ones immediately wrote Miss Kurner for verification, and elicited the following reply from her via Saturday's Tribune: "In answer to inquiries I would like to say that I did not give 'Danger Lights' seven stars. Ridiculous! 'Niagara Falls' received four stars. 'Danger Lights' was awarded three stars. Both pictures are on the State-Lake's program, but they have no connection save that both were photographed by the new 'third dimension' process. M. T." ### 140 Houses Dark

Los Angeles—Overseated condition of many situations is shown by report that 140 Fox West Coast Theatres are dark out of the 600-odd theatres of the chain. The majority of these are understood to have been hought to end competition, so they will remain dark until business takes a turn for the better.

Bankers' Eagle Eyes Scan Effect Of Court Rulings

Bankers are viewing with concern the possible effect of the arbitration and credit decisions by the Supreme Court upon the financial structure of the industry. Millions of dollars in rentals and expensive delays are involved in the two actions, as well as the enforcibility of contracts.

Arbitration was discontinued in the industry last October, but the credit system has been kept in force, being relied upon to prevent exhibitors from running out on contracts. With this safeguard for distributors removed, individual deposits are expected to be resorted to by distributors for their protection.

F. & M. Route Changed; Singer to Produce

Fanchon & Marco has reorganized its route, appointed Harry Singer eastern production manager and is placing a manager in charge of each unit. Singer formerly was with RKO. He soon will open a new Chicago office.

A new headquarters is being established at Milwaukee, where new scenery and new costumes are to be stocked and acts coming east rehearsed. St. Louis formerly was the eastern contact point.

The route now covers 52 weeks and as many managers to be employed will handle publicity on their attractions and advance campaigns for the unit following. M. D. Howe, general booking manager, will have supervision over the managers.

Labor Tilt at Portland Over; Two-Year Deal Set

Portland, Ore.—Labor troubles at local theatres here are over for the next two years. Contracts have been signed by officials of M. P. Operators' Union No. 59 and Fox Broadway, Paramount, RKO Orpheum and Rialto theatres whereby the present wage scale will be maintained for another two years from last September, at the end of which period the union operators ask for another raise of $2.50 a week minimum to the present scale.

Publix, Deep in Red in Detroit, May Turn Back 6 Theatres to John Kunsky

Big Shots Break Fire Laws

Chicago—C. E. Beck, manager of the Castle, previewed "The Tiger of Berlin" (UFA) Friday night for a generous and imposing list of officials of the local bars of justice, arms of the law, heads of civic organizations and successful politicians. The house was jammed so that the walls bulged a little further into State Street. Even the aisles were filled with chairs, which was "okay" considering the potential influence of that audience. If the fire marshal himself had walked in and protested he would have been reading "Help Wanted" columns in Saturday morning's papers.

Providence Fans No Saps; Only Ace Pictures Draw 'Em

Providence—Electric signs mean something today to the dyed-in-the-wool theatre fan who studies his billing with the same care that he accords his radio program.

Exhibitors here say that no more will the fans flock to a house merely because it has shown an ace picture the month before. Consistently good fare must be meted out or the business goes elsewhere.

A check-up by Motion Picture News reveals some interesting facts concerning pictures which did sensational business and those that fell below normal.

Loew's State, the biggest house downtown, which has a top gross of $25,000 and a low of $15,000, was found to have reached the peak with "Whoopee," "Caught Short" and "Let Us Be Gay." The billings that failed to hit their stride were "Doughboy," "Du Barry" and "The Bad One."

At the RKO Albee "All Quiet on the Western Front," "Amos 'n' Andy" and the more or less unheralded "Her Man" were topnotchers. Among the lows were "The Santa Fe Trail," "Leathernecking" and "A Lady Surrenders." The high here is around $14,000 and low $8,000.

At the little RKO Victory, seating only 1,600, "The Sea God," "Africa Speaks" and "Little Accidents" were smashes while the lowboys were "Eyes of the World," "One Mad Kiss" and "Beau Bandit." The good ones here catch over $10,000, while $7,000 is bottom level.

The New Paramount, which has been in operation about six months, caught big money with "The Dawn Patrol," "Manslaughter" and "Young Man of Manhattan." Among the lesser attractions may be listed "The May from Wyoming," "The Virtuous Sin" and "Monte Carlo." High, $15,000; low, $10,500.

"Common Clay," "Scarlet Pages" and "Old English" were big winners at the Majestic. "Liliom," "Big Boy" and "Girl of the Golden West" were merely also rans. High gross at this house is $15,000 with low around $9,000.

It is considered significant locally that even a house as ornate and beautiful as Loew's State, with lobbies and lounging rooms that draw on their own merits, sinks below normal with a mediocre picture following a smash hit.

As one exhibitor says: "Once it was possible to rest on the laurels of a sensational picture for a month or so, business following along in its wake. Today each film must be a crackerjack to win top money. On the other hand, if there is no special attraction in town each house will do fair business, proving that fans want to attend the theatre. Let one exhibitor have a smash hit, however, and he will collect all of the business if his competitors cannot offer something pretty fine on their own hook."

Reported that $3,000,000 Is Due On Purchase; July, 1931, Set As Deadline

Detroit—The next 6 months will tell a real story of changes in show business in Detroit, it is understood from authentic sources.

A report, which is undenied by Publix officials in Detroit, states that unless payment of approximately $3,000,000 is made by July, 1931 to John H. Kunsky in settlement of the sale of the theatre circuit bearing his name, Kunsky will re-assume control of the Paramount, State, United Artists, Madison, Adams and Fisher. The Michigan was originally a Balaban & Katz-Publix house.

Kunsky, together with George W. Trendle, his general manager, and Howard O. Pierce, formerly in charge of Kunsky advertising, have acquired control of radio station WXYZ in Detroit since they stepped out of the saddle almost a year ago.

In view of the changes of policy which have been affected in the State theatre, which is now showing first-run pictures for one week stands at 25 and 50 cents admission, and in the Madison, which reopened Thursday with a 10-25-35 charge for second-run pictures and three changes a week, veteran showmen intimate that the handwriting is beginning to appear on the wall.

A check of box-office reports on the Publix houses in Detroit is said to reveal that, as a unit, the chain has been operating in the red for the last year to the extent of $21,000 to $30,000 per week. It is a known fact that unless the Michigan theatre grosses close to $84,000 per week it runs at a loss.

Just about a year ago, Publix took over the Grand Riviera, Annex, LaSalle Garden and Tuxedo theatres of the C. W. Munz Enterprises. A good sum of money was spent on renovations and changes as well as the installation of new equipment.

At the present time the wise boys are pointing to the fact that fairly regular conferences are being held between C. W. Munz, president, Bert Williams, vice-president and general manager, and H. E. Applegate, secretary and treasurer of the Munz interests, because, they claim, Publix is going to release their holdings back to Munz.

Succoring Suckers

Chicago—A new commercial film designed to show the folly of purchasing the wrong kind of securities was screened for a group of starving bond salesmen at the Tavern, downtown Chicago club.

The production is entitled "An Investment in American Prosperity" and was turned out by the Burton Holmes laboratories here, with the cooperation of Corporate Trust Shares. It shows why investments in U. S. Steel and the like are preferable to those in Happy-Strike Diamond Mines of Iowa, Inc. Sponsors of the picture say they are willing to exhibit it gratis, since prospective customers were found to be without regular admission funds.

Sue Para., Hays For 'Conspiracy'; Ask $5,130,000

Charging conspiracy and unfair competition in efforts to drive them out of business, Edward Quittner and Middletown Combined Buildings Co., Inc., Middleton, N. Y., theatre operators, have brought suit for damages amounting to $5,130,000 against the Hays organization, Paramount Publix and the officers of the two firms, in Federal District Court. Violation of the anti-trust laws is charged.

Quittner alleges Paramount built a theatre against him to force him to pay its terms for films and since then has resorted to unfair methods of competition and endeavored to shut off his supply of quality films. He also charges a conspiracy to enforce "unreasonable protection" against him. The veteran Middletown exhibitor was a member of the United States Intelligence Service during the war, and for months has been gathering evidence for his suit.

Use Erpi Disc In Court During Aleograph Case

San Antonio—Suit for an accounting of profits, which estimates place as high as $50,000,000 for alleged infringement of patents, is under way in Federal Court here between Aleograph Co. of America and Electrical Research Products. The Aleograph claims Erpi infringed its disc system in making and exhibiting talking pictures. A general denial has been entered by Erpi. A projection machine employing the Western Electric system of reproduction is in the courtroom to illustrate attorneys' argument.

Sales Managers, Carrying Burden of Costs, Seek More Say in Production

Skol!

Chicago—"Foer Hennes Skull" (For Her Sake), the first Swedish-made talkie with Scandinavian dialogue to play Chicago, opened at the Julian in midweek. The house, located near Chicago's Swedish section, did capacity business for two days; with even a flock of Norwegians swallowing their pride and journeying over from North Avenue to listen in.

Public Session In Canada Film Probe Planned

Toronto—There will be a one-day public session in the inquiry into the affairs of film companies in Canada under the Combines Act, according to Peter White, K. C., Toronto lawyer who is the commissioner conducting the investigation. The public session will be held so that every interested person who has a complaint can be heard and also to enable the public to know what is going on, White said.

"The Combines Investigation Act provides that all investigations shall be conducted in private except as otherwise ordered by the Minister of Labor," White declared. "For some weeks I have been conducting private investigations principally with the affairs of the Famous Players Canadian Corp., one of the corporations named in the order-in-council appointing me as commissioner."

The future conduct of the inquiry has not yet been determined, White intimates.

Cleveland to Get Warner 1st Run

Cleveland—Warners are entering the first run field here, taking over the Cinema, 1,000-seater. The house will be remodeled and renamed. It now is dark.

Flesh Policy Again Changed at Lima, O.

Lima, O.—After one week of split week policy, films and flesh show, the Ohio has changed again, and will show pictures only the first half of the week and pictures with flesh the second half. The gag is to spot in the strongest films the first half, and the weaker films along with the acts. The house plays M-G-M, Radio, Fox, United Artists and Universal. The house returned stage units last Thursday.

Can't Deliver Unless Coast Listens to What N. Y. Wants, Is Claim

Giving sales managers more voice in determining what types of pictures are to be made and who is to appear in them is being talked about in New York as one way out of the production doldrum which confronts the industry today.

The idea is not new by any means, but the extent of the authority which would be vested in the heads of the sales organizations under this privately discussed plan, has never been tried previously.

Sales managers feel that they carry the burden; that no matter how much Hollywood spends or how terrible pictures may turn out to be, it's up to them to roll up grosses that will return the investment, plus a profit.

On that basis, those discussing the plan argue, sales managers should have far more authority in the selection of stories and casts. Several of them, at least, admit privately that art for art's sake doesn't figure in such a set-up and that, if the added power they are seeking is forthcoming, there will be no room in the scheme for what they call "creations."

In other words, proponents of the plan insist, if the sales department is charged with showing profits on each picture, the dominant factor in doping out what product will go best is something which sales managers must determine.

If, because of internal bickerings and jealousies over authority, the scales cannot be tipped, the concluding argument which is advanced is that the responsibility must be removed from the selling force and shouldered by the studio.

New Zealand Probing Tax Tangle As Sales Resume

Sydney—Protests by American distributors that New Zealand taxes, totaling 25 per cent of the gross, make operations in that country impossible, are about to result in a government investigation. The industry, here and at Wellington, is supplying figures for the committee to probe.

In the meantime sales, which were suspended several months ago, have been resumed.

Censors Would

Cincinnati—Witness "Exhibit A" in the ridiculous edicts emanating from the office of the Ohio censor board at Columbus.

School Showings Unlawful, Rules Judge in Utah

Salt Lake City—Use of school auditoriums for showing of films and other entertainment when admission is charged constitutes unfair competition and is barred in an injunction issued here by Judge James W. McKinney against members of the board of education of the Summitt school district.

The action was brought by George Beard, proprietor of the Coalville Opera House, who said the competition was unfair because the school paid no taxes or license fee and entertainers are put to no expense for fuel, heat or light. The court declared the school had been given broad powers and rights, but that he did not believe the legislature intended the school should be used for commercial purposes.

The decision has been awaited with keen interest throughout the state, where many schools and churches are competing with theatres.

Wins Bet on Notre Dame; Host to Team

Chicago—Charles Butterworth, stage and film comedian, was host to 38 Notre Dame football players at the Saturday night performance of "Sweet Adeline," in which Butterworth is appearing at the Illinois Theatre here. Butterworth, a Notre Dame grad, showed his confidence in his alma mater's current team by giving Rollo Timponi, manager of the Illinois, thirteen points and even money on Saturday's game with Northwestern. Frank Carideo, Notre Dame quarterback, helped Butterworth collect on Saturday night.

Butterworth, also on view here in Warner's "The Life of the Party," at the Roosevelt, caught the picture for the first time last week, and said he approved it highly.

The proposed change will become effective upon ratification by a general meeting to which it will be submitted within the next two weeks.

The independent operators subscribed to a program "of mutual benefit to prevent interference by chains and to avoid discrimination in their trade practices."

The amusement tax, collective buying of insurance, poster exchange and other co-operative measures were discussed by the Iowans. No definite action was taken, nor was a date set for a second meeting of the tentative organization.

Omaha—C. E. Williams, veteran president of the M. P. T. O. A. of Iowa and Nebraska, who recently was elected a director of the national organization, attached little significance to the meeting at York.

National Circuit, with Decentralized Local Management, Is Franklin Plan

By Accident

Harold B. Franklin is in New York in connection with his proposed national theatre chain. He usually stops at the Savoy Plaza, but decided he could cover more ground if he kept his whereabouts private.

So he determined on the Chatham, for years the stopping place of many former First National franchise holders. No sooner had he crossed the portals when he realized that those who jump to conclusions would figure this as evidence that a deal with the ex-First Nationalites was in, which it isn't.

Therefore, Franklin moved to another hotel.

Seattle Liberty To Be Franklin Circuit Outlet?

Seattle — Jensen & Von Herberg next week will make the Liberty a strictly first-run house, and will play all First National releases in addition to a number of other first-run pictures obtained on the open market. The First National deal, it is understood, was made while Von Herberg was in New York a week or so ago, and is taken here as an indication that the old established Jensen & Von Herberg chain that sold out to Fox West Coast Theatres, Inc., some years ago is once more in the ascendency.

This plan coupled with the report that original First National franchise holders may rally around Franklin as the nucleus of a new circuit, gave rise to belief that the Liberty in this city will be the local house under discussion in the chain. The Liberty now is operated by Jensen & Von Herberg, original franchise holders in First National, and has just been announced as the future home of all First National productions, effective next week. This comparatively new first run theatre, coupled with Jensen & Von Herberg's suburban and neighborhood houses, would give Franklin a strong foothold in this locality.

Maloy Critically Ill

Chicago—While the crisis has been passed, the condition of Tom Maloy, of the operators and stagehands' union here, still is dangerous. He was stricken with pneumonia when returning from New York the first of the week.

Whale's Next Set

Hollywood—"X Marks the Spot," an original, is to be James Whale's second picture for Tiffany. His first film was "Journey's End."

To Open Houses Now Dark and Buy and Build in Spots Not Overseated

Harold B. Franklin does not intend to join any of the big circuits, but is going ahead with plans for a national circuit independent of producer-distributor affiliation.

The former head of Fox West Coast, now in New York, made known his plans in a statement to Motion Picture News, emphasizing that he plans a chain, compact as to policies, but decentralized, so far as operation is concerned, local men to be used in order to keep the personal equation in theatres of the circuit.

The company will buy and build theatres in all sections of the country where business considerations warrant. It will not lend itself to creating overseated situations and will seek houses outright, or the purchase of an interest in theatres large and small. Effort will be made in every instance to retain the local showman to operate. In addition to building and buying, the company also will offer an operating service to individual exhibitors, giving them the benefits developed by the national organization.

Franklin says there are between 5,000 and 7,000 houses now dark and his organization will attempt to effect reopening of some of them. He will seek to work harmoniously with all distributors, he says. No set number of theatres has been determined upon, but a number of deals now are pending from Kansas City west.

W. E. Plans $1,600 Small House Unit

Launching an intensive drive for small-town business, Electrical Research Products about January 1 will place on the market new reproducing equipment to sell for around $1,600, which will be available for houses up to 600 or 700 seats. Plans for launching the new equipment have been carried on secretly for some time. The company, it is said, realizes that if it is to get the business of the small towns it must gauge prices accordingly.

A new photoelectric cell for standard equipments soon is to be marketed as an improvement.

Double Feature Bills Stir Row In Windy City

Chicago—Effort to curb double-featuring is being made by Aaron Saperstein, head of the Chicago Allied group, and Jack Miller of the M. P. T. O. unit. No agreement has been reached. The problem is acute locally, with houses under an expense not commensurate with receipts. Exchanges are squawking over low rentals and the loss of short-subject outlets.

About 50 houses, including the circuits, are double-featuring here. B. & K. is threatening double feature shows in self-defense at all neighborhood houses. Miller is against the practice, but Saperstein has been unable to get unified decision from his organization and is unwilling to back cliques. No further meetings are scheduled.

Robbers Continue to Patronize Chi. Theatres

Chicago—The usual Sunday night theatre raids by local gunmen specialists produced $630 this week. The funds of the Illington and Marshall Square theatres had been picked up by a Brinks' armored car just prior to the bandits' advent at these houses. In consequence, they obtained only $10 at the Illington, which was taken from Tom Trant, manager, and $20 at the Marshall Square, taken from Emery Weber, cashier. Six men armed with a sawed-off shotgun and revolvers participated in these robberies. Later, four armed men waylaid George Madison, manager of the Crown Hippodrome Theatre, forcing him to return to the theatre and open the safe. They obtained $600.

Warners Again Step Out for Theatres In Drive to Be Centered on West Coast

Colman Clicks

Hollywood—"The Devil to Pay" is the best that this star has made. It is smart, witty and fast moving, appealing screen material, which should click wherever shown. Ronald Colman has a part that fits him well and he plays it with great relish. It hasn't too much talk, and plenty of comedy touches make this a swell picture.

Fox Weighs Plan For Invasion of Four Texas Keys

San Antonio—Fox intends building or acquiring theatres in the four key cities of Texas—San Antonio, Dallas, Houston and Fort Worth. Credence to the report is given by a visit of J. R. Grainger, vice-president of the Fox corporation, to these cities.

While in San Antonio, Grainger admitted that he is investigating the Texas theatre situation, with a view of submitting a report to his company on the advisability of entering the field.

The Fox franchise at present is held by the RKO Southern Corp., formerly Interstate Amusement Co., but the franchise expires in August, 1931.

Lloyd Laughs at Kidnaping Tale

Chicago—Harold Lloyd discredited newspaper accounts of a threat to kidnap his daughter, Gloria, while in town this week.

"The posting of an extra guard around my estate may have been ordered. If it was, in all probability that is how the kidnaping story originated. It's not unusual for us to put on an extra guard. All the big Beverly Hills' estates have guards about them. I don't know a thing about this reported kidnaping threat."

Lloyd was here en route to the Coast from New York. He visited Loop department stores, where he purchased a load of toys for his two daughters, before leaving to begin work on his next picture. A complacent attitude, which evidenced no signs of uneasiness, appeared to verify Lloyd's statements that the kidnaping threat report was unfounded.

Lloyd said he intended to appeal the recent court decision finding him guilty of plagiarizing the late H. C. Witwer's story in making "The Freshman."

Building at Oakland

Oakland—Paramount's position in Coast keys is to be strengthened by invasion of this city, where a 3,500-seat house will be built.

$15,000,000 Building Program Mapped; Southwest Moves Planned

Theatre expansion in various sections of the country, notably the Pacific Coast, is being resumed by Warners, following consolidation of its sales force with that of First National and the naming of a corps of scouts in the theatre department. Plans call for doubling of the present number of houses.

Fifteen million dollars is reported to have been budgeted for the program which aims to build or acquire a theatre outlet in all principal cities of the Pacific Seaboard. An ambitious program of expansion also has been mapped out in the South. Recently, negotiations were under way for a powerful Texas chain.

On the Coast, Warners recently opened their new theatre at Huntington Park and are building at Beverly Hills, San Pedro and at Los Angeles. Jack L. Warner declines to say if Fox West Coast is to take over operation of Warner houses in the West.

Savings to be effected through consolidation of the Warner and First National production and sales forces will furnish part of the financing in the expansion program.

Silver Comes East on Warner Expansion Plan

M. A. Silver, general manager of Warners' Pacific Coast theatres, is in the East to confer with home office executives and visit his family. Silver has been in charge of the Warner western theatre chain for the past year.

Upon his return west Dec. 8, the new Warner theatre at San Pedro, second in the $15,000,000 expansion program, will be opened. Silver will then continue with other expansion plans now under way.

Publix, Too!

Continuing the sales spurt begun when he took over the position of general sales manager a few months ago, Phil Reisman has closed with Publix for the Universal product. This follows blanket deals with RKO, Warner, Fox West Coast, Fox Midwesco, Fox Metropolitan and Loew's New York circuit. In addition some 40 smaller circuits, embracing around 700 houses, already have signed for the product. The larger and smaller circuits combined represent approximately 4,200 theatres throughout the country, it is stated.

Stars Hunt Fox

Hollywood—When the United Artists stars made their "declaration of independence" against Fox West Coast the meeting was followed by having some still pictures made of the group. When the camera had clicked for the final shot Ronald Colman broke forth with the remark that an appropriate title for the stills would be "The Fox Hunt."

Publix Private Show Foiled By Columbia, RKO

Detroit—The next time the Publix publicity department arranges a screening for newspaper critics in advance of scheduled release for the public the lesson they learned last week will stand them in good stead.

"The Cat Creeps" and "Tol'able David" have been booked and advertised for playdates at the RKO Downtown Theatre. The Publix office, to steal a march on the opposition, whose "Check and Double Check" and "Africa Speaks" the last four weeks have cut deeply into box-office returns, notified the critics that a special private screening would be help on a certain afternoon.

Information was passed on to the RKO theatre attaches, with the result that the RKO and Columbia exchanges immediately had the prints brought back to the exchange vaults. Needless to say, the scheduled screening was not held.

Detroit Theatre On New Policy

Detroit—The Madison, which has been closed for renovation for the past three weeks, reopened Thanksgiving Day with a new price and picture policy. Admission for children at all times will be 10 cents. During the afternoon hours, adult admission will be 25 cents, with an evening rate of 35 cents. Three changes of pictures will be offered each week, as second runs.

Publix Has Four First Runs

The State, which was closed for a week and which has been running under a new price and picture policy for the past two weeks, is featuring one-week stands of first-run pictures at 25 and 50 cents. At the present time Publix has only four first-run theatres in the downtown section, the Michigan, Paramount, United Artists and State, against the opposition provided by the Fox and RKO downtown theatres. The Fisher, another Publix house, is situated three miles from the business section.

Dr. Public Holds Industry Pulse; Will Dish Out Merger Finances When Healthy

"Queer People" Out

Hollywood—Howard Hughes will not produce "Queer People" as intended, because he could not get a director to megaphone it. Accordingly, he has passed up the option held on the novel which attacked Hollywood generally. Opinion was that he had purchased the novel outright, but this was in error.

Fox W. C. Chain 5% from Peak, Sheehan Asserts

Seattle—Fox West Coast Theatres is within 5 per cent of its peak month, Howard Sheehan, vice-president of the circuit, declared here while on a tour of the houses under his jurisdiction. He added that $200,000 will be spent during the next few months reconditioning several houses in the Northwest.

"We are within five per cent of our peak month now," he said, "which means business is normal. Within thirty days, the 493 Fox West Coast theatres serving the area between the Mississippi River and the Pacific Coast will have reached the highest peak we have ever attained."

Among the improvements to be made in this territory, in addition to the complete renovating and redecorating of the Coliseum that is now in progress, Sheehan announced the installation of Grandeur screens in the Fox Fifth Avenue here and the Fox Broadway in Tacoma. Other Fox West Coast theatres throughout the state will also have improved screens and projection apparatus as a part of the reconditioning program.

Smith Sells Play

Benjamin Vernon Smith, Coast writer, has sold stage rights to "A Simple Soul" to be given a New York production immediately. The play was produced by the Writers' Club in Hollywood in one act and later published in the Hollywood Book of Players by Kenyon Nicholson.

Thomas to Make Series

Lowell Thomas' monologue in the Paramount Pictorial is the first of a series of talks he will make explaining travel pictures in the new magazine reel.

Banky-La Rocque on Stage

Omaha—Vilma Banky and Rod La Rocque are booked here in person in "Cherries are Ripe" for two performances on December 6. The production is under the auspices of the Omaha Drama League.

Changes to Thursday

Omaha—Beginning Thanksgiving Day, the World moved its opening day from Friday to Thursday.

Napoleonic Dreams of Big Boys Crimped By Small Timers With Gold in Sox

Reflecting the public indifference to stock participation as a direct result of heavy bear raids which have been barraging stock markets throughout the United States, indications are that any mergers planned for the picture business will have to bide their time until investors are ready to take the locks off their pocket books.

This condition in the financial quarters is not peculiar to the film industry, but has widespread application to the business world at large. Many consolidations in various fields have been held up as a result.

As an indication of the difficulty underwriters are experiencing in floating new issues are the figures for the first ten months of 1930 which show that public financing was more than $1,000,000,000 under the same period of 1929.

A compilation published in the New York Times indicates that total financing, including bonds, notes and stocks in the amusement field, totaled $128,175,000 for the first ten months of the year, as against a total of $43,265,000 for 1929.

The increase, substantial as it is, is regarded in banking circle as indicative of the rising esteem in which the amusement field is regarded. This, however, is not regarded necessarily as a marker for the future. From January 1 to October 18, approximately 69 important mergers were consummated in the United States.

Interesting to note in connection with the 69 completed amalgamations is the fact that total assets of the companies embraced were considerably lower than those of the organizations which went through merger throes in 1929.

A widely discussed question in banking circles is whether or not the merger trend will again develop with the next bull market, whenever it comes. Cautious observers either profess not to know or refuse to venture opinions.

It is a fact, however, that what eventually may prove to be the biggest merger in the picture history is being delayed by market conditions and is being talked about again as cold fact a year from today, the intervening time being considered necessary to put it over with the investing public.

Hey! Lissen!

The A. M. P. A. meeting Thursday, Dec. 4, promises a fulsome dish of interesting and euphonious dialectic for its members, when Arthur Hopkins, playwright, and Robert E. Sherwood voice their observations on matters pertaining to the stage and screen. Incidentally, words like "euphonious" and "dialectic" are no business of ours, but since Prexy Simmons says they'll take place, they probably will. Life is like that.

Booming

The purchasing agent of a big producing firm, smiling as he walked along Broadway, was stopped by a friend.

"Why the joy?" he was asked.

"I just discovered that the amount of red ink purchased this month has dropped 10 per cent. below last month."

Too Much Blah In Adv. Plugs, Says Stevenson

Straight advertising pictures are the bunk, and companies which plan to force material of this type upon the patrons of their chain theatres are headed for a stiff reprimand by theatregoers, according to Edward F. Stevenson, president of Visugraphic Pictures, who told a Motion Picture News reporter that "advertising films such as screen broadcasts, and others of that ilk, are comparable to radio advertising in their unprofitable relation to the advertiser."

"The advertiser does not get his money's worth," stated Stevenson, "because advertising titles in films and advertising names on the radio are quickly forgotten. In advertising films, as in radio, the audience remembers only the entertainment part of the program and will associate this entertainment with the product advertised only if there is not too much mention of the product.

"Theatres want advertising pictures if they are produced properly and contain entertainment value. A picture may advertise some product very definitely and yet be acceptable on its merits as an entertaining film. The advertising in the picture must be concealed subtly behind dramatic action, unusual scenic sequences, outstanding personalities. Blatant advertising, expressed on film, has no place in the theatre and such a picture simply wastes the investment of the advertiser and arouses unpleasant reaction in the audience.

"Producers who can cloak the advertising message in the colorful garb of theatrical entertainment have no difficulty in placing these films in theatres, particularly where these films offer unusual exploitation possibilities," Stevenson said.

"Forgot to Pay All Income Tax"—Melford

Los Angeles—Bad memory was the plea of Director George Melford in declaring to Federal Judge James that he "forgot" to pay all his income tax in 1924 and 1925. He was given a 90 day stay in which to pay off his $200 fine, which with tax and penalties bring the total to $10,780. He is paying it in instalments.

Industry Goes to Unemployed Aid; Uses Newsreels

Exhibitors throughout the country are mapping plans to aid in the present unemployment and economic dilemma. Benefit programs have been staged by a number of theatres and plans for others are going forward. Will H. Hays has pledged the aid of his organization to Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of President Hoover's emergency committee. Hays promised that:

"The organized motion picture industry of the United States will cooperate to the utmost in reflecting through the newsreels the current facts of our industrial and business position; it will do everything possible to help counteract unsound psychological factors that have retarded prosperity and employment; and it will aid in every way at its command in such ameliorative measures as are designed to minimize the human suffering and want that come from lack of employment."

Unemployed Kept Going By Selling Theatre Tickets

Albany—Theatres here are helping out the unemployment situation to the extent of thousands of dollars. While C. H. Buckley is donating 10 per cent of his gross receipts for the month for the unemployed, RKO theatres in Albany and Schenectady are in the open with the announcement that groups of unemployed men in these two cities will be given theatre tickets to sell and will receive a 25 per cent commission on all sales.

About 50 men have been chosen from the unemployed in Schenectady, all being heads of families and bona fide residents of the city. About the same number of men are being selected in Albany. In both places RKO theatres are displaying slides on their screens, asking the public to buy its tickets from the men rather than at the box office.

John Powers Dies

John Powers, for the last ten years Paramount manager at New Haven, died in a New York hospital. He was in his early forties. Last October he underwent an operation for tumor of the brain. Later he returned home, but returned to the New York institution where he died. His widow and one child survive.

Clothes for Tickets

Hamilton, Ont.—Two thousand children attended the preview of "Feet First" at the Capitol, without paying a cent, but each brought a bundle of old clothes or basket of food for the unemployed. The newspapers singled out an incident that made the front pages when they told how a boy of five years tugged a basket of apples through the lobby of the Capitol, deposited them beside a policeman and walked gravely into the theatre—without keeping one of the apples.

Building Goodwill

Willoughby, O.—Dan Stearns, manager of the Willoby, is on the job. He obtained from the Willoughby Chamber of Commerce a list of the registered unemployed and has issued passes for their whole families, good for Wednesday night aod Saturday afternoon. The passes are good for two months.

Buckley Donates 10% of Receipts To Unemployed

Albany—C. H. Buckley, owner of the Reland and Harmanus Bleecker Hall here, will donate ten per cent of the gross receipts of both houses for the next four weeks toward helping the unemployed. The Hall is the largest first-run theatre in Albany, having a seating capacity of 2,200, with an admission charge of 50 cents evenings. The Leland is a first-run also, with a seating capacity of 1,800.

Alec Sayles, general manager of the Buckley houses, will be in direct charge of the relief program. Sayles said that it might be possible that the plan would be continued beyond the four weeks set, but that this depended entirely on how well it works out.

Monster Benefit Program In Detroit for Unemployed

Detroit—Publix is cooperating with the Detroit Times in putting over a midnight benefit show scheduled for the Michigan on December 6. The idea has caught on locally as a quick method of aiding solution of the unemployment situation.

The Detroit Times Midnight Benefit Show at the Michigan Theatre, December 6, has struck a responsive chord. Seldom before has a program for charity brought forth such interest.

Tickets went on sale Saturday at the Publix houses, including the Michigan, Paramount, United Artists, State, Fisher, Redford, Royal Oak, Birmingham and Ramona.

The Detroit Times Benefit show will probably excel any previous show of its kind here. Stars from all the shows in town that week will perform. No less than $10,000 is expected as the net profits from the presentation. All theatrical unions involved will accept no money for services.

Edward J. Weisfeldt, general manager of Publix stage shows here, will have supervision of the entire performance.

Aids Thanksgiving

Scranton—Jack Armstrong, manager of the West Side, one of the links in the strong chain of Comerford-Paramount-Publix in Scranton, entertained more than 500 orphans and shut-ins at a free Thanksgiving show. Candies, fruits and other goodies were given the youngsters.

"All Quiet" O. K. in Germany

Eliminating considerable worry on the part of officials, "All Quiet on the Western Front" has been passed by the censors in Germany, the home office has been advised.

Charity Relief Shows Staged By Showmen

Milwaukee—As in previous years, Wisconsin theatres are again making efforts to help the poor and needy during the holiday season. Universal's Alhambra here, for instance, donated the proceeds from the first showing of "See America Thirst."

Through the courtesy of their unions, the operator and stagehands at the Alhambra volunteered their services free and the theatre donated to the Wisconsin News Christmas Fund a check for $502. More than 1,000 were on hand for the midnight show.

In Racine, Fox's State recently staged four "canned goods" matinees, the admission to which was a can of fruit, vegetables or other food material. All children, bringing with them one can of food, were admitted free of charge to these matinees before 5 o'clock. Articles of food received through these matinees were turned over to the Central association and distributed among the needy of Racine.

On Dec 4 and 5 a minstrel show will be given at the Uptown in Racine to raise a Christmas fund for the poor. This show is being sponsored by the West Racine Business Men's Association of which Tom Norman, manager of the Uptown, is a member.

At the Egyptian, in Milwaukee, Garry Lassman, manager of the house, has formed a Christmas stocking club for the kiddies. He has invited them to bring in their stockings to the theatre management and before Christmas they will be returned to them filled with toys, novelties and candy. This club functions in connection with the Warner Kiddie Club, which is in operation at this theatre as well as all Warner houses in Wisconsin.

Even Charity Is Out on Sundays

Atlanta—Georgia's Supreme Court has under advisement an appeal from a permanent injunction granted to a group of citizens of Albany, Ga., against operation of the Albany on Sunday. The Albany post of the American Legion had attempted to operate the theatre on Sundays, charging no admission but taking a collection and giving it to charity.

Citizens obtained an injunction against the theatre, contending operation of the house violated the Georgia law against Sunday shows.

Eastern Pa. in Line

Philadelphia, Pa.—The M.P.T.O. of Eastern Pennsylvania, by resolution, will ask every theatre in the Philadelphia zone to donate the entire receipts of one matinee performance to relieve the unemployed situation. Thirty theatres represented at the meeting at which the resolution was adopted have already given their pledge. The board is constituting itself a committee to make the move zone-wide.

M-G-M's new team picture, "Min and Bill," is the big hit of the current week at the Capitol, where the film got $38,500 over the week-end. Friday, Saturday and Sunday business was SRO, and it's a cinch for a hold-over.

Films at Legit House

Montreal—His Majesty's, Montreal's only legit house, now faces a period of six weeks without the semblance of a stage road show in sight. In the meantime, pictures, including a number of British productions, are being shown. For the week starting Saturday, the attraction is "Balaclava," which is being released in the United States under the title of "The Charge of the Light Brigade." Prices range up to $1.

Gobble Giveaways

Chicago—Warner houses, following the custom now popular with circuit theatres locally, bought a carload of turkeys to pass out to holders of lucky tickets during Thanksgiving week. "Give-aways," until recently, were supposedly in great disrepute with circuit affiliation. And the Crystal Theatre passing out grub and extra attractions in thanksgiving for having been in the Publix fold one year come Friday.

"Lady's Morals" At $23,500 Is Beantown High

Boston—M-G-M's "A Lady's Morals" hit the high spot for Boston this week with a gross of $23,500 at Loew's State following an intensive advertising campaign which brought results. "Tol'able David" did a good week's business at the Memorial, while "The Office Wife" at the Metropolitan maintained grosses above the average mark for an unusually good season. Harold Lloyd in "Feet First" played day and date at the Olympia and Uptown for a total for the two houses of $30,500.

In general, grosses took a slight decline again this week, the second week, but indications point to a better showing during next week.

Loew's State shifted its opening day to Friday, which may have brought about a slight increase in gross for this week's picture, and RKO's Keith-Boston inaugurated a new policy of four complete shows daily, starting the first show at 9:30, or half an hour earlier than formerly.

Estimated takings:

Milwaukee—One thousand persons filed to safety from Fox's Strand when fire broke out in an adjoining store. Although damage to the adjoining building was estimated at $10,000, the theatre suffered no loss. After the blaze had been extinguished the patrons returned for the show.

British Producers Organize

London—British film producers are forming their own association to boost the domestic industry.

"Sunny" Fails to Shine; Is Yanked After 2nd Week

Los Angeles — "Sunny" proved pretty much of a disappointment at the Warner Downtown and Warner Hollywood, the Marilyn Miller film being pulled after the first week of a scheduled two weeks' engagement.

The Criterion with "Jenny Lind" also flopped badly, getting but $8,000 on the week.

"Min and Bill" opened strong at the Carthay Circle, playing a $5 premiere, with the house sold out two days in advance. "Remote Control" at Loew's State took top dough downtown, while "Laughter" at the Pantages was top for the boulevard. "Feet First" was okay in its second week at the United Artists, getting $18,500. "Sea Legs" and "Her Man" failed to show any exceptional strength.

Estimated takings:

Frost Orders Changes In Fox Coast Theatres

Los Angeles—Robert Frost, L. A. division manager for Fox West Coast, made a number of personnel changes this week. Lew Clark becomes district manager for the beach theatres, Murray Pennock takes Clark's place at the Ritz, while Tom MacDonald leaves the beach job for the Alexander theatre at Glendale, where Pennock formerly held forth. Al Rackin, who has been Frost's right hand man in the home office, goes to the beach to take charge of the Rosemary. This is a promotion.

Cause and Effect?

On Tuesday the Warner New York newspaper ads carried this slogan:
"Hit after Hit after Hit at Warner Bros. Theatres."
Two days later the slogan was changed to:
"You'll always see STARS at Warner Bros. Theatres."
Sounds like roughhouse.

"Feet First's" Flop at Tampa Hard to Dope

Tampa—Casting aside its split week policy in vogue at the Tampa ever since it was opened and on the strength of the reviews of the latest Lloyd picture, "Feet First," the film was booked for a full week. The opening was big, but the film failed to hold up and at the end of four days it was pulled and another picture set in.

Just why the picture did such a flop is hard to say. The papers here gave it excellent notices. The audiences seemed to like it, so the only answer is, it was "just one of those things."

Pa. Theatres Fight Quack Ballyhoos; Practice Grows

Philadelphia—Exhibitors in this territory are tired of quack advertising schemes and are voicing their resentment via a newly appointed better business committee which will check on all plans before the M. P. T. O. will give its approval for members to proceed.

David Barrist has been named chairman with Allen Benn and Ben Bertel his associates. The committee promises to work closely with the Better Business Bureau.

Fake advertising schemes and premium gags foisted on exhibitors by men who make a one-time appearance in a given town seem to be on the increase.

Motion Picture News, in recent weeks, has received a number of complaints from theatre operators widely scattered throughout the country who tell of varied and, in some instances, unique methods by which they are parted from their money.

Vaude Back in Wilmington But It's Only for Kids

Wilmington, Del.—It will be something like old times Saturday at the Grand Opera House when a whole hour will be devoted to vaudeville, something that has been missing from Wilmington picture houses for a couple of years.

However, it is not a permanent adjunct to the program. It is only a stunt for the kids, arranged by William L. Peacock, manager and veteran theatre man who was taken into the Stanley-Warner fold when the house changed hands. Peacock is putting on Wetherill's Punch and Judy act, Rhoad's Marionettes, and Harry D'Esta, ventriloquist.

'Big Trail' Slips To $6,375; Others Okay in Omaha

Omaha—A continuance of mild weather held up business in all the major houses with one exception. "The Big Trail" at the Paramount collected only $6,375 in face of stronger bills everywhere else. Folks seemed to shun the picture as they would a covered wagon as an every-day conveyance.

With good stage support, "The Doorway to Hell" at the World got top profits of the week at $13,750. This house is ideally located and is steadily gaining with a combination policy. "The Cat Creeps," aided by Blossom Seeley, brought the Orpheum $16,800 for only a slightly above normal week.

State was par both halves. "Sinners' Holiday," first three days, did $2,250, and "Numbered Men," last half, hit $2,500.

Indignant Chicagoans

Chicago—Mae Tinee's merciless panning of "War Nurse" (M-G-M) on the grounds of its being derogatory to the history of Our Women who helped Over There, helped to deliver the crowds at the Chicago during the week. Apparently, there were a lot of people anxious to become "indignant."

Novel

Something novel in the way of trailers has been prepared by A. Griffith Grey to boost the synchronized version of "The Birth of a Nation." It is a five minute interview with D. W. Griffith reveals that his father was a Confederate soldier and that much of the background of the film was obtained from the stories and anecdotes told by his dad. It's an interesting and well done subject.

Montreal Tax Shows Business At B. O. Is Good

Montreal—Business in Montreal, Canada's largest city, keeps up to the mark, judging by the amusement tax returns locally for the past fiscal year. The total ticket tax paid at Montreal theatres was $1,058,519 for the past 12 months, of which one-half, $529,894, is retained by the city for local hospitals and orphanages. One year ago the amusement tax total was just over the million mark so that the current returns are practically equal to the previous mark.

The seat tax collected from these houses totaled $56,246, an average of $867 per theatre for the 12 months. The highest tax is $1.06 per seat which is paid by one house having a capacity of 1,144. Forty-eight dance halls paid a total tax of $9,750.

London—"High Treason" was made by Gaumont with no political affiliations involved, W. J. Gell, managing director of the producing company, advises Motion Picture News in refuting statements credited in a Portland, Ore., dispatch to M. R. Bacon that the picture was charged with Soviet propaganda. Gell says:

"If the picture portrayed anything realistic at all, it was the futility of war, but it was produced exclusively by this company and at their expense and the subject was chosen because it was unique, interesting and entertaining and for no other motive whatsoever.

How to Crash Studios

The way to get into the movies, says Margaret Stuart in Photoplay Magazine, is to be a relative of a producer, to be discovered by a director, to be a great foreign actress, a stage or operatic star, or an extra girl with a winning smile. Or, if that is impossible, it is well to be a football hero, a property boy, a caustic critic of the movies, a cigarette girl at a Hollywood hotel or a small time actor who looks like a gangster.

Aviators (male or female), baseball heroes, golf champions and prize fighters need not apply. They only last a few months.

Vermont to Test Constitutionality Of Its Sunday Law

Albany—Vermont's Supreme Court is to determine the constitutionality of the state's Sunday amusement law, under which the state's attorney has been attempting to curb the operation of picture theatres and miniature golf courses. This decision was reached when it was decided to send the case involving I. W. McKay, manager of two theatres in Rutland, Vt., direct to the Supreme Court without jury trial in a lower court.

Some time ago, McKay was arrested for operating his house on Sundays. He determined to make a fight and as a direct result the matter is now being carried to the Supreme Court.

Operators of miniature golf courses in Rutland had also been arrested for keeping their places open on Sunday. Two of these were fined and have ceased to operate.

'Doorway to Hell' Gets $9,000 and 2nd Seattle Week

Seattle—During a week of business below normal at most of the local theatres, "Playboy of Paris" and "Remote Control" were the topnotch attractions. The Chevalier vehicle played at the Paramount and did about $13,000. Again the program was padded to overflowing with shorts of every style and description, which had most of the audience squirming in their seats awaiting the feature. "Remote Control" and a Fanchon & Marco revue featuring "Miss Universe" played at the Fox Fifth Avenue to a gross of about $14,500.

The Fox played a Paramount release, "The Virtuous Sin," which failed to make much of an impression. Business was about $10,000. John Hamrick's Blue Mouse took about $7,000 with "The Lottery Bride" and the Music Box around $9,000 with "The Doorway to Hell," which is being held for a second week. Fox's Coliseum was closed for renovating, and will open this week under a second run policy.

Lillian Albertson's stage production of "New Moon" played the week at the Moore Theatre to very strong business at $2.50 top, and the Bainbridge Stock Company closed its run at the Metropolitan Theatre with "Craig's Wife," which was well received.

Spoor Wide Film Wows Chicago; Clicks $37,950

Chicago—One of the worst business weeks on record prevailed throughout the Loop with only one house in 12 hitting above the normal average stride. Despite the slackened pace, however, few of the larger houses went into the red; the depression resulting in slimmer margins of profit only. United Artists with "Lottery Bride" in its second week was the worst off—getting an unmentionable $13,550. The State-Lake, offering a world premiere of Spoor-Berggren wide screen and film, was the sensational money house. "Danger Lights" is the novelty feature. Business started off indifferently, with RKO doing nothing out of the ordinary in the way of advertising and publicizing. Critics, however, were awed by the Spoor-Berggren spectacle and climbed on the band-wagon.

Newspaper editorials, columnists' comments and a genuinely interested public spread the word which did gratis what money has been unable to do for many a better picture. The State-Lake finished the week with $37,950, less than seven grand under the first week's figure for "Check and Double Check." The business done represents a building figure from day to day that showed no indication of falling off at the end of the week.

RKO was frank to admit at the beginning of the week that the picture might go at the end of seven days. Two days later it was obvious that the picture would be stronger at the end of the week than at opening, and was held for the second week. The State-Lake is the only theatre in the world in which Spoor equipment is installed.

Closing business in all run houses was brutal. With the opening of "Hell's Angels" at the United Artists to day-long capacity with sidewalk holdouts, it was indicated that the balance of the Loop was in for another disastrous week. All houses felt the competition immediately after the opening, Randolph Street locations getting only the leftover business.

Estimated takings:

"HALF SHOT AT SUNRISE" (Radio)
(Second Loop run)

CASTLE—(300), 60c, 5 days. Other attractions: News. Gross: $3,986. Nice figure, but "Tiger of Berlin" (UFA) booking shoved it out. "Reno" (Sono Art-World Wide) flopped here after opening the week. Earning on'y $900 in two days, the house was obliged to get rid of it.

"DERELICT" (Paramount)

CHICAGO—(3,940), 35c-85c, 7 days. Other attraction: Orchestra, stage show, news, comedy, musical short. Spoor-Berggren film across the street felt badly here; State-Lake's novelty drawing all the undecided business in this block. Gross: $39,840.

"FEET FIRST" (Paramount)

McVICKERS—(2,284), 35c-85c, first 5 days. Other attractions: News, cartoon, musical short. Gross: $24,100; on'y fair. Final four days of "Big Trail" (Fox) were brutal at $9,700.

SECOND-RUN DOUBLE FEATURE

MONROE—(962), 25c-40c, 7 days. Week's attractions: "A Lady Surrenders" (Universal), "The Cocoanuts" (Paramount), news. House's second and final week of double featuring. Both weeks were flops, the only monetary increase being in overhead. Gross: $3,200.

"REMOTE CONTROL" (M-G-M)

ORIENTAL—(3,900), 35c-85c, 7 days. Other attractions: Stage show, organ, news, comedy, novelty short. Feature was authored by local boys which made critics as kind as possible and earned it publicity—all of which saved it from a worse fate. Gross: $33,180.

"WIDOW FROM CHICAGO" (F. N.)

ORPHEUM—(702), 35c-50c, first week. Other attractions: Thirty minutes news, two Vitaphone acts. "HEADS UP" (Paramount)

PALACE—(2,509), 35c-75c, 7 days. Other attractions: Four RKO vaudeville acts headed by Gus Van (Van & Schenck), news, cartoon, novelty short, orchestra. Critics sneered at the picture. House's worst week in some time. Gross: $18,100.

PUNCH & JUDY—(354), 50c-75c, second and final week. Other attractions: News, comedy. Poor second week, considering plugs picture drew from critics. "LIFE OF THE PARTY" (W. B.)

ROOSEVELT—(1,591), 35c-85c, first four days. Other attractions: News, "You're in the Army Now" (Paramount), "Walrus Hunting." Nice opening business. Gross: $12,150. "Up the River" (Fox) dropped off in closing days to a miserable $13,300 for the final seven.

"DANGER LIGHTS" (Radio)

STATE-LAKE—(2,776), 35c-75c, first week. Other attractions: "Niagara Falls" (Spoor-Berggren), news, Terrytoon (Col.). World premiere for Spoor-Berggren Natural Vision" film and screen. Spoor's short subject novelty drew more praise from the critics than the feature; though the third-dimensional process was unanimously and sincerely plugged. The novelty is getting tremendous word-of-mouth advertising, plenty of local publicity, and is building from day to day. Theatre was the one bright spot in the Loop this week. Gross: $37,950.

"THE LOTTERY BRIDE" (United Artists)

UNITED ARTISTS—(1,700), 35c-85c, second and final week. Other attractions: News, "Schnapps, Inc." (Paramount), musical short. Picture fell off badly in second week, sending the house into the red. Gross: $13,550. "Hell's Angels" (Caddo) replaced; opening to capacity business and all-day holdouts. Competition hurting everything on Randolph Street.

"ONLY SAPS WORK" (Paramount)

WOODS—(1,166), 35c-75c, first four days. Opened to fair business in mid-week, but "Hell's Angels" across the street stopped that. May blow any day with "Today" (Majestic) ready to replace. Gross: $9,450. "The Squealer" (Columbia) fe'l away miserably in closing days of a two and one-half weeks' engagement. Final four days, $6,300.

"Big Trail" Big Portland Draw; $15,000 in B. O.

Baltimore—Loew's Century, as usual, hit the high spot, doing good business with Ann Harding, a great favorite in Baltimore, in "Girl of the Golden West," with the stage show, "Nightingale Melodies," the gross being figured at $24,000.

Next following was Loew's Stanley with a gross of $16,500, which was about average for this house with George Bancroft in "Derelict."

But with the differences in seating capacities taken into consideration, the business done at the New Theatre with "Just Imagine" was very good, the gross there being reported at $12,500 for the week.

Reward for Vandals Offered by Union

Portland—The operators' union has offered an additional $50 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons guilty of dropping stench bombs in the Capitol. This offer supplements a like amount offered by C. M. Dunn, owner and operator of the theatre.

The union and the theatre have been involved in a controversy for the past year, with union members picketing the house during that period. According to James R. Forsythe, secretary of the union, they have been placed in a wrong light with the public by the use of the "bombs."

$18,000 Gross of 'Lady Surrenders' For Toronto Top

Toronto—Everybody boop-a-dooped all over the place during the week with Helen Kane appearing in person at the Imperial for the last week of the old policy at this house with a mixture of local and road vaudeville for the stage shows. The screen feature was "A Lady Surrenders." With the help of Helen the week grossed $18,000, which was top notch. The best film attraction in town was "Romance," with Greta Garbo, at Loew's, which rang up $17,000, or well above average. The second week of "Africa Speaks" at the Tivoli faded to $11,500. "Dixiana" on the screen and Nan Halperin on the stage made a nice combination at Shea's Hippodrome, which brought the neat gross of $15,000. Toronto—J. C. Rosenthal of New York, president of the Canadian Performing Rights Society, secured an interview with officials of the Motion Picture Distributors' Association of Canada and others with regard to the levying of a music tax on a seat basis in the Dominion, but failed to make any headway. Canadian exhibitors and radio stations continue to ignore notifications from the society that the music tax is payable.

DeHoff, pioneer exhibitor of Baltimore, who worked for year with the former Whitehurst theatrical interests here.

Ottawa Is Cool To "Check and Double Check"

Ottawa—It may be that radio reception conditions in Ottawa are such that the people do not hear much of Amos 'n' Andy, but the fact of the matter is that "Check and Double Check" at the Regent during the week was a flop, drawing $3,700, as compared with the season's high mark of around $5,000. Strange as it may seem, the Radio Pictures' attraction performed better at the Ottawa Imperial, where it was presented simultaneously with the Regent, although prices were raised to 75-cent top. "Big Boy," starring Al Jolson, at Keith's the last half of the week, suffered sympathetically because theatre-goers turned thumbs down on black-face comedians for the time being. "Whoopee" held up fairly well for the second week at the Centre—but nothing like the grand jam for the first six days.

Hollywood—Sam Goldwyn has decided on "One Heavenly Night" as the title of Evelyn Laye's next film, and "The Devil to Pay" for Ronald Colman's. Perhaps some day the producers will get back to earth.

"Africa Speaks" Gets $16,000 in Montreal House

Montreal—Downtown theatres of Montreal experienced a general slump during the week, although the Palace aroused some excitement with "Africa Speaks" to top the list with $16,000 for the seven days. Business suffered at the Capitol for the short-gap run of "Scarlet Pages" because of the ballyhoo on the new policy starting on the Friday with a Publix stage unit and Helen Kane herself. As a filler, "Scarlet Pages" drew $12,000 for six days. The Imperial kept on the down grade, while the Princess was off with "Eyes of the World" on a gross of $10,500. The Roxy picked up some with a British feature, "The Flame of Love," after a week's flop with "Clancy in Wall Street."

If the examinations are held off long enough they all expect to pass with Class "A" honors.

Adler Forms Company

Cleveland—C. S. Adler is president and treasurer of the newly-formed company called the Electrical Audition and Research Laboratories, Inc., which will handle the Ohio distribution of Tone-o-Graph and which is developing a special equipment to be used with Motiograph projection machines.

Cleveland Likes 'War Nurse;' Hits High with $27,500

Cleveland—"War Nurse" proved the outstanding box-office attraction of the week, doing more business the opening day than "The Big House." Good exploitation helped to popularize the picture, cash prizes and free passes being awarded to local war nurses who best described their war experiences. Otherwise, things were rather dull. Exceptionally fine weather kept people out of doors, and better-than-average legitimate stage attractions did some harm. Paul Ash was a big hit at Loew's State, drawing above the average. The other first-runs just held their own.

Estimated takings:

"WAR NURSE" (M-G-M)
STILLMAN—(1,900), 40c-75c, 7 days. Other attractions: "Love Business" (M-G-M), "Clock Shop" (M-G-M), news. Gross: $27,500.

'Tol'able David' Takes $9,000 for Providence Low

Providence—Exhibitors took a hook to the chin this week, with grosses tumbling below normal. The Majestic, showing George Arliss in "Old English," was the only house to show signs of life. Despite the fact that reviewers and those who saw the picture were loud in their praise of "Lincoln," the best Loew's could do with the offering was $18,000—below normal.

The Paramount was not so far off with "Derelict," which clicked for $14,000. The RKO Albee was down to $9,000 with "Tol'able David" and the Victory caught only $7,500 with "Night Work." The Majestic was high, catching $13,000.

Estimated takings:

Handicapped

Hollywood—Regis Toomey, Paramount's Irish player, still maintains that had the boys from the Hawaii University played with a ukulele instead of a football they would have beaten the U. S. C. Trojans by two touchdowns.

'Doorway to Hell' Gets Only $7,000 In Mpls. Showing

Minneapolis—Normal business followed Minneapolis' exceptional turnouts for "Whoopee" and "Check and Double Check" during the last fortnight when "Whoopee" folded up in the middle of the week and Amos 'n' Andy began to fall off toward the end of their fourth week in town. Weather was fair.

The Century apparently rushed the closing of "Whoopee" to take advantage of some of the fine fall weather for the opening of the Lloyd picture, "Feet First," which goes over the hump for better than normal business in the Publix holdover house.

"Check and Double Check" gives way to "Danger Lights," which RKO is putting in its holdover spot, the Seventh Street. "The Doorway to Hell" was a disappointment at $7,000 at the State.

The policy of using a holdover house has been used by Publix for some time and by Finkelstein & Ruben before them, but RKO discovered only lately that this might be a possible way out for its dark Seventh Street.

Miniature golf, which has afflicted the theatre business for some months, has moved indoors, leaving its former eruptions only barren scars on the landscape, but the interior affliction seems not likely to cause any great trouble, although several locations are getting something of a play.

The line-up for Thanksgiving week is "Tol'able David" at the RKO Orpheum, "Danger Lights" at the Seventh Street, "Scotland Yard" at the Minnesota," "Big Trail" at the State, "Feet First" at the Century, and "Once a Gentleman" for Pantages, which opens after a long spell of darkness.

Byrd's lecture cut in on kid business for Thursday afternoon and adult business Thursday night, going into the big Minneapolis municipal auditorium for only a fair take.

Estimated takings:

18 Inch Snow in Denver Hurts B.O. 'Playboy', $14,000

Denver—The week was marred by an 18-inch snow which, while hurting grosses at the picture palaces, also put corner lot golf out of the running for the winter. Most of the houses had nothing to complain about, however, as they all had pictures that went over well and the first part of the week the weather was perfect.

"Brothers," one of the productions of the Elitch stock here last summer, was the attraction at the Aladdin, and apparently folks did not want to see it a second time. "Her Man" at the Tabor kept the crowds coming all week. "Feet First" at the Rialto turned in an average week in spite of having been moved directly from the Paramount.

Chevalier, star of "Playhoy of Paris," is a femme favorite, and in combination with Ted Mack and his stage show kept the gross above average.

Estimated takings:

"BROTHERS" (Col.)
ALADDIN—(1,500), 35c-50c, 7 days. Other attractions: "Don't Give Up" (Educational), "Cobb Goes Fishing" (Pathe), "My Hero" (Vitaphone), "Irish Stew," news. Gross: $6,500.

Harold Lloyd's "Feet First" to $16,000 at Ind.

Indianapolis—Harold Lloyd's "Feet First" at the Circle did the largest business this week with a gross of $16,000. Buddy Rogers and Helen Kane in "Heads Up" failed to draw them in. The customers here did not like "Heads Up" and the comedian. Victor Moore, failed to draw due to the fact that he was not known.

Baby Rose Marie of radio fame was the headlined act at the Lyric this week, hut she did not break any records.

Estimated takings:

"HEADS UP" (Para.)

Wise Guy

Chicago—Ted Meyers, Universal salesman here, returned from his first hunting trip; one which placed a shot gun in his hands for the first time. He reported plenty of game in the river bottomlands and said he could easily have brought back more than the two ducks he exhibited if he had only known how to load his gun.

"I bagged an eagle, too," Ted exclaimed.

He reached into his game bag and proudly displayed—a mammoth horned owl.

"Life of Party" Gets $9,500 to Lead Des Moines

Des Moines—Following a big week on "Feet First" at the Des Moines, "The Life of the Party" seemed to be doing a modest business but a check-up estimated the business as 10 per cent above average. The feature met with plenty of laughs and the comment was that Winnie Lightner was better cast than in some of her roles. "Way for a Sailor" at the Paramount showed a slowing up after several weeks of extra good business at the Paramount. "Outward Bound" did not do quite so well on the last four days.

Perhaps everyone was saving up for the Thanksgiving turkey layoff. Anyway, the managers seem to think that history records this as an off week. "Pay Off" at the Orpheum was rated as not up to average business while "Silver Horde" did less on the last half. Rex Beach stories are popular too. The Strand shows an impetus to business in the serial, "The Indians Are Coming," which was on the bill the first four days with the feature, "The Virtuous Sin," and "A Sailor's Plaything" not so good on the last half.

Estimated takings:

"WAY FOR A SAILOR" (M-G-M)

Play Up Reissue

Montreal—Charlie Chaplin reissues are still going strong in Quebec. "The Pawnshop" was billed as half of a double-feature program at the Rex, Lachute.

"Love in Rough" Grosses $28,543 In "Cincy" Run

Cincinnati—The RKO Albee headed the procession of grosses for the week with "Love in the Rough" on the screen and Gene Austin topping the flesh section, Austin being booked in place of the Four Marx Brothers, who cancelled on account of Groucho's illness. The house turned in $28,543.

RKO Capitol, featuring "What a Widow," despite adverse notices by local reviewers, was runner-up in receipts, coming through with $15,169.

"Outward Bound," at the RKO Lyric, although piling up a respectable gross, did not click as it should, regardless of the fact that an opportunity was afforded to compare the screen version with this Sutton Vane opus given by a stock company here a few seasons ago. It registered big in the flesh and blood version, but local amusement shoppers at times seem to turn thumbs down on a screen production which offers mental pabulum instead of sex angles, comedy, hokum, etc., ad lib.

Gross turned in by "The Big Trail," at the RKO Palace, ran around normal.

Among the smaller houses, RKO Strand registered a nice gross with "Bright Lights," which, while not as high as some of the previous records, was, nevertheless, an improvement over the previous seven days.

Return at Keith's, with "Africa Speaks," was nothing to get excited about. Pictures of this type seem to have run their course in this burg.

Total grosses for all houses ran close to the previous week.

Estimated takings:

"LOVE IN THE ROUGH" (M-G-M)
RKO ALBEE—(3,300), 35c-50c-65c-75c, 7 days. Other attractions: "Gems of M-G-M" (M-G-M), news. Gross: $28,543. Very good.

Curtain

Colleen Moore, terminating her brief stage career, will go back to the Hollywood which once paid her a weekly salary of $10,000 and which, for five years, made her name one of the most popular flicker box office attractions all over the world. "On the Loose," the legitimate vehicle of her short footlights experiment, is folding up, going into the storehouse without any New York presentation.—N. Y. Graphic.

"Angels" a Wow In Philly Opener; $5,000 in 3 Shows

Philadelphia—"Hell's Angels" zoomed into town on Friday night and for its first three performances cleaned up $5,000, breaking all house records for like period in the history of the theatre. Its Saturday gross beat the previous high record of "The Big Parade" by $200. "Africa Speaks" closed its last week at the theatre to $5,500, reopening immediately Saturday on a grind policy at the Stanton.

"Half-shot at Sunrise" clicked into the Stanley to the tune of $22,000 for its first week, a high figure, while the Earle maintained its abnormally high grosses of the last weeks with $20,000 for "The Gorilla."

"Feet First" took $21,000 at Keith's aided by special midnight shows every night but Sunday, indicating that the Lloyd film may hold over for three weeks. It is now in its second week.

"The Big Trail" did a good week's business at the Fox, grossing a little over $27,000, but the figure was evidently disappointing as the picture's proposed second week was cancelled in favor of "Renegades." The Mastbaum continues to be a little under normal with its $38,000 for "Remote Control," while the Arcadia picked up enough on "Anybody's Woman," a second run, to hold it for a second week.

Department of Commerce Lists Yearly Progress

Washington—Work of the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Commerce during the fiscal year ended June 30 called for a great deal of readjustment as a result of the changed conditions brought about by the introduction of sound films, it is declared in the annual report of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, just submitted by Director William L. Cooper to Secretary Lamont. This development, it is declared, is now stabilized, but further scientific discoveries involving the more effective application of color in film production, the use of wide film, and the public experiments on television are beginning to cause further readjustments nearly as great and will continue to do so for some time to come.

During the year the requests upon the division represented an increase of 25 per cent over 1929 and also cover a much wider range of services than ever before, including the furnishing of much foreign market data to companies manufacturing recording and reproducing apparatus and information as to the type of foreign-language version of talking pictures required in different markets abroad, it is pointed out.

"The motion-picture equipment section," the report states, "extended its field of contacts and contributed a number of publications to that branch of the industry, including a survey of prospects for equipment sales in the Far East. The assistant chief of the division, who is in charge of this section, took a prominent part in organizing the convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers held in Washington last May, and his services in the cause of better film projection were publicly recognized by the Projection Advisory Council."

Follies at Seattle to Adopt Tab Policy

Seattle—After several months of operation under policies that included local stage revues, vaudeville and first run films, the Follies here closed this week "for repairs" and is scheduled to reopen later in the month with Will King and his musical comedy troupe from California.

King and his company were local tab favorites for several seasons a number of years ago, prior to the era of stage revues and talking pictures. Since his departure, he has been appearing on Fanchon & Marco's circuit, and has also made several talker comedies. The success of this type of show now will be watched with interest by showmen of this territory.

Fisher Celebrates

Detroit—In celebration of the second anniversary of the opening of the Fisher, a unique party was held Tuesday, when the ten oldest married couples in Detroit and vicinity were the guests of the management. Applicants for the honors and the tickets sent in their names and marriage dates, and tickets were sent to them for the performance. James Oliver Curwood's "River's End" was the screen show.

Warships to Movies

London—Germany's once proud fleet, scuttled in Scapa Flow, is to provide steel for a number of picture houses to be built throughout the country. The ships recently were raised from their ocean graveyard.

Death Penalty Is Seen Way to Stop "Casey" Bombings

Kansas City—Bombing of theatres because of alleged labor troubles may cease to be a menace here as a result of an effort on the part of prosecuting authorities to fix the death penalty on two confessed bombers of a partly-completed apartment house. The bombing took place Sept. 8. The two men, members of the carpenters' union, were arrested last week after detectives had been working on the case since the time of the explosion which endangered many lives. The apartment was being erected with non-union labor.

A bombing law was enacted by the 1929 state legislature, which reads as follows:

Section 1. Bombing defined. The wilful and malicious explosion of any bomb or other device charged with powder or other explosive is hereby declared to be and defined as bombing.

Section 2. Penalty in case of conviction. Whoever shall wilfully and maliciously explode or who maliciously aids, counsels or causes to be exploded any bomb or other device charged with powder or other explosives whereby any person is or may be put in danger of bodily injury or death, shall be deemed guilty of bombing and upon conviction thereof shall suffer death or be imprisoned in the state penitentiary for a term of not less than two years.

As a result of several recent theatre bombings, the Sound Projectionists' Association, non-union group of operators, has asked for an injunction against the local operators' union, seeking to restrain the union from damaging the property of non-union houses and from intimidating the association's members. The case was taken to the Federal court, and the granting or denial of the order is expected to come from Judge Merrill Otis within the next week. A report that Judge Otis had denied the restraining order was found to be in error, the judge asking that he be allowed to further investigate the situation.

According to several members of the Sound Projectionists' Association, the union operators have threatened violence to various non-union projectionists and several of the association's members have been granted permission to carry firearms for protection.

The last theatre here to be bombed was the Baltis, a suburban house, where a dynamite bomb was placed under the marquee several weeks ago. The house employed an operator belonging to the non-union union.

If the two carpenters receive the death sentence for their confessed parts in the apartment bombing, it is believed that theatre bombing will be less popular as a way to settle disputes.

Biz Off, Two in Baltimore Drop Newspaper Ads

Baltimore—All newspaper advertising has been dropped by the Hippodrome, combination house managed by Nat Keene, and practically all has been dropped by Warners' Metropolitan, operated by the Warners' Washington branch and managed by R. G. Woods.

At the Hippodrome patronage has been off for some time, even though that house has been offering the public the Harvey Players in stock with orchestra, chorus and acts with talking pictures.

The Metropolitan has been playing a varied program of Warner, Universal and some Fox pictures, and as this is in a residential uptown section the Washington office is undecided, since it took over the management a couple of months ago, just what the status of the house is and whether they should continue the present policy of first-runs or not. Matinees at that house are said to be nil, but with good pictures the night shows are jammed.

Experimentation with advertising has been going on. What the attitude of the newspapers will be toward the curtailing of space by these houses is a matter of conjecture.

"Blue Laws" Again to Be Under Fire in Wis.

Milwaukee—Assemblyman John W. Grobschmidt has promised to renew his attack on the state's 75-year-old "blue laws" in the 1931 legislature. The bill failed in the Senate last term, but Assemblyman Grobschmidt is sure that it will be repealed by the next legislature.

The statute which he proposes to repeal provides that "any person who shall keep open his shop, warehouse or workhouse, or shall do any manner of labor, business or work, except only works of necessity and charity, or be present at any dancing or public diversion, show or entertainment, or take part in any sport, game or play on the first day of the week shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $10."

German Imports Dropping Steadily, Report Shows

Washington—Film imports into Germany declined by about 33-1-3 per cent during the first nine months of 1930, as compared with 1929. George R. Canty, trade commissioner at Paris, reports to the Department of Commerce. During the first six months of the current year, 236 films were censored, contrasted with 315 for the same period last year, and 401 in the first nine months of 1928.

Reopen Dayton House

Dayton, O.—W. C. Chesborough, operating a chain of local theatres, to which the Salem has recently been added, has reopened the house which has been dark for several weeks pending installation of Western Electric sound equipment. New screen, seats and other improvements also have been installed.

Drops Vaude

Hamilton, Ont.—Another theatre in Canada is discontinuing vaudeville, this being the Palace, managed by Leonard Bishop, which has been featuring five R-K-O acts. The Palace is controlled by Famous Players. Shea's Hippodrome, Toronto, and Loew's, Montreal, are now the only two houses in Eastern Canada with vaudeville.

Seattle Theatre Bucks Union; to Run "All Screen"

Seattle—Eyes of the Pacific Coast show industry are on the Paramount in this city, now operating on its new "all-screen" policy with reduced prices of 25, 35 and 50 cents. The reason for the interest is the attitude of the house toward the musicians' union. At present there is no orchestra and no organist employed in the theatre.

It is understood that when the Publix units were dropped at this house last week the management requested the union to reduce the minimum musician requirement from 16 to nine men. According to reports, the union refused, declaring that the theatre must continue to employ 16 musicians. As a result, Publix officials decided to eliminate the stage band altogether, whereupon the union refused to allow any union organists to play there. This is the first case at hand in the Pacific Northwest where the theatre operators have arbitrarily disregarded the union demands.

Kid Birthday Club Planned at Baltimore

Baltimore—A Kiddie Birthday Club is being inaugurated for Loew's Parkway, residential uptown second-run house here, by Sam Gilman, manager, and Junior McGeehan, publicist.

This is being done to interest the kids in the neighborhood in the Parkway and buttons and certificates of registration with a seal, looking very important, are presented to those who enroll. It has been advertised through a trailer on the screen.

Each week single passes are mailed to those kids on the list having birthdays, the plan being that they will probably bring others into the playhouse and talk about it to other kids.

Would Ban Sunday Films

Albany—Although miniature golf courses are continuing full blast in Bellows Falls, Vt., on Sundays, the three Protestant churches in the town have decided to wage war on Sunday films. In each of these churches there was a special sermon on Sunday against Sunday shows and petitions were started in circulation asking for signatures of persons favoring closing the theatres. If these petitions are widely signed they will be turned over to the district attorney for action.

Heckle Portland First Runs Over Type of Films

Portland, Ore.—The Oregon Congress of Parents and Teachers continues to heckle the managers of some of the first-run theatres, this time complaining that, after the Saturday morning Mickey Mouse matinees, children are allowed to remain at the Fox Broadway, Fox Hollywood and Fox United Artists and view the first performance of the current films, regardless of the nature of the feature.

Another agitator, Chester A. Lyons, at the last meeting of the censor board, city officials, and ministerial association made an emphatic protest against the particular 24-sheet on "Soldier's Plaything" which was shown at Hamrick's Music Box. When he was invited by the city attorney to sign a warrant for the arrest and imprisonment of John Hamrick, he hurriedly backed water stating that he desired only prevention and not prosecution.

Madison First Runs Increase

Madison, Wis.—Competition in the first run field here is to be increased with reopening of the Parkway as an independent first run. The house will be operated by Madison Theatre Co., an organization of local business men. R. W. Miller, resigned as manager of the Fox Strand, to operate the new house. He is succeeded by Charles Loewenberg, who for eight years was with Universal in advertising and exploitation.

The Parkway was one of the local houses of the former Fischer-Paramount chain, which was taken over by L. K. Brin.

Install New Wide Screen To Boost San Diego Biz

Long Beach, Calif.—A new wide screen for use with the Realife wide screen film has been installed at the Fox West Coast theatre. It is thought use of the wide screen will help business, as grosses for the past several months in Long Beach have been low, lower, in fact, than at any time in the past three years.

Charles Miller on Own

Miller Music, Inc., has been formed in New York by Charles Miller, for 15 years with the Harms Co., and formerly music editor-in-chief of all Warner music subsidiaries.

Fox Signs Chaplin Lead

Hollywood—After completing work opposite Charlie Chaplin in "City Lights," Virginia Cherrill has been signed as a featured player at Fox.

Greenhouse Gets Omaha Post

Omaha—Daniel F. Greenhouse of the World Screen Advertising Service has been added to the house staff of the World theatre in the capacity of assistant press agent.

Acting Debunked

Here's an actor debunking acting. He is Lewis Stone, and in Photoplay Magazine he has this to say: "Any person with intelligence, natural aptitude and the capacity for hard work, can become a competent actor. You don't need to feel the roles you play. It is better, as a matter of fact, if you don't. How absurd to suppose that you can do a drunk scene when you have had ten highballs."

Mergers Not All Sweet Music, Is Executive's Slant

Mergers, no matter in what industry, are not economic Aladdin's lamps, take it from H. W. Phelps, president of the American Can Company, whose organization has passed through merger pains and, therefore, presumably is in a position to talk.

"A merger is little more than an opportunity for an able management to do a good piece of work," states Phelps in the "Executives' Service Bulletin," published by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

"Companies are brought together on the basis of earnings and assets. The picture looks bright, but when the merger actually is consummated difficulties arise. These difficulties are at least fourfold in character and concern (1) personnel, (2) methods of marketing, (3) manufacturing facilities and (4) equipment.

"It is obvious that everyone cannot be president of the new company and numerous men who have occupied the office of chief executive must now take subordinate places. Some of these men will be constitutionally unable to accept such subordination, feeling that they know more about their own business than anyone else. Naturally, such executives must be eliminated in order to assure the progress of the new company."

Legit Show at $1 Top Folds at Seattle

Seattle—Evidently the legitimate stage is doomed in this city. After four weeks of mediocre business, executives of the Bainbridge Stock Company, that has been on the boards at the Metropolitan, announced that they will close next week and move back to Minneapolis. The company has presented weekly changes of plays at $1 top, under the sponsorship of the A. L. Erlanger interests. In announcing the closing, E. G. Cooke, house manager, reported that Seattle has contributed less business during the last year to traveling legitimate shows than any other city on the Pacific Coast that is on the route list of such attractions.

Publix Operating at Hamilton

Hamilton, O.—Publix now is operating the Palace here, acquired from Turberg & Silver.

Seitz Gets Assignment

Hollywood—George B. Seitz is to direct "Drums of Jeopardy" for Tiffany.

Danger Lights

(R-K-O-Spoor-Berggren Natural Vision Process)

Spectacular and Significant

(Reviewed by S. A. Kane)

"DANGER LIGHTS," as the initial feature-length production made and projected with Spoor-Berggren equipment, provides an excellent illustration of what mechanical and scientific developments can do to improve ordinary motion picture drama. This picture has been photographed on standard as well as 65 mm. film. The standard film version is an ordinary picture with nothing more than excellent sound effects and occasional picturesque shots to distinguish it. On the other hand, the wide film and wide screen version is a startling experience in the possibilities of photographic realism, that makes of common motion picture material a spectacular show.

The fact is more impressive when it is remembered that "Danger Lights" was not selected as the one story possibility among many that would best adapt itself to the purposes of the Spoor-Berggren equipment. It was a story going into production at a time when a test of the Spoor process was required, so the Spoor cameras followed the company on location and into the studios, and were placed beside standard cameras, recording the same scenes and action from angles identical to those employed by the standard cameras. The photographic results of the two media are as significant as they are strangers to each other.

The story is that of a veteran railroad man, Louis Wolheim, known for his ability on the job and his kindliness to less fortunate railroad men. Wolheim has been the mainstay of Frank Sheridan, who plays a disabled engineer, and the latter's daughter, played by Jean Arthur, whom Wolheim is engaged to marry.

Robert Armstrong, a discredited railroad man, is reinstated by Wolheim, and established in his and Sheridan's home. There Armstrong falls in love with Jean Arthur, and the two, afraid to face the father and the benefactor, plan an elopement. Leaving at night, Armstrong's foot is caught in a rail switch, as the Limited approaches. Wolheim, pursuing them, finds them in this predicament. He sacrifices himself to free Armstrong, and the resultant injuries require the attention of a brain specialist to save his life. The nearest specialist is in Chicago. A record run must be made to get him in time.

Armstrong volunteers to take the throttle of a special and, with the tracks cleared for it, the run to Chicago is made in some such unprecedented time as 90-odd miles per hour, for the five hours. Wolheim's life is saved, and in a final sacrificial gesture he concedes Armstrong's better claim on the girl and contents himself with pursuing his love for railroading.

On standard film this story is told in the ordinary and casual manner suggested by its theme. The natural vision process, adding a partly achieved illusion of a third dimension, a clearer and vastly larger projection, and a panoramic sweep to outdoor sequences never before achieved by motion picture cameras, succeeds in contributing to the production a spectacular realism. This contribution, in turn, gives a dignity and interest to the production that the standard film version does not even suggest.

The third dimensional illusion is most noticeable in outdoor shots of a panoramic sweep, in which depth of backgrounds is naturally present. The same illusion in lesser emphasis is present in outdoor sequences of limited visual ranges. As a photographic result it disappears entirely in indoor shots at close range.

Aside from the third dimensional illusion, the picture is distinguished, photographically, by the scenic and realistic shots caught along the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific's right-of-way as the special train bearing the injured railroad man makes its record run to Chicago. Audiences impulsively applauded occasional of these shots at the theatre in which the picture was caught.

The Natural Vision version of "Danger Lights" is destined to attract much natural publicity, newspaper comment and word-of-mouth advertising. It was put on cold in Chicago, without any increase in advertising or exploitation over the normal average for a program picture. It opened to average business, built steadily from day to day, and was continuing to build at the opening of its second week, as a result of the attention its spectacular qualities gains it.

Some effects and reproduction are excellent, and contribute importantly to the realistic success of the new photographic and projection process. Direction by George B. Seitz is capable. All roles are adequately handled by the same cast noted in the review of the standard film version of "Danger Lights" in the September 6 issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. Comedy relief is afforded with the occasional appearances of Hugh Herbert as a dignified tramp. Length and running time are the same as for the standard film version.

Most remarkable is the suggestion carried by this of the photographic possibilities of the process which will undoubtedly result from its further development and with pictures better suited to its spectacular achievements. The limited number of panoramic shots afforded by the script of "Danger Lights" ably demonstrate what the process could achieve under such circumstances. These panoramic shots are unquestionably the most complimentary to the Natural Vision process, yet because of their scarcity and brevity they are not, in themselves, an adequate demonstration of the full possibilities of the new photographic and projection process. Such a picture as "The Big Trail" would have been admirably suited to the Spoor-Berggren equipment, and would have provided its almost perfect test.

Better-suited vehicles will bring out the system's greatest advantages as it now stands. These will be outdoor pictures. Improvement of the results it produces in indoor shots must, apparently, wait on further scientific improvement of the process.

"Danger Lights" was reviewed on standard film in MOTION PICTURE NEWS for September 6.

Sin Takes a Holiday

(Pathe)

Swell Women's Picture

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

GEAR your campaign for the women with this one. It's built that way and, while the male percentage of your audience will probably find it entertaining, "Sin Takes a Holiday" is very much female stuff.

Here you have a smart, sophisticated, and often improbable yarn, wherein Constance Bennett steps out of a drab stenographer's role in the early part of the picture and converts herself into a one-woman fashion show for the rest of the footage.

You find her as secretary to Kenneth MacKenna, divorce lawyer whose legal astuteness isn't sufficient to keep him from becoming entwined in an affair with Rita La Roy. Rita, three times married, is preparing to divorce the fourth in the anticipation that MacKenna will marry her. Only he doesn't, makes a deal with Miss Bennett to marry him—one of those in-name-only affairs—for one year, after which he figures his episode with Miss La Roy will have sufficiently cooled off to permit continuance of bachelorhood.

Constance, who really loves him, consents although the motivitation is something you have to guess at because the story development never makes it totally clear. Immediately after the ceremony she sails for Europe, $5,000 having been settled on her as the price for going through with the procedure.

On the boat she meets Basil Rathbone, man-about-town and off to Paris for his annual adventures in love. He makes a violent play for her and showers the types of entertainment upon her which the mob ordinarily associates with the idle rich: a chateau, visits to the races, roulette, winter sports in the Alps, etc. Their joint appearance everywhere eventually leads Rathbone to tell Constance that their entire set believes they are carrying on a love affair, although it is clearly indicated that they are not. He asks her to marry him, but she refuses until she has had opportunity to see MacKenna in New York and to discover if she still loves him.

So back to the States they go. MacKenna is dazzled by the change through which Miss Bennett has passed via clothes, beauty parlors and the like. He discovers he loves her, despite the fact that this portion of the story is hardly dramatically and progressively consistent.

In order to end the La Roy episode which has been flourishing all this time, MacKenna asks Miss Bennett to carry through the husband-and-wife situation. She consents, succeeds in routing the female menace and finds herself listening to MacKenna's arguments and protestations of undying love. In the meantime, Rathbone gets tired of waiting and departs after leaving word that he is again sailing for Paris to discover something he missed on the last trip.

Horace Jackson, who did the adaptation and dialogue, did an extremely good job. His situations and his dialogue are smart and occasionally tinged with the suggestive, all of which this reviewer feels is in keeping with the general type of story although the heads of families may disagree.

Miss Bennett does nice work, just that. Her performance, while adequate, never turns as startling as the women of the nation will undoubtedly find her clothes. But then you have her appearance in the enormously successful "Common Clay" to cash in on. Don't forget it. The rest of the cast is very satisfactory, the best work of the troupe being delivered by Basil Rathbone.

Wild Men of Kalihari

(Talking Picture Epics)

Good Travel Film

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

DR. E. ERNEST CADLE made this interesting film of the bushmen of South Africa while heading the Denver African Expedition. The scenes are described by Dr. Cadle while they unfold.

The naked wild men have no habitation, wandering over the desert and its fringes. The race, now nearly extinct, once comprised a large portion of the population of Africa.

Talking Picture Epics has adopted a policy with its scientific and travel pictures, guaranteeing their authenticity in every respect. Paul Maschke edited the film, which needs strong short or feature support. Length, 4,490 feet. Running time, 50 minutes. Release date, Nov. 22.

The Great Meadow

(M-G-M)

Spectacle; Story Weak

(Reviewed by Jack Grant)

NOTABLE as a spectacle of great scenic beauty, the story values of "The Great Meadow" suffer accordingly. Basically the picture is just another drama of the conquest of the West merged with a variation of the Enoch Arden theme. Seldom does the story take precedent over the scenic effects. Particularly is this true in the M-G-M large screen process, "Realife."

The wisdom of having Johnny Mack Brown follow his "Billy, the Kid" with "The Great Meadow" is debatable. Comp. risons are invited and "Meadow" must perforce come out second best. It lacks the action, suspense and consequent audience appeal of "Billy." Berk Jarvis is a more sincere characterization, but decidedly less colorful.

The best-selling novel by Elizabeth Madox Roberts offered plot incident of a minor nature for film transcription. Under the direction of Charles Brabin, never noted for humorous touches, comedy relief is practically overlooked. The beauty of its photography is "The Great Meadow's" strongest bid for fame.

Opening in an American settlement in the past—revolutionary days, Johnny Mack Brown is introduced as a boy incited by the tales of Daniel Boone of the little known region of Kentucky. He forms a band of pioneers to enter the territory and takes Eleanor Boardman as his bride to homestead the land. The trek across the country depicts all the hardships of the times. Barefoot and weary the tiny band at last reach Boone's fort on the Kentucky river.

Nor do the hardships end there. The women's work has just begun. This, if any, is the story's preachment. Brown's mother, splendidly realized by Lucille La Verne, is killed by an Indian and scalped. The boy vows vengeance and leaves his wife to seek his mother's redskin murderer.

He is gone a year when Eleanor Boardman hears of his death. The struggle for existence with her little boy proves more than she can bear alone. When Brown returns, he finds his wife married to Gavin Gordon and a second child in the household.

The wife is asked to choose, both men agreeing to abide by her decision. She explains to Brown why he must go but Gordon, knowing the choice is dictated by loyalty, refused to allow her to make the sacrifice.

The story is at times a bit incoherent and dialogue with frequent "thars" and similar colloquialisms does not help to easy understanding.

Eleanor Boardman's performance as the pioneer wife is surely her finest since the memorable "Crowd." John Mack Brown makes the most of somewhat limited opportunities and Gavin Gordon is admirable in a repressed portrayal. The rest of the cast rate superlatives with Lucille La Verne and Russell Simpson particularly outstanding.

"The Great Meadow" needs careful attention in exploiting and advertising. Stress the women's angle.

Comedy shorts definitely necessary.

Truth About Youth

(First National)

Average Programmer

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

THIS is a story of youth based upon the stage play, "When We Were Twenty-one." It has been capably directed by William Seiter, but the story, while unusual, fails to click as it should and the talker rates about average.

Should prove okay for the seven-day spots and subsequent bookings if given good support and the names in the cast exploited heavily.

Conway Tearle, as the guardian of David Manners, plans to have him marry Loretta Young, the daughter of Tearle's housekeeper. The youth, however, falls for a night club entertainer, Myrna Loy, and spends his time courting her. Tearle and Miss Young plan to save Manners from the whopee gal, but are unsuccessful. Miss Loy falls for Manners, but comes to find out that he is not the unsophisticated lad she thought he was. In the meantime, Tearle and Young, having been together trying to aid Manners, gradually fall in love and the final fadeout comes with them in each other's arms.

Conway Tearle does some fine acting as the guardian and Loretta Young as the girl is very good at handling some dramatic moments. J. Farrell MacDonald and Harry Stubbs are well cast and David Manners as the youth plays his part capably. Miss Loy, however, does the outstanding work and plays her role of the entertainer in a spirited manner.

Use strong shorts in this spot, musicals or comedy will fit best.

Two Worlds

(British International Pictures)

Fair Program

(Reviewed by Robert Hage)

THIS boasts a good story with some unusual situations. It drags somewhat in the typical British manner and is devoid of comedy. The producer certainly missed a bet when he didn't get players without English accents for the principal roles. Some of the lingo of the Austrian soldiers, for instance, certainly would have landed them in an internment camp, with Austria-Hungary at war with Great Britain.

The story is laid along the Austro-Russian front during the war, where the particular town concerned changes hands frequently. The son of a Jewish clock-maker is killed by the Austrians and the father is broken-hearted. In a frenzy he strikes the Austrian officer and is sentenced to jail, denied the opportunity to watch over his son's remains.

The officer is enamoured of a dancer and spends the night at a hotel, only to awaken and find the Russians have entered the town. Pretty far-fetched, particularly when the officer is the son of the Russian commander. He tries to escape and is shot by the Russians, with the Jewish clock-maker's daughter taking him into her home, over the protestations of her father. The Russians accept the old man's word that the youth is his son, and so he is unmolested. When the girl falls in love with the officer the father, frantic over the prospects of losing her, sends a letter to the Russian commandant offering to reveal the Austrian's whereabouts if given immunity. The Austrians recapture the town and the youth's father find the letter, using it as a threat against the clock-maker's life, to force his son to renounce the girl.

The ending is carried out logically. As a result, it is abrupt, lacking the happy finish. While this reviewer prefers to see a story carried to its logical conclusion—and no further—audiences generally do not, which probably will hurt this financially.

Ex-Flame

(Liberty)

Not So Hot

(Reviewed by Jack Grant)

SHADES of our old friend, "East Lynne," all dressed up in modern clothes. Good for the smaller runs and split weekers. The sexy monicker of "Ex-Flame" will help and the production, sets and photography are far above the average established by independent producers.

Modernizing "East Lynne" was in itself no mean task. Yet, you who remember your barnstorming favorite will probably get a chuckle or two from the literal adaptation given it here. It is still a tear jerker, but so much water has run under the bridge since they first went at "East Lynne" that the situations no longer bring a flood. The comedy, with Snub Pollard dragged in as a stooge servant, doesn't click.

Story opens with the return of Neil Hamilton and Marian Nixon from their honeymoon. The couple take up residence at the Hamilton family estate and Marian immediately manifests jealousy at the sight of a photo of her husband with a former sweetheart—the "Ex-Flame" of the title. In the abruptness of the introduction of her jealousy some sympathy is lost.

Four years pass and the ex returns to become a neighbor. She definitely sets her cap for Hamilton and Marian turns a brilliant green. When she catches her husband kissing the girl she packs up, takes her baby and leaves. Her devoted admirer, Norman Kerry, also an "ex," calls at her apartment. His doctor has given him but a few months to live, so he has called to say good-bye. He says it and dies immediately.

It's 4 A.M. Scandal. Husband sues for divorce. Takes baby from mother publicly judged improper person. Mother goes "Madame X," jumping around country with first one man, then another. Finally hears of husband's engagement to the "Ex-Flame." Returns to England bent on kidnaping child. Discovering her hiding in closet, husband realizes his love. Reconciliation. Fade out.

This is "Ex-Flame," nee "East Lynne."

Only Saps Work

(Paramount)

Not a Sap in the Cast

(Reviewed by S. A. Kane)

BEGINNING with the author, everyone connected with "Only Saps Work" shows implicit belief in the title. The results would indicate that what the picture needed was a few saps.

This is a comedy of decidedly average quality, that is emphatically not suited for the weekly grinds. Smaller houses may find it suitable for a day or two of average business.

The story is inconsequential and almost unrecognizable, as such. It is full of absurdities and improbabilities, which producers of feature length comedies have come to believe is about all that is necessary in the making of a comedy. Leon Errol is the picture's comedy mainstay, and, with lack of distinction in his work, the whole structure of the production falls through. Errol does try, but even a better comedian than he would be discouraged by the material given him to work with in this one. As a voluble crook who talks his way out of a variety of embarrassing predicaments his performance depends on his chatter to put it over. The lines given him in this one are dull, lacking in originality and too plentiful. He is obliged frequently to go into lengthy spiels of tiresome chatter, and what little of humor there is in them is lost to audiences more often than not because of the rapidity with which Errol barks them out and follows them up.

Errol, a semi-gentlemanly crook, involves Richard Arlen in a bank robbery, unknown to the latter, who waits outside in the car while the job is pulled by Errol. They make their way to a health resort where Arlen has obtained a job as a kitchen boy. On the train en route they encounter Mary Brian, Charles Grapewin, in the role of her father, and Anderson Lawler, who plays an admirer of Miss Brian's. Arlen has posed as the owner of the health resort to Mary Brian. His real position is discovered by Lawler when the party arrives at the resort, and a portion of what passes for comedy in this is supplied in the course of Lawler's attempts to show up Arlen to the girl.

Errol poses at the resort as a detective working on the bank robbery which he has perpetrated. A dumb bellhop, played irritatingly by Stuart Erwin, who is ambitious to become a detective, volunteers his help to Errol. The latter points out Grapewin and Lawler as the robbery suspects and instructs the bellhop to shadow them continually.

When Arlen learns that Errol has "stuck up" the bank, he insists they return the money. Errol finally agrees, but at this juncture two detectives enter. Considerable allegedly humorous confusion results, which ends as Errol and Arlen are being taken away by the two newcomers. At the doorway they are halted and revealed as fakes by two genuine detectives. Explanations which absolve Arlen, fixing things for him with the girl, result. Errol, however, is wanted by the detectives, but employs a ruse in order to escape them at the fadeout.

No particular demands are made of either Arlen or Miss Brian by the story. They are little more in evidence than any supporting member of the cast, and have nothing to do even when on the scene. Fault of the picture, however, is entirely the story's. It offers less than the cast manages to deliver.

Fast and Loose

(Paramount)

Disappointing

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

TAKEN from the stage play, "The Best People," this talker should have been a sparkling comedy drama throughout, but as it stands it is bright in some spots and very amateurish and overdone in others. The photography is not at all good and detracts from the action in numerous scenes.

Will perhaps be okay for the average week run spots if heavily plugged. Cast has no great name value and needs strong support in balance of program.

The story of "Fast and Loose" concerns the love of a rich boy for a poor girl and a rich girl for a poor boy. Both eventually marry their opposites, but not until they are made to see there is no such thing as class distinction.

Miriam Hopkins is the rich girl and Charles Starrett is the poor auto mechanic. When she first meets him it is at the beach and, clad only in a bathing suit, his poverty is not so apparent. Later Miss Hopkins meets him when she calls for a mechanic and, despite the shock, she loves him and wants him to marry her. This he will not do because of the class inequality. In the meantime, Henry Wadsworth, the rich son of Frank Morgan, falls in love with Carole Lombard, a chorus girl. Morgan, thinking the girl is after the boy's money, plans a meeting with her and takes the suspicious brother-in-law, Herbert Yost, along for Carole's girl friend, Ilka Chase.

This little party, however, is broken up when the son and daughter appear and suspect the worst. They get drunk and are taken to jail, where the whole family meets to settle the affair. Here it is discovered that money you have or haven't doesn't make any difference—love is what counts and all is settled satisfactorily.

The acting in this picture is very spotty. Miss Hopkins is excellent at times and her comedy good. Charles Starrett and Frank Morgan give the best performances and their characters are real. Miss Lombard is most fitting in a rather small role and deserves better parts, as she has the ability.

The unevenness of the production handicaps it greatly and unless the comedy angle is thoroughly installed in the mind of the spectator at the first the talker is apt to prove dull for the most part.

Men Without Law

Plenty of Action

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

BUCK JONES has plenty to do and does it well in this actionful western. The story has several implausibilities, and the long arm of coincidence mars it somewhat, but there is action a-plenty and some comedy, which is what action fans want. Added to this is the beauty of Carmelita Geraghty, and although her Mexican accent slips at times, she makes a pleasant heroine. Buck's horse, Silver, plays an important role, releasing Buck's bonds at one point.

The action takes place along the Mexican border, to which Buck returns from overseas. He falls for a Mexican girl on the train, but does not learn her identity. Arrived home, he finds that his brother has turned bad man, and that afternoon the youngster is captured following a hold-up of the bank. Buck prevails upon the sheriff to release the boy so that he can go home to his mother, agreeing to act as a hostage. The boy is captured by the gang and Buck escapes and goes to the rescue and is captured. The outlaw finds a letter from a Mexican don on Buck, and impersonates the latter to rob the old man. He makes off with the daughter, but Buck accomplishes a couple of more sensational escapes and saves the girl.

There are a few tears, a few laughs, good direction with the supporting cast adequate, although Tommy Carr is light for his part. As a double feature or split week fare for action fans, it gets over well.

Are You There?

(Fox)

Dull and Unfunny

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

THE average audience won't know whether they went super-subtle on this, or just muffed the works. It's supposed to be funny and no doubt the intentions were honest, but between preparation and the cutting room something missed fire and the results show it.

Beatrice Lillie, whose name doesn't mean a thing to picture audiences, occupies the featured spot in this musical comedy affair. The book has her down as an ultra-modern detective who never loses her case. To her comes Geoffrey, son of the Duke of St. Pancras, with an ambition to block the marriage of his pater with Countess Helenka. Miss Lillie determines to take the case and goes to the castle as Lady Diana Drummond, big game hunter. Of course, she exposes the countess for the crook she is and wins the duke.

Musical comedy formula never calls for heavy brain work on the story. On that score, "Are You There?" may be excused. But more than indulgence is necessary to alibi the old wheezes turned out of their dust-covered corners for gags and the generally ineffectual efforts of Miss Lillie to be funny. Perhaps it was the material; perhaps Miss Lillie is too British. At any rate, she doesn't deliver in this talker.

The supporting cast has inconsequential roles and plays them that way.

It Happened in Hollywood
(Universal)
A Howl

THIS is loaded with laughs. It's the story of a sap (George Chandler), who gets on a Hollywood lot with the gate keeper (Tom Kennedy) trying to get him out. There are a lot of tunny and original gags, which keep the heehaws coming thick and fast. It's a great subject for any kind of bill. Running time, 22 minutes.

Polo
(Visugraphic)
A Pip!

SHORTS of this type come few and far between. The thrills of the ponies riding the picturesque field at Meadowbrook, Long Island, driven by such famous players as Hitchock, Guest and others in a hard-fought game between American and British teams; and a certain pronounced instructional value when polo leaders explain various strokes combine to make this reel highly entertaining.

Will fit nicely into any bill at practically every type theatre, with a particular appeal to the more sophisticated. Running time, 20 minutes.

In Mexico
(Universal)
Will Get By

APPARENTLY Universal intends to send Oswald on a trip around the world, for here he is in the land of the tamale, becoming mixed up with chicken fights, sexy senoritas, etc. Too much singing and dancing get on the nerve. Running time, 6 minutes.

In Africa
(Universal)
Fair

OSWALD the rabbit visits the dark continent and has some fun with camels, lions dancing girls, mummies, etc., etc. There are a few novel bits of business, but there is too much noise emanting from the horn. This series is far from what it used to be when it was silent. Running time, 6 minutes.

The Picnic
(Columbia)
Diverting

MICKEY MOUSE gets himself nicely messed up in a picnic. What the birds, ants and whatnot do to the food is just too bad for Mickey and the picnic, but perfectly swell insofar as the audience and its inclination to laugh are concerned. Produced in his usual, inimitable style by Walt Disney. Running time, 7 minutes.

All for a Lady
(Universal)
Okay

NO. 6 in the "Leather Pusher" series, but far below its predecessors in quality and interest. Up to date each of the series has packed a good story and has been embellished with production values, but in this one the yarn develops a farcical vein that is an anti-climax and will disappoint those who have been sold on the general excellence of the series. The usual prize fight is staged in a barn and the audience consists of more cowboys than you ever saw in a western. Directed by Al Kelly. Running time, 20 minutes.

Weak

A MARIONETTE show, cleverly done, will appeal to the children, but the other units are lacking in interest. They include a covered wooden bridge in Pennsylvania, children being fitted with new transparent shoes, and a selection played on the virginal, the type of piano popular in Queen Elizabeth's time, with a talk by Lotta Van Buren. Running time, 10 minutes.

Talk-o-Graphs
(Henry Sonenshine)
Interesting

NORMAN BROKENSHIRE, Canadian traveler, lectures through this magazine reel which boasts a number of subjects widely diversified and entertaining. Two of these subjects demonstrate that the series should be diverting and entertaining, a camel fight in the second standing out particularly. Running time, 9 minutes each.

Office Boy
(Pathe)
Good

MILTON MOUSE is the office boy in this Aesop Fable and in love with the pretty stenog, but he can't compete with the boss in that direction until Mrs. Boss appears on the scene and sails into hubby. Whereupon the course of true love runs smoothly. Does not pack a punch, but it is free of the usual banal striving for musical effects. Running time, 8 minutes.

Came the Pawn
(Columbia)
Amusing

EDDIE BUZZELL did a three-barreled job on this; he wrote the yarn, directed the picture and also plays the radio announcer who tells the story of the pictures you see. Most of the film is silent, accompanied by Buzzell's running dialogue with the words of the silent actors pretty well, although not always, matched up with the actual dialogue. The tale takes the form of a radio bed-time story for grown-ups and concerns the double-crossings of a young, but bored, married couple. Running time, 9 minutes.

Spanish Rhythm
Fairly Good

Felix Fernandino and his orchestra put over a number of tuneful Spanish melodies in this. There are some good singing and dancing to give it pep and color. A fairly good offering of the stage band variety. Running time, 8 minutes.

Welcome Home
(Tiffany)
Fair Song Number

PRESENTING Forbes Randolph and his jubilee singers in a series of songs. The Negro troupe is shown first in a dugout in France, where the boys leave their comrade presumably dead. Then the scene shifts to a drawing room, where they get together for several song numbers. Fairly good and novel. Running time, 9 minutes.

Lambs Will Gamble
(Columbia)
Swell Cartoon

CLEVER boys, Manny Gould and Ben Harrison, who conceive the Krazy Kat series. Produced by Winkler Pictures for Columbia distribution, "Lambs Will Gamble" deals with the stock market, the tussle between the bears and the bulls and how Krazy Kat brings enough dough to the rescue just when the stock tape goes completely blooey. This conveys the idea only; the actual cartoon work is far more clever. Running time, 7 minutes.

Dangerous Youth
(Pathe)
Punk

IF your audience is interested in Daphne Pollard's bloomers here's a treat for them. Daphne does a continuous routine of falls, jumps, splits and other contortions during the course of a story that must have been born during a nightmare. Very sad. Directed by Arch Heath. Running time, 21 minutes.

Guiseppe Verdi
(Fitzpatrick)
Interesting, Educational

Another of the Music Masters series and a good one. These subjects are nicely done and have great educational value, showing the lives of the great composers.

Verdi, composer of 'Aida" and other notable works is shown as the sorrowful music master, who struggles against great odds and sorrow to achieve eminence. Running time, 9 minutes.

W. E. New Recording "Mike" in Studios, Jan. 1

A new recording microphone designed by Western Electric to eliminate ground noises, development of which was exclusively reported in MOTION PICTURE NEWS last week, goes into operation in the studios of licensed companies on January 1. The first picture so recorded is "The Right to Love," starring Ruth Chatterton.

Details of the "mike" have been held very secretive, but it is understood the device is about the size of a quarter. Its diaphragm forms the front wall of a chamber filled with carbon granules. Speech waves, coming partly from the speaker's lips and partly from his chest, set the diaphragm into vibration, which is transmitted to the carbon grains. Contact between individual grains are made alternately tighter and looser and electrical waves are set up which are a good copy of the speech waves.

To increase the likeness of one kind of wave to the other, a circuit has been designed to lessen response to the heavy chest tones, which would otherwise be unduly prominent. The device was originally designed for an operator's transmitter, but it is predicted that it should prove of assistance to weak-voiced actors, especially in theatres where the acoustics are faulty.

Projectionists' Round Table

By John F. Rider

WHILE it is difficult to imagine such a thing, a hot filament throws off particles of negative electricity and, if we were to set up a measuring station a small distance from the emitter, we would note a cloud of these particles around the emitter. The territory surrounding such an emitter is in a state which is of interest because it has a very definite bearing upon the operation of the three and four-element vacuum tube.

The fact that the free electron leaves the filament, or the emitter, is due to sufficient acceleration being provided by the temperature of the filament or the emitter. But where does it go after it leaves the emitter? While sufficient acceleration has been provided for it to leave the filament, the speed of the electron is still not sufficient to cause it to move a great distance from the emitter.

At the same time, the greater the number of electrons, or charges of negative electricity, that leave the emitter, the greater is the positive charge accumulatd by the emitter. Hence, there is an attraction by the emitter upon some of the electrons. These two actions cause the formation of a cloud of electrons around the emitter. We shall refer to this state a little later.

The method used to heat the emitter to the proper temperature is of little consequence. Actually, the activating agent depends solely upon the type of tube used. One general type of vacuum tube employed for amplification and the conversion of alternating currents into direct currents, makes use of a filament which may be heated by direct or alternating current. As far as the actual emission of electrons is concerned, the type of current employed to heat the filament has very little bearing upon the action of the tube.

As will be shown later, it does influence the mode of application of the tube, but if the effective value of alternating current is the equal of a certain value of direct current, the rate of emission of electrons remains unchanged. In connection with the two forms of excitation current, it is necessary to mention that certain types of filaments are more suitable for use with alternating current. At the same time, direct current may be applied to these filaments without any change in emissivity.

Another form of emitter secures its excitation by virtue of the transmission heat generated in a heater. In other words, indirect heating is employed. This type of structure is known as the heater-cathode type of tube, wherein a filament is employed to heat a cathode sleeve, the former serving purely as a heater and the latter as the electron emitter.

In connection with electron emitters in general, the source of electrons is usually referred to as the cathode. Thus, in the filament type of tube, the filament is the cathode and, in the heater type of tube, the sleeve surrounding the heater is the cathode. Examples of filament types of tubes are all Western Electric tubes, the 345, the 350, the 326 and the 371. Examples of indirect heater types of tubes are the 327 and the 324.

The Plate. Investigators during the 19th century noted that if an incandescent filament and a plate were located within an evacuated chamber and, if the plate were given a positive charge with respect to the filament or the cathode, current would flow through the external circuit. Such a system is shown in Figure 100, where F is the filament and P is the plate. The filament battery is A and the means of applying a positive charge to the plate P is the plate battery B. The current indicating instrument is G.

Further researches showed some very significant facts relating to this circuit arrangement. First, was the polarity of the B battery. With a constant value of filament potential, current was indicated upon G, only when the + end of the B battery was connected to the plate of the tube. When the — side was connected to plate and the + end to the filament, the current meter G indicated zero.

Therefore, the relation of the charges upon the plate and the filament became known and definite. Since there was no metallic link between the filament and the plate within the tube and since current flow was indicated through the external circuit, it was evident that current flow was existent between the filament and the plate within the tube; that, under certain conditions when the plate was positive, the electrons emitted by the filament traveled across the same intervening between the filament and plate and moved to the plate, constituting the filament-plate current, generally referred to as the plate current.

At the same time certain forms of varying the plate current were noted. Since the attraction of the emitted electron by the plate is a function of the positive charge applied to the plate or the value of the plate voltage, any change in plate voltage will cause a change in the number of electrons which arrive at the plate. This is so because of the change in the attracting power of the plate. On the other hand, any change in the value of the filament battery changes the temperature of the filament. Therefore, its emissivity characteristic reduces or increases the number of electrons available for passage to the plate. Thus, the plate current is not only a function of the plate potential, but also of the filament potential, current or temperature.

However, we must recognize certain definite limitations in both instances. Assuming a very definite value of filament current, the emission of electrons at that value of current is very definitely limited. If the emission is little or great, it is still limited. Since the number of emitted electrons per second are limited, the emission current is limited; therefore, the number which may reach the plate per second to constitute the plate current is finite. Starting with zero positive plate voltage, the plate current will be zero.

As the plate voltage is increased, the attracting power of the plate is increased and more and more of the electrons emitted by the filament will be pulled toward the plate. Consequently, the plate current will increase. However, one cannot continue increasing the plate voltage to an infinite value and hope to attract an infinite number of electrons.

There are two factors which produce two critical values of plate voltage. The lower of these is that which causes plate current saturation. In other words, for a certain value of attracting force, or plate voltage, all of the available electrons emitted by the filament per second arrive at the plate. Increasing the plate voltage beyond this point does not increase the plate current because there are no longer any additional electrons available. A fixed amount being emitted by the filament per second and all of these arrive at the plate. This relation may be expressed as the plate voltage-plate current characteristic with constant filament potential and may be illustrated as shown in Figure 101. This curve shows the plate current in milliamperes upon the left-hand ordinate and the plate voltage is indicated upon the abscissa.

As is evident in the curve, the critical plate voltage for whatever value of filament voltage, current or temperature is being applied, is about 80 volts. This means a plate current of about 24 milliamperes. Increasing the plate voltage to 100 volts produces very little increase in plate current. In other words, the plate current curve flattens out.

Now from this curve, we can glean the information that the length of the plate current curve is a definite function of the filament emission. If the emission is reduced by decreasing the filament current to say .5 ampere instead of the 1 ampere originally applied, the point of saturation may be reduced to 35 volts instead of 80 volts. Thus the lower the filament emission, the less need by the plate voltage in order to produce plate current saturation.

From a practical angle, as applied to vacuum tubes in general, this state means but one thing: namely, that it is useless to increase plate voltage in the hope of securing greater amplification or rectification. It is, of course, possible that the normal rated plate voltage is not that which will produce or approach sauration, in which case increasing the plate voltage will increase amplification, or the current output, from a rectifier. But sooner or later the saturation point will be reached.

The second critical voltage referred to earlier in this test is that limited by the insulation employed within the tube. All vacuum tubes bear definite voltage raings which must be observed. In connection with the filament or heater, excess voltage will ruin the filament. In the case of plate voltages, excess voltage or that beyond the maximum rating quoted by the tube manufacturer introduces the hazard of rupture of the insulation within the tube. In connection with the plate, bombardment of the plate by the electrons results in the generation of a great deal of heat.

The greater the plate current, the greater is the heat developed in the plate. Since all plates have a rated wattage dissipation, excess voltage will cause excess current and excessive heating of the plate. If this is carried on to a sufficient degree, the plate becomes incandescent and apt to liberate gases which will impair the operation of the tube, if the insulation within the tube does not break down by that time. As to excessive heating of the plate, such action is accompanied by volatilization of the plate and the formation of a metallic deposit upon the mesh of the tube, making the tube unfit for use even at its normal voltages.

Direction of Electronic Flow. We recognize the direction of the flow of the electron stream as being from the filament, or the cathode, to the plate within the tube. However, there has been a great deal of comment relative to the assumed direction of the current flow within the tube circuit. For a long time past it has been customary to assume the direction of the plate current to be opposite to that of the electronic current. In other words, it has been customary to assume that electric current flows from the positive to the negative poles. This idea was formulated prior to the development of the vacuum tube and, as it became a part of all text books, it was continued even after the vacuum tube was developed.

Based upon the statement that the plate current is the electronic stream, the direction of the plate current is the same as the electronic stream. As a matter of fact, some modern text books follow out this idea and refer to the direction of the plate current as from the filament or the cathode to the plate. During this discussion of vacuum tubes we shall find ourselves in accord with the general statement and point out that the direction of plate current is from the plate to the filament or cathode.

Rectifying Tubes. One of the primary functions of vacuum tubes today is the rectification of alternating currents; i. e., is the conversion of alternating emf in direct emf and alternating currents into direct currents. Naturally the conversion of alternating current into direct current automatically means the conversion of the respective voltages in like manner.

The most popular form of rectifier tubes employed in sound systems is the ordinary two-element tube consisting of an electron emitter and a plate, both contained in a highly evacuated chamber. The circuit arrangement of the tube is like that shown in Figure 100, but the basic circuit arrangement of a rectifying system is like that shown in Figure 102. The filament circuit is as before, excitation of the filament being secured by means of the A battery.

The plate circuit contains a resistance R, a current indicating device G and two banks of B batteries, one of which is so arranged that the potential applied to the plate may make the plate negative with respect to the filament. The other B battery is so arranged that the plate may be made positive with respect to the filament. The switch lever S governs the polarity of the plate voltage.

By manipulating S, current may be caused to flow through the external circuit PRGBF. As has been stated, this condition is present when the plate is positive with respect to the electron emitter. During this time, current flows through R and a voltage is developed across this resistance. When the switch lever S is changed so that the plate is negative, zero current exists in the external plate circuit. This is the equivalent of unilateral conductivity within the tube, since during the time that the plate is negative with respect to the electron emitter there is no electronic flow between the filament and the plate and the two elements are completely isolated.

Rapid manipulation of the switch lever S is the equivalent of the application of an alternating potential. During a complete alternation, the plate is negative of varied value. This is the equivalent of the position of the switch lever S when the plate voltage varied between zero and maximum negative. During another alternation the plate is positive with respect to the electron emitter and the condition is the equivalent of the setting of the switch lever S so that the plate voltage increases from zero to maximum positive.

If we replace the batteries used in Figure 102 by equipment which will provide the required alternating currents, we have the circuit shown in Figure 103. F and P remain the filament and the plate. The winding Pr is the primary of the transformer. S1 is the filament winding and replaces the A battery. S2 is the plate winding and replaces the batteries B. The current indicating instrument G and the resistance R remain as before except that their respective locations have been changed. Their equivalent position in Figure 102 would be between the filament and the plate batteries. An examination of Figure 103 shows that the external circuit between the filament and the plate is completed through these two units.

Suppose that we follow through the actual process of rectification. A voltage applied to Pr will cause a voltage across S1 and S2. Of these voltages, our interest is solely in the polarity of that across S2. Although it is true that the polarity of the voltage applied across F changes twice during each cycle, this change is of little consequence with respect to the operation of the tube.

Suppose that Figure 104 A is the voltage applied to the plate of the rectifier. The plus and minus signs are relative. During the period ABC, the plate of the rectifier tube is positive a current flows through the tube circuit as indicated upon G and shown in Figure 104B. During the period CDE, the plate of the rectifier is negative and no current flows through the circuit. During the period EFG the plate of the rectifier is again positive and current flows through the system as shown in Figure 104B. During the second half of the second cycle, GHI, the plate of the rectifier is again negative and current flow again ceases.

Current and voltage output of half wave rectifier in conventional thermionic circuit

Now if we examine Figure 104A and 104B, we note two facts. First, the current flow through the rectifier tube and the external circuit occurs once during each complete cycle of voltage applied to the plate of the rectifier. In other words, rectification occurs during one-half of each cycle. This is said to be half-wave rectification, accomplished by means of a rectifier through which current flows only during one-half of the cycle.

The second significant fact is that the direction of the rectifier current is always in the same direction, even if it is pulsating in amplitude. Now, one certainly can not call the two current waves shown in Figure 104B, as examples of direct current, at least in a manner which would tend to compare these currents with the normal interpretation of direct current. As a matter of fact, the output of a rectifier prior to filtering, is not direct current. Instead, it is pulsating current containing an appreciable amount of alternating current component.

In order to secure substantially pure D.C. from a rectifier system, it is necessary to filter the rectified output, separating the direct from the alternating currents so that the actual output of the complete rectifier supply system is pure direct current. As to the A.C. component in the output of the rectifier system, the major hum frequency, or the fundamental hum, frequency depends upon the type of rectification being employed. In a half-wave system shown herein, the most prominent hum frequency, or A. C. component, is the frequency of the alternating emf applied to the plate of the tube. In other words, the frequency of the voltage applied across the winding Pr.

There are, of course, harmonics of these frequencies, even as high as the ninth or the tenth, but the amplitude of these harmonics decreases as the frequency increases with the large difference the fundamental and the second harmonic; very little difficulty is experienced during the filtering of these undesired frequencies. It should be understood that all alternating current components must be removed from the rectified output. It might also be of use to mention that the major A.C. component in the rectified output is not always the frequency of the line supply.

Referring once more to Figure 104B and associating the rectified current curves with the voltage across R, it is quite obvious that such operation would serve of very little advantage, since the D.C. voltage across R and if applied to some other device connected across R, would be constant at any one value for but an instant. Irrespective of the absolute need for filtration, it is obviously necessary to provide some means of making the direct current and the direct emf constant at some level.

This requires an addition to the circuit shown in Figure 103, so that the system is altered as shown in Figure 105. We omit the current indicating instrument, since it no longer is nec-

Spoor Invention Given Test, But Opinions Differ

Chicago — Scenic and panoramic effects achieved by Spoor-Berggren natural vision film at its world premiere at the RKO State-Lake Theatre here won the interest and applause of audiences more than its third dimensional effect and its vast screening surface. The pictures playing the theatre with Spoor-Berggren equipment are "Danger Lights" (Radio), a full length feature, and "Niagara Falls," a one reel photographic study by George K. Spoor and P. John Berggren, the inventors.

More than a score of individuals interviewed by a representative of Motion Picture News after the premiere performance Saturday expressed enthusiastic appreciation of the picturesque photographic effects achieved by both films. Most were vague about their impressions of a third dimension, and a majority expressed dissatisfaction with the mechanical phases of projection. These latter complained of frequent instances of sound distortion; breakdowns of projection equipment, and the noise of the projection machine in operation, which, occupants of balcony seats declared, was noticeable enough to be disconcerting.

All agreed that the equipment fully enhanced the value of side aisle, front row and balcony seats. Occupants of these less favored locations were unanimous with enthusiastic praise of screen visibility from angles which, ordinarily, afford extreme picture distortion.

Fourteen Interruptions

As to the breakdowns, Motion Picture News checked a total of 14 interruptions of projection during three screenings of the feature picture. These included complete fade-outs of either sound or picture. Some were of momentary duration, quickly rectified. The most serious was a five-minute fade-out at the start of the feature which necessitated turning up of the stage lights before projection was started anew from the beginning. It was mechanical hazards such as these which have delayed the Spoor-Berggren equipment's inaugural here, originally slated for September 27. These faults, accountable to the lax manipulation of air-pressure-driven projectors, were partially corrected by Monday.

Occasional sound distortion was noticeable, as were, less frequently, however, lapses from perfect synchronization.

Reviews of the picture, the first of which

Mayor Thompson Delivers a Sock At Will Rogers

Chicago—Irate because of a nationally syndicated commentary by Will Rogers on a business relief plan authored by Mayor William Hale Thompson of this city, Mayor Thompson issued the following statement:

"I have read the article of Will Rogers which says Mayor Thompson of Chicago has the most original idea to help the unemployed. He wants to sell them 4,000,000 tickets at 25 cents apiece; the one who draws the lucky number to get enough to eat.

"All I have to say is that if Will Rogers has made so much money that his head is so swelled that he thinks it is funny to crack jokes about people who are starving, I hope to God he goes broke and gets hungry himself and he won't crack any more jokes about those who have to accept charity.

"He has pulled some pretty brutal and unfair stuff about me in years gone by, which means nothing to me because I consider the source from which it comes. When this nation is suffering and people are hungry, a wisecracker that belittles the condition and efforts of any one to correct it to me is the cheapest skate on earth."

Merchants Back Plan

The plans inaccurately set forth by Rogers, and ridiculed in his syndicated newspaper article, proposed the issuance of tickets with all holiday purchases of twenty-five cents or over to Chicago shoppers. Lucky tickets were to draw prizes of value donated by Chicago merchants. The inducement thus offered shoppers, Mayor Thompson believed, would prove a great stimulus to Chicago's retail business, aid in re-establishing prosperity locally, and create jobs for unemployed.

Leading Chicago merchants are now developing the plan preparatory to putting it into practice.

Rejected by Circuits, "Squealer" Cleaning Up

Chicago—"The Squealer" (Col.) appears to be another one of those pictures which, after having been snubbed by the big circuits, unhesitatingly proceed to make big money for the smaller operators. Turned down by the larger Loop houses, Jones, Linick & Schaefer put "The Squealer" into the Woods, where it has been cleaning up for two weeks.

did not appear until Monday, were favorable, though not of the "rave" variety. Frances Kurner (Mae Tinee) of the Tribune, the most widely read Chicago critic, awarded the feature picture three stars, an "excellent" rating. She gave a separate rating to "Niagara Falls," the short subject, and awarded it four stars, an unusually high rating in her judging scheme and an unprecedented one for a short. It is, in fact, the first time a short has received separate consideration with "star" ratings from this critic.

Applaud Novelty Short

Audience reaction appeared to follow Miss Kurner's estimate of the two novelty screenings. Frequently, at all performances, audiences burst into spontaneous applause for photographic effects achieved in "Niagara Falls," the short. This is a one-reel camera study of the Falls from various angles, the camera remaining focused and stationary on each of eight angles for an average of 90 seconds each. Applause followed the showing of the novelty, in addition to frequently greeting various of its scenes.

No applause occurred during or at the close of the feature, except to indicate impatience over faulty projection.

Third dimensional effects are, as was noted in Motion Picture News's first estimate of "Danger Lights," caught at a private screening for RKO executives, more noticeable in panoramic shots than in confined views. Blurring of backgrounds when the camera is focused on moving objects in the foreground is noticeable, though no more so than in pictures filmed on standard equipment. It is merely in this respect, no improvement on standard photography.

The sum of its improvements, in this test at least, is comprised of its startling photographic possibilities in the filming of outdoor scenes of natural beauty and in the unquestionable value it lends to unfavorably placed seats anywhere in the theatre.

RKO opened the novelty here without unusual exploitation of any kind. As a result, week-end business at the State-Lake was only average. Its box-office possibilities will have to depend now on the interest created by reviews and on word-of-mouth advertising to surpass an average gross for the house.

Both George Spoor and John Berggren were in evidence at the theatre opening day and expressed satisfaction with the reception accorded their natural vision process at its first public showing.

Foreign Talkers Make Big Money in Chicago

Chicago—A Polish version of "The Doctor's Secret" (Paramount) played to tremendous business at the Chopin Theatre, located on Milwaukee Ave., in the heart of Chicago's Little Czecho-Slovakia. Picture's engagement ran over a week, an unprecedented period in the neighborhood.

All foreign dialogue pictures are money-makers in Chicago, with enough of any population, from Arabian to Filipino, to give a house a good break for a couple days, at least. German dialogue, particularly, has done well during Loop bookings here. Italian and Spanish get the breaks in the neighborhoods.

Chicago Reforms Its Exploitation; Dignity Is Motif

Chicago—Chicago exhibitors, frequently referred to by showmen as the "world's worst exploiteers," are just beginning to resent the description, it appears. More and better theatre advertising of all kinds is now the rule, from the biggest de luxe houses down to and including the smallest neighborhood spots. Program listings in newspapers are more numerous, more readable, and executed with more attention to interest-gaining typography and layouts. Trailers of the better sort are in wider use and their messages are pointed for sales angles. Marquee and other forms of house advertising are becoming more presentable and consequently more interesting. Galleries that have been using slides since the houses were opened are switching to up-to-date trailers that make the sales talks easier to read and remember.

One result of the new exploitation slant is to diminish freak and ineffectual tie-ups with meaningless names and little known merchandise. It is also resulting in a marked diminution of "give aways." Houses that have been handing out everything from a bar of soap to a kitchen stove to patrons are now devoting the energy and expense involved to dignified and more effective advertising media, and with better results in every instance.

Where one year ago fifty houses were awarding patrons prizes for attending a performance, today not ten of them are continuing the practice. The rest are busy convincing the customers that the program is reason enough for attending the theatre, and the money that was being spent for prizes is now being used to improve the entertainment and the comforts of the house. The swing-around has brought business to some houses that gifts of grand pianos and radios never approximated.

Sharick Gets "U" Post

Chicago—A. J. (Andy) Sharick replaced Charlie Loewenberg as mid-western director of exploitation for Universal, with headquarters here. Sharick has done Universal publicity for the past ten years.

Showmanship and Guts

Chicago—In an economy move inaugurated recently, Essaness Theatres did away with the Brinks armored car service for transporting cash from box-offices to banks. Cost of the service averaged $12 a theatre per week. Since the change managers have been obliged to carry the mazuma to the banks. The assignment is a forced one and particularly distasteful to the managers, what with this city's gunmen on the constant alert for just such pickings. No mishaps have occurred to date, but many theatre managers here regard the duty as an actual hazard to life and are putting in applications for the Congressional Medal and the Belgian Croix de Guerre every time they return from a bank unscathed.

At Liberty

Chicago—One hundred and fifty replies were received to an advertisement for a manager for the American Theatre inserted in local papers. Seventy-five per cent of these were from managers in the employ of circuits, seeking an alignment with an independent house, according to George Lomax, owner of the theatre. Fred Mindlin, formerly manager of the downtown Playhouse, got the job, considered one of the most desirable managerial positions in the city.

At the Playhouse, Mindlin introduced to Chicago a number of years ago the gag of free coffee and cigarettes, entre acts, and atmospheric lounges. They were a successful fad that have been copied advantageously by numerous of the so-called "intimate" theatres of the city.

essary, the reader understanding that current flows in the rectifier circuit when the correct conditions obtain. Thus, one part of a typical half-wave rectifier system is shown in Figure 105. The arrows indicate the assumed direction of the flow of current. (This is exactly opposite to that based upon the use of the electronic stream as the plate current.) The additional element is the capacity C. What is its function? Let us see.

During the moment that the plate is positive, current flows in the external circuit and also through the tube. This means that a charge is applied to the capacity C. This charge voltage starts from zero, builds up to maximum and again decreases to zero, all in 1/120th of a second if the line supply is 60 cycles. Refer to Figure 106. The dashed line wave represents the plate voltage input into the tube. The heavy curve represents the current output during one half of each cycle. The dot-dash curve represents the charge across the condenser.

After its initial charge to the peak value, the charging voltage decreases and when the plate is negative there is no charge being applied across the condenser and the charge within the condenser decreases. This continues until the voltage applied to the plate is again positive, at which time the condensers receive a new charge, raising its voltage once more to the peak value. Now the discharge of the condenser between the moments of charge depends upon value of the capacity and the associated circuit, in this case R and not the tube. If C is small, the charge stored is small and the greater will be the variation in the charge present in the capacity between the moment that it is charged to the peak value and the time at which it receives its next charge.

Supplementary to this is the effect of the load resistance R. The higher the value of this resistance, the less will be the discharge of the condenser for any constant period of time elapsing between the time of charge and the next moment of charge. The lower is the resistance R, the more rapidly will the condenser discharge for any one period of time. By making the capacity large, the difference between the peak voltage at one instant and the value of voltage remaining after the condenser is subject to partial discharge during the time that the tube plate is negative, is made small. Thus, there is present across the resistance, a source of voltage, the capacity C, which supplies current through Rm during the period that the plate is negative and the tube is at rest.

The subject will receive further attention in Lesson 28.

CONDUCTED BY AN EXHIBITOR FOR EXHIBITORS

IS THIS YOU?

IN quest of the reason for so many managers being let out, we started to ask questions among several of the out-of-town chain supervisors, and instead of poor returns at the b.o. we found that one of the chief causes for letting men out is the inability of the average house manager to take care of certain items requested by these supervisors.

One man showed me his memo book wherein he made note of all the items to be taken care of by the manager. He lists the results of his inspection, the suggestion he makes, and then, on his next visit goes over all of those items and checks them off as O.K. when he finds they have been disposed of.

This gentleman, to bear out his justification for letting out a certain manager, laid before me seven lists covering seven monthly inspections of a house. The lists carried about thirty different items ranging from little unimportant things up to matters of great importance. One item in particular was listed on every sheet and covered a suggestion to the manager that the old rubbish and refuse be cleaned out of the cellar of the theatre. Up to the last list this item still remained undone.

Broken glass on the roofs, causing leaks and expensive redecorating. Fixing of frames in the lobby. Replacing a broken glass in one of the entrance doors. And many other items which could be handled and arranged through one of the manager's staff.

Yet months rolled by and although the supervisor stressed the importance of attention to his requests and suggestions, they remained undone and more were accumulating. Even threatening the manager with demotion to a smaller house failed to produce the desired results until, finally, he let the man out entirely.

We can find a close parallel to the above by citing a certain manager in a theatre where we very often stop in at right close to New York. We can recall last spring before we left for the coast when we suggested in a friendly way that the manager ought to get the burned out bulbs replaced in the marquee and upright signs. By September the number had increased and last Saturday night the entire front of that house looked like the place was about to close down.

There is no necessity for such conditions existing today. You must have someone on your staff who can be depended upon to take care of keeping the house in proper shape under your orders. If you have no one, do it yourself. You are getting paid to look after the theatre. Do it—don't alibi.

Note the Certificate And Also Note This Butterfield Stunt

Though he is pretty busy trying to boost business still higher at the Union Theatre in Attleboro, Mass., Ray M. Butterfield, manager of the house, finds time to shoot us in this ace photo of himself, sitting in his office and looking over his membership certificate in the Managers' Round Table Club. He seems to be all set for a successful season (at least that's what the indications in the form of the Motion Picture News and the certificate on the desk shout out), and if he continues the work he displayed while at the Metropolitan in Leominster, Mass., he'll certainly hang up a couple of new records.

Just to give you a little advance dope on what he is planning to do, we are going to divulge a stunt that is all set for Thanksgiving Day, when the rival gridiron schoolboy factions meet. 3,000 megaphones are being made up. The megaphones will carry the theatre plug on one side, and school cheers on the other And boy, this stunt is going to be worth plenty to the theatre, what we mean!

Just a short time ago, Butterfield had an excellent street ballyhoo plugging "Numbered Men." Four convicts' suits were worn by as many men. The men paraded about the town plugging the picture. The town had never before seen a ballyhoo of this especial type, so they paid a lot of attention to it. The result was that the theatre profited handsomely, the picture going over to good receipts for playdates. We understand that Butterfield is going to make a play for his kiddie business in the town, and we are sure that with his knowledge of showmanship he is capable of bringing it back to normalcy, and still higher if possible.

We want to wish him luck on his new assignment and express the hope that he will keep us posted so that we can report his business progress to the rest of the show world.

Star Of Film Sent A Personal Message To Home Town Fans

A showman, whose house is located in the home town of a movie star, is certain to take advantage of an opportunity to plug that star if it so happens that he is playing a picture in which the star is featured. The star in this case happened to be Jane Keith, who plays the feminine role in "The Sea Wolf." The city, her home town, is Michigan City, Indiana. When H. J. Thatcher, manager of the Tivoli Theatre, was informed that he would play Jack London's story, he immediately set out to publicize the fact that a home town product would be on screen view at the theatre.

A trip to the local paper rewarded him with a story on the actress. A wire to the studio netted him a reply from Miss Keith, who followed it up with telegrams to a number of city officials. The wires were reprinted in the paper. A great deal of advance interest was built up as a result of the stunt, so it wasn't surprising to Thatcher to find that on playdates he did excellent business.

As this is Mr. Thatcher's first contribution to the Club we think that if he continues this sort of alert showmanship he will be a very active member. Let's hear some more from you, "H. J.," and include your photo with the contribution.

Eight Ball Babies' "Check And Double Check" Clicked Oke

If we were to attempt a setting forth of the complete campaign covered by Earle Holden, manager of the Fairfax Theatre when he sold "Amos 'n' Andy" in Miami, Fla., it would take up more space than we can spare at the present time; so we are presenting only the highlights.

A street ballyhoo—a photo of which we are showing with this story—was used a week in advance. The ballyhoo attracted a lot of comment from the persons on the streets. It visited the downtown business section, and was parked for a time. The boys driving the car engaged in the famous dialect of the comedians and "sho-shos," and "regusteds" predominated.

Through a tie-up with WIOD, the station broadcasting the nightly Amos 'n' Andy programs, Holden secured a mention directly after the broadcast in which it was stated that the Fairfax was going to play the first motion picture made by the colored comedians. The announcements were made for a week in advance of playdates. A special prologue was used at the theatre in connection with the trailer. A radio set was placed on one side of the stage; two stand microphones, on the other. Radio was a combination victrola and radio set. The theme song of the picture was played on the victrola attachment. A spot was focused onto the "mikes" as the Assistant Manager of the theatre walked out on the stage, struck a gong—known to many as the signature chime of the local station—and made the regular station announcement, saying: "We will now take you to New York for Amos 'n' Andy." The spot was then thrown to the radio, as the theme number of the picture was transmitted over the victrola attachment. At the conclusion of the song, the spot was trained on the center of the curtain, which opened upon the trailer.

Plenty of free publicity was secured in all papers. Stories were also landed on the radio pages of the sheets. Every radio store in town was tied up, and all dealers tied in their regular ads with the picture. One of the local taxicab companies was tied-up and they agreed to display on the back window of the cabs, a sign reading: "The meter on this cab has been Checked and Double Checked. Ride this cab to the Fairfax to see and hear Amos 'n' Andy in 'Check and Double Check'." The angle proved a corker for boosting business and plugging the film.

The corresponding card number gag was also used by Holden. He made up a number of small cards, to serve as heralds and distributed them about the town. A notice informed persons that if the number on the card corresponded with one on a board placed in the lobby of the theatre, the holder would be given a free ticket to the show. The lobby was jammed from morning till night with persons matching their cards.

A special award was offered to the member of the Fairfax service staff who could secure the best tie-ups on the picture. The boys stepped out and did some knockout work. The winner of the award tied-up a bus company that hitherto could not be approached, and secured permission to place cards in the buses plugging the picture. It was the first time a tie-up of this sort had ever been secured.

These activities tended to help the picture towards its sensational business. Therefore, we are passing them along.

A Holiday Show Slant!

At this most opportune time, E. F. A. submitted the following information on how he is arranging to help the poor and needy in his community this Christmas.

He is running a series of Saturday morning shows in December and finishes up with a grand mid-night preview of a new picture on the Saturday preceding Christmas. These shows are all being run in co-operation with the local Chamber of Commerce, the newspaper and the Salvation Army.

Through the Chamber of Commerce, all merchant members are dressing windows and incorporating copy into their advertising, etc. They are also offering various articles of food and merchandise and accepting donations of same from those wishing to help along this most worthy cause.

At the Saturday morning shows, which will be patronized chiefly by children, the admission charge is confined to discarded clothes, canned goods and toys. For the mid-night premiere a special price scale up to 75 cents top has been worked out and the entire receipts will be turned over to the Salvation Army. All theatre help is donated, newspaper is playing up the midnight attraction to encourage advance sale of seats and altogether the entire community is pepped up by the fine work being done.

From point of good-will and public reaction we doubt whether any idea ever conceived can match this for putting the theatre in a peach of a spot. Particularly since E. F. A.'s town has several thousand unemployed and conditions are the worse in many years.

This rough draft is designed specifically to guide any member or reader who has a desire to get behind something of this sort. More information is available and at your service if you just shoot us a wire to Club headquarters.

We are very grateful to E. F. A. for the inside dope on how he is going about it.

Rex Koury Features Novelty Organ Solos; He's the Talk of Troy

According to reports emanating from Troy, N. Y., Proctor's 4th Street Theatre is featuring the world's youngest organist in the person of Rex Koury, 18-year-old console artist, technician of the keys.

It is said that he has acquired a technique which is delightfully modern. His presentations are varied, alternating between community singing presentation and solo work.

One of his recent offerings—and one which showed the hold he enjoys upon the Troy public—was the rendition of what he termed a "Request Program." A specially designed modernistic scrim was used. A frame of film, showing numerous letter requests, was projected upon the entire proscenium. The letters dissolved into screen patter, which explained that, due to the enormous amount of mail received, it would be well nigh impossible to play, in its entirety, every number requested, but that Koury would attempt to play a few measures of as many numbers as the seven-minute time allotment would permit.

Koury then broke in and voiced his sentiments by asking musically, "How Am I to Know?"—following this by a slide in which he asked for more requests, and promised to play them at a future date. Thirty selections in all were played on the "Request Program," each number being rendered with a slightly different combination and style, one blending into the other. This specialty was culminated with a fitting climax in the form of the "RKO March." It stopped the show.

The showmanship displayed by this organist has them doing plenty of talking in Troy. One of his other showman moves was the billing of his turn as "The Voice of R-ex K-oury O-rganist.

Fresh Air Taxi Co. In Lobby Was Golden Amos 'n' Andy Gag

In Rochester, N. Y., Amos 'n' Andy, the prize eight balls of the N. B. C. network, and the Pepsodent company, certainly got a great send-off from J. Golden, manager of the Arkayo Palace Theatre, when he set out to exploit the dialectitians first "ain't dat sumpin," entitled "Check and Double Check," the film venture made possible by ether.

As lack of space will not permit our printing every phase of the campaign, we are taking a few of the highlights which lend themselves to adaptation on almost any type of picture. Look them over carefully and you'll see our point in passing them along.

First we'd like to point out the novel lobby display that served as an advance plug for the picture. A duplicate of the office of the well-known "Fresh Air Taxicab Company" was constructed in the lobby. The office was exactly as the one seen in the film. Two men were hired to black up and wear costumes similar to the Americ-Nubian "shoshos." The men conversed over the phone, and with each other, in language that was taken from some of the film's sequences. How the town gasped when it entered the theatre and saw the lobby display. Persons were talking about it all during its run.

When they were not working the office gag, the men drove the "Fresh Air Taxi" about the street, creating a lot of talk wherever they went. You will note in the photo showing the man "repairing" the car, that Golden has impressed upon the men the value of this old showman gag of making it appear as though the car was unable to proceed, and, as a result, being forced to stop in the busy sections of the town. They received plenty of word-of-mouth comment on this angle. When not pulled too frequently, this stunt is very effective. If used too often, and the traffic cop on post gets wise, look out.

Still another angle that immeasurably helped the selling of the picture was an effective tie-up made with the boys who weekly distribute "Liberty" magazines to subscribers in Rochester. The kids were invited to see the midnight twins emote. Carrying a large banner which gave their destination and plugged the picture, and preceded by the "Fresh Air Taxi," the boys marched to the house, attracting comment from all of the pedestrians. In return for Golden's courtesy, they placed heralds in every magazine distributed in the city.

These few activities that we have set forth, formed but a small part of the complete, and excellent, camoaign. We hope that in the near future we'll hear some more regarding Mr. Golden's work, so that we can let the rest of the Club in on what is being done to keep Rochester show-conscious. Give us some dope on the situation, will you, Mr. Golden?

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Jones Is Trying to Chase Away Depression Bugaboo in Town

In an attempt to chase away that product of Old Man Gloom called "Business Depression," J. A. Jones, manager of the Saenger Theatre in Pensacola, Fla., made plans for a huge merchant tie-up that, it is hoped, will boost business in the town and permit the merchants to wear smiles.

The chairman of the Merchants' Protective Association and Manager Jones conferred about an hour with the editor-in-chief and business manager of both local newspapers. Plans were made to visit the merchants during the coming week and lay before them the possibility of getting an extra two-weeks pre-Christmas shopping.

Mimeographed letters telling how Macy's in New York City had advanced New York's Christmas shopping two weeks sooner were sent to the merchants by the secretary of the Merchants' Association, who also did the mimeographing and the furnishing of envelopes for mailing. Jones' sole purpose in putting this plan over is to reflect credit on the town and to be the means of bringing added business to the merchants which in turn will reflect itself at the theatre box-office as well. We hope that Mr. Jones will give us some more dope on this angle as we'd like to keep the rest of the Club posted on its progress.

Jones is very active in his town and has secured lots of good-will by the various stunts he uses. One that he successfully engineered recently was a flower show held in the lobby of the theatre. The show was sponsored by the Parents-Teachers' Association, which was open not only to schools, but to any one living within the county.

There were some 12 different classes, consisting of ferns, geraniums, dahlias, roses, chrysanthemums, etc. All in all, the lobby presented a resplendent display and made it one of the show places of town.

It was observed that persons who had entered the lobby just to look at the flowers, would, in more cases than one, purchase tickets to see the screen attraction. The stunt proved profitable from many angles, which we need not discuss at the present time as they are more than obvious to showmen. If you can use a stunt of this sort, it is likely to be profitable to you, too, though of course its entire success depends upon the way in which you have analyzed the local situation. Let's hear from you again, "J. A."

Fred Hinds Is Now Handling His Own House in Wisconsin

It will interest his many friends on the Publix circuit to know that Fred Hinds, former City Manager of Watertown, South Dakota, who left the business almost a year ago, has returned to the active fold and is now the owner and operator of the Strand Theatre in Whitewater, Wisconsin, where he intends to bust a couple of records.

Hinds has had many years' experience in the show game, so we are of the opinion that he is going to do some good work at his present spot and make a winner out of the house. At one stage of the game he owned the Cresco Theatre in Cresco, Ia., operating it for nine years. He also served as advertising and publicity manager for the Finkelstein and Ruben Northwest Theatres. Before entering show business, Hinds was a newspaperman in Minneapolis. Incidentally, Hinds is pretty well acquainted with Fred Meyer, general manager of the Alhambra Theatre in Milwaukee. They were both among the "early settlers" in Minneapolis, when the movies were struggling to gain a foothold in a world of opposition and doubt.

We want to welcome Fred back into the active fold and we know that he is going to be represented often on our pages. Keep us posted on what is going on along the showman line in Whitewater, Fred, so that we can pass it along to the rest of the Club.

DICK KIRSCHBAUM'S "LOBBY LAFF"

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

You Can Help!

An excellent move that did much to dispel those black clouds of business depression which Old Man Gloom threw around the town of Council Bluffs, Ia., was the placing of 14 x 22 inch cards in various store windows by a showman. The cards carried copy:

"Cheer Up, Folks! Spread the GOOD NEWS. Good Times Are Coming! Council Bluffs Can And Will Prosper. See Stanley Smith in 'Good News' At The Broadway Theatre."

As may easily be seen, these cards, though used primarily to plug the feature picture, were also of great value to the merchants. It is said that the local Chamber of Commerce greeted their appearance with enthusiasm. If that is so—and there is no reason why it shouldn't be—we think that the members of the Managers' Round Table Club can do their bit to bring back prosperity in their respective towns by making up institutional cards, carrying copy similar to that set forth above, and placing them in various locations. The Chamber of Commerce and the newspapers will get solidly behind your move. You are offered, by this stunt, an opportunity to gather plenty of good-will for your house. Why not do it?

Kenimer's Campaign On Amos 'n' Andy Cleverly Executed

Another one of his well known campaigns was turned out by Guy Kenimer at the Palace Theatre in Jacksonville, Fla., when the house played Amos 'n' Andy.

The night that the booking date was set, a one-frame announcement was run at the theatre and in the four other houses of the circuit. The following week, this was replaced by a full announcement, followed the next week by the regular sound trailer. All announcement trailers were accompanied by the theme song of the picture. On the theatre's regular Saturday broadcast, nothing but the coming film was plugged. Permission was secured from the Pepsodent Company for the use of a trailer on the Pepsodent program through the local station, WJAX, announcing the engagement of the picture at the Palace. Three band leaders, who regularly play over the station, were contacted, and they inserted an announcement, whenever possible, of the picture.

As a street ballyhoo a week in advance, a duplicate of the "fresh air" taxi was run on the streets. It was painted in loud colors. We are showing a photo of the ballyhoo. Two characters, dressed to resemble the famous colored comedians, drove the car during busy hours. They also stopped at the local schools during recess and dismissal time. The taxi also carried a man who announced, through a large megaphone, the playdates and special shows. The taxi visited factories and others plants.

A tie-up was made with the Victor representative who has a machine called the "Victor Caravan." We are showing a photo of this caravan. It consists of a large trailer, somewhat on the order of a Pullman. Inside the trailer, is a public speaking system which can be hooked onto an Electrola for the playing of records, a radio, or a microphone. Large signs plugging the film, were mounted atop of this car. The car was driven about the business and residential districts, the records being played and announcements made whenever crowds gathered. A Victor Radio Combination set was placed in front of the theatre, alternately playing records and picking up radio broadcasts. The set was banked with cut-outs and appropriate selling copy on the picture.

All of the drug stores in town were tied-up on the dentifrice, special art cards being designed and placed in the windows. Displays were also secured in the windows of fifteen dealers, which included among them the largest department store, and the largest book and office supply store, in the town.

When the picture opened, the front was designed atmospherically, the lobby resembling the street in front of the Fresh Air Taxi Company; the box office, the entrance to the lodge hall of the Mystic Knights of the Sea. To the right was placed the Amos 'n' Andy Taxicab Office; the left, Madam Queen's Beauty Parlor. It attracted everyones' attention. The newspapers gave the picture plenty of publicity. The full page ad that was run by Kenimer created a lot of talk in the town.

Coloring Of Scene From Picture Aided Orlove's Showselling

With showman activity still on display at the Uptown Theatre in Milwaukee, Wis., it is small wonder that Louis Orlove, manager of the house, continues to enjoy good business at his local playhouse.

A stunt that Orlove has found to be excellent for boosting business is that of inserting a scene mat of a picture in the local paper and inviting children to color it, with either water colors or crayons. The kids thought a lot of this stunt, the numerous replies attesting to its pulling power. Perhaps you, too, can use a stunt of this sort. Mats are usually to be found in the press books.

Another stunt that went over well—and one that has appeared on our pages before—was that of announcing free tickets to the theatre for all persons sending in the title of the picture—in this case "Follow Thru"—written as many times as possible on the back of a Government post card. The winning card carried 665.

Orlove is always active on some kind of gag, so we are sure that from time to time we will hear some more from him. Keep us posted, Louis.

Samuels Is Handling Windsor in Brooklyn And Doing Great Job

There's a new manager over at the Windsor Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., who is taking the place of Lou Smith. His name is David "Dave" Samuels, and here's the low-down.

Samuels has been in the show game for a number of years and it is interesting to note that he broke in with Lou Smith. For the past five years he has been connected with the Manhattan Playhouses, having been located at the Hollywood, Palestine, Bijou and Palace Theatres. With a background like this, since we know that the showmen on the Manhattan circuit are a bunch of live-wires, we look to hearing some good things about his work at the Windsor.

Most of our members are aware of what Lou Smith did at the house and we are sure that since Samuels worked with him that the work will be continued to the greatest advantage. Brooklyn showmen have been rallying to join the Club and in the past we have shown many examples of what they can do, so it is almost unnecessary for us to go into any descriptions of their ability.

We want to congratulate Dave on his new position, and we hope to hear from him soon.

Dick Ryan Passes Along an Ace Stunt; Can You Use It, Too?

In view of the fact that he displayed plenty of good showmanship while at the Park Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., we think that Dick Ryan is going to do some show-selling de luxe at the house where he was recently transferred, the Broadway Theatre in Astoria, Long Island.

While we are on the subject, we'd like to tell you something about a stunt that Dick used often while at the Park. It is inexpensive, and should prove valuable to many members. He used to make trips to a local mirror factory, where he was given, free of charge, some thin mirrors which had been broken. He next bought a glass cutter for a dime. With the glass cutter he cut up all of the mirrors in small squares, diamonds, circles, etc. The particles were arranged to spell out the wording of the attraction, which was placed on a black cloth background, paste being used to affix the mirrors to the cloth.

The completed banner was then placed in a shadow box. A concealed spot played on the entire arrangement. At a very small cost this attractive sign was made up. How about you making use of a gag like this? It will also make an excellent banner. It certainly has the goods. Incidentally, Dick had four vacant stores on the theatre block, so in order to get some publicity for his house, he arranged to have the American Tobacco Company, Flit Mfg. Co., Pinaud Perfume Company, and the National Biscuit Company, dress up a window apiece, with the result that in what had previously been empty windows, live displays held sway. Some idea, wasn't it? Maybe you can use it, too.

We want to wish Dick a lot of luck on his new position, and we hope to hear from him again very soon because we expect to have some more angles of this sort to pass along.

Weil Plugs Prohibition—Oh, Yeah?

In these days of Prohibition, it is indeed a rarity to be provided with a corkscrew . . . absolutely free! But that's just what Joe Weil, director of exploitation of Universal Pictures is doing . . . giving away corkscrews!

As one of his laugh stunts for "See America Thirst," the "U" comedy film recently released, Joe suggests, in the pressbook, that showmen adopt his advance plug, which consists of imprinting a pay envelope with copy, the catchline of which states: "Get Ready For An Uproarious Opening." Upon opening the envelope, the unsuspecting patron finds a small, wire corkscrew, on the top of which has been imprinted: "See America Thirst."

Joe does not state how, or upon what, the corkscrew may be used to best advantage.

Lou Smith Hands Us An Armful Of Gags That Wowed Patrons

We gave you a little dope not so long ago on what Lou Smith is doing to keep things humming at the Stone Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y. Lou is the live-wire manager formerly of the Ambassador Theatre in Brooklyn.

A few of the stunts that Lou pulled off lately included among them a Snake Charmer, in conjunction with his selling of "Swing High," with a Hindoo Flagelot player lending color to the scene. The snake charmer gag proved a sensation, the streets leading to the theatre being jammed with people hurrying to witness the stunt. On the last day of the picture, Lou gave away three thousand boxes of candy, imprinted with a clown figure, and a plug for the merchant donating them. The next picture that he went to work on was "The Dawn Patrol."

FOR YOUR COMFORT AND PLEASURE!

It is with pride we announce the installation of Nelsen's newest and most perfect invention in sound production, which is known as the which makes possible a perfect audition in any part of the theatre. This new system carries the voice, music and sound in a naturalness that seems unbelievable, but the fact remains, as you will note, that all sounds are rendered in a natural tone.

Also with the new heating system now installed you will enjoy all the comforts of a perfect heated home in this theatre. Other improvements such as new seats and personal comfort conveniences have been added—in a word, everything has been done to make

THE STONE
THE THEATRE PERFECT
FOR ALL THE FAMILY

May we also add a word to express our appreciation for your loyal support, and for a further continuance of same.

We thank you,
THE MANAGEMENT

For "All Quiet On the Western Front," Lou engaged a man, painted as a bronze soldier by means of a special composition, to mount a pedestal. He carried a rifle, with fixed bayonet. A sign announced that anyone making him laugh would be given a prize. No one could do it. This proved to be one of the best ballyhoos Lou had on the picture, the residents of the neighborhood flocking to the house to look at it. For his showing of "The Costello Case," Lou made up a novel display in the form of a six-sheet board, covered with clippings on a recent shooting fray in New York. The neighborhood ate it up.

We are showing here a copy of the back page off Lou's house program. The angle of the new acoustic system was one that caused a lot of comment, as did the plug for family trade. Lou used the same copy on a trailer, and the audience applauded it. We are passing this copy along in the event that you might care to use something like it. Look it over, and if you think it will fit, give it a break.

We want to thank Lou for passing this work along to us, and we are sure that the Stone is going to see plenty of live-wire showmanship. Keep us posted on your future work, Lou.

For the selling of the air picture, he tied up with a bus company. The bus was stationed a short distance away from the theatre. It was bannered with copy: "Free Bus Ride to the Stone Theatre to See Richard Barthelmess in 'The Dawn Patrol'." This stunt brought them in to the box-office. But there was another one that forced Lou to stop selling tickets three times. He had made a tie-up with a local confectionery store and the store agreed to give away 1500 toy aeroplanes, filled with caramels. Kids jammed the theatre to get tickets that would entitle them to planes. What a mob! And what a business!

Morris Kaufman Had The Neighborhood Interested in Stunt

We have to give Morris Kaufman credit. He certainly knows his neighborhood. This was more than evidenced when he played Clara Bow in "Her Wedding Night" at the Stratford Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., not so long ago, and by the use of a novel exploitation stunt turned in a good playdate.

Making use of the "Locked Door" gag that has frequently appeared on the Clug pages, Morris constructed a honeymoon flat of compoboard, showing the stairs and the door of the flat. If you will look closely at the photo we are showing, you can make out this stunt, though the picture was pretty well blurred. Small cards, carrying flip wisecracks as copy, were placed about the door. On the door itself Clara Bow's name was painted, with a miniature of Dan Cupid dressing up the name somewhat. The stairs carried the title. A cylinder lock was placed on the door, and the door locked.

Kaufman secured 1,000 keys and affixed to them a tag carrying copy which stated that "Not everybody can crash the gate on Clara Bow's Wedding Night, but this key may let you in with the compliments of the Fox Stratford Theatre. Bring your key to the lobby this Saturday night. If it fits, and opens our 'honeymoon lock,' you will be given a guest ticket and a smart wedding gift souvenir." The keys were distributed only to ladies. An announcement card in the lobby a week ahead of the key distribution informed the lady patrons that on the following week they would be given keys and the opportunity to open the lock. The wedding gift souvenir was obtained through a tie-up with a local merchant, ten gifts in all being awarded. Of the thousand keys, but ten fitted the lock.

The stunt was one of the most successful that Kaufman had ever pulled at the Stratford, the resultant jump in business proving its value. We hope that Morris will keep us posted on the rest of his work. And—oh, yes! We understand that he is planning a stunt that is BIG (spelled with capital letters). It is described as "A wow," and most emphatic statements follow the declaration. Let's see it, Morris. We're mighty anxious to pass it along, especially if it has the goods. You know a good stunt always meets with a fine reception from the showmen.

Evelyn Dix Is The Artist Responsible For Laby's Displays

At last we've found the person responsible for the crackerjack displays that are turned out at the Washington St. Olympia Theatre in Boston, Mass., the house managed by George Laby, an active showman and member of the Managers' Round Table Club. The artist's name is Evelyn Dix and she is shown here portraying a scene from "The Big Trail."

Every week Miss Dix does a portrait of the next week's attraction in the lobby of the theatre. Crowds stand around and watch her working. They think an awful lot of the painting done by this clever young lady, and whenever standing room occurs around the house—which is frequently—never a murmur is heard from the crowds. They are patient so long as they can watch Miss Dix work. The work that she is pictured doing now is a pastel, measuring 10 by 4 feet, and is to be used as a plug on "The Big Trail." When playdates start, the pictures are used out front of the theatre.

Perhaps there is someone in your town who is especially skilful with crayon or with brush, and happens to be studying art. You might prevail upon the party to do some special work in the lobby of the theatre or in the foyer. Small portraits depicting scenes from a coming attraction will always be found to command attention. When you have finished with them, you can give them away through a contest, run in the newspaper, on any subject of interest.

Thanks, George, for letting us have this one. Let's hear some more from you.

China Again!

It is with pleasure that we announce the fact that the Club has added another showman from China to its rolls. The showman is Y. Y. Bain, general manager of the Universal Cinema, Ching Yung Road, Shanghai, China.

According to the theatre letterheads, the Universal Cinema is the "largest cinema house in the Chinese territory of Shanghai." Such being the case, we have an idea that Mr. Bain must be displaying some ace showmanship to fill it. We know he's going to take plenty of interest because right along with his membership application he requested a Club pin. We want to welcome him into this international organization and we hope he will favor us with a photo of himself, and a little story on his show selling, in the near future.

Reopened Theatre Given Good Camp'gn By J. R. Minhinnick

Theatre openings offer showmen many opportunities to display their vast storehouses of showmanship in putting the house across with a bang, giving it an introduction that would rival a presidential election. This is true all over the country. We have presented many accounts of theatre openings on the Club pages, and we are sure that our many members found them to be of immense interest and value. We'd like to say a word or so this time about the campaign that was executed by J. R. Minhinnick, manager of the Grand Theatre in London, Ont., Canada, when the house was reopened recently.

A number of the town's leading merchants were invited to buy space in a double-page spread that would be devoted to theatre plugs. In addition to the merchants, the various companies whose products had gone into the remodeling of the theatre were also represented by advertising. Two pages of publicity on the opening feature "All Quiet on the Western Front" were obtained. The town was thoroughly covered with advertising matter on the opening of the theatre, poster paper, window cards, heralds, etc., forming part of the regular routine.

The opening night of the theatre proved the worth of Minhinnick's campaign. The lobby was jammed with persons eager to obtain admission and witness the transformation of the old into the new. By the time the house had been open an hour, it looked as though they couldn't squeeze in a midget. Various executives of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation were on hand for the opening, and they, as well as a few local celebrities such as the Mayor and the head of the local Chamber of Commerce, participated in the ceremonies.

As he is pretty well known up around his district for his activity, we have an idea that Mr. Minhinnick is going to be right out front with the rest of the Canadian showmen, selling his shows right and left. We'd like to hear some more about your work, "J. H."

Novel Lobby Stunt Helped McKoy Sell Clara Bow Picture

Novel lobbies have been presented on our pages many times. We have also shown a number of examples of atmospheric fronts. Prominent among the creative geniuses of this type of showman we found James H. McKoy, manager of the Olympia Theatre in Miami, Fla., and we are sure that his work has been useful to some of the members of the Club. We are presenting some more of it here, in the form of a lobby plug for "Her Wedding Night."

Inside the main entrance a complete bedroom scene was made up through the courtesy of a local furniture store. On the bed a cut-out figure of Clara Bow in a sitting position and putting on her slippers, was placed. On the floor were real slippers and on the bed, wrappers and other ladies' wearing apparel.

From the entrance doors to the railing above the bedroom display white crepe paper streamers with small wedding bells under them then were placed.

The entire inside of the theatre was decorated in "wedding" trim. In the "well" were two five-foot wedding bells made of white crepe paper and with artificial orange blossoms pinned on them. From these two bells were white streamers twisted and draped to the rails. Under all the lights in the rear of the main floor were smaller wedding bells and under each bell a Paramount head of Clara Bow. Between the two large bells was a large hanging piece containing the star's name, title of picture in metallic outlined letters.

Oke, "J. H.," it's a pleasure to see that you are continuing to turn out such excellent work. We hope that you will keep us posted on your future activities also.

An Open Letter To Eddie Anson, Interstate Circuit, Boston

Listen Eddie:

What I want to know is this: what kind of a system do you use in your contacts with the managers of your circuit which prompts them to sing your praises all the time?

We've heard bosses panned from one end of the country to the other, but so rarely do we hear of one who stands aces high with the managers that we must marvel and wonder how you do it.

Let's in on the secret, but keep it up as it proves our contention that men treated right are generally good managers.

Regards to the boys,

"Chick"

Stafford Jersey Had A 'Harvest Week' At The Plaza Theatre

Special weeks are another of the ways that showmen keep their towns' interest in the theatre aroused. A week that went over very well recently was "Harvest Week" engineered by Stafford Jersey at the Plaza Theatre in Englewood, New Jersey, just a short time ago.

We are showing a couple of photos that will give you some idea of the angles used, among which was included a hay cart as a street ballyhoo, and an atmospheric lobby. The hay cart, drawn by two horses, carried hay, squashes and a giant cut-out of a squash, imprinted with copy on the special week. Jersey may be seen standing alongside the ballyhoo. In the lobby of the theatre, a girl distributed cider to patrons requesting it. She was dressed in farmer girl costume, in keeping with the lobby tone. The lobby featured haystacks, corn husks, squashes, pumpkins, etc. A great deal of comment was heard as the patrons entered the theatre and saw the display. It proved to be an excellent attention getter.

Perhaps you'd like to run a week of this sort in your town. If you can't run a Harvest Week, you can, at least, make use of the idea. Think it over and if it will fit in your show selling program, give it a chance. Thanks, Stafford, for passing this one along to us. We'd like to hear what else you are going to do along the show-selling line over in your part of the country. Let's have the dope.

Heralds Distributed At Football Field Helped Egan to Sell

When it comes to getting in plugs for the Capitol Theatre in Regina, Sask., Canada, you can bank on it that Pete Egan, managerial maestro of the house, is going to be right on hand with some sort of news or stunt on the house.

One of Pete's recent activities consisted of visiting the local football field while an important game was in progress and having heralds distributed containing the names of the players. The spectators made haste to grab them. The bottom of the heralds carried a notice to the effect that they were donated by the Capitol Theatre. The rest of the herald carried the line-up of players on both teams. Many showmen have taken advantage of this inexpensive stunt and secured a lot of publicity for their houses. Maybe you'd care to use it, too. The heralds need not be printed on expensive paper. Almost any kind of stationery will do. You might even be able to tie up with a sporting goods dealer, give him a credit line, and lessen the cost of printing by half.

We want to thank Pete for passing this gag along to us. We are glad to see that he is continuing the same live activity that has characterized his past performances at the Capitol. Keep it up, Pete, and let's hear some more regarding what you and the rest of the showmen in your region are doing.

Radio Tie-Up Helped C. Brewer Plug New Chevalier Picture

For the first night's showing of "Playboy of Paris," the new cinema opus of Maurice Chevalier, an advantageous tie-up was made by Charles F. Brewer, manager of the Tennessee Theatre in Knoxville, Tenn.

The picture ran the last three days of the week and the radio exhibit in the lobby was on display the entire week. The radio dealers exhibited in the lobby every model made with the $220.00 model especially encased with an artistic background and a sign on top stating that this radio was to be given to the holder of the lucky-numbered coupon.

Coupons were given throughout the entire week to every paid admission and the drawing was made on the opening night of "Playboy of Paris." It was also necessary that the winner be in the audience at time of drawing.

The dealers also contributed six electric clocks which were given to the holders of the next six lucky numbers.

They also ran a special 3-column ad playing up the radio show and the radio to be given away as well as mentioning title of picture playing at the Tennessee.

Brewer also had an excellent window display, a duplicate of which was also in the lobby. This display showed a cut-out of Chevalier with tray in hand standing at a table—the table containing cloth, plates and silver as well as two chairs. A card alongside the display played up the title of picture, star, theatre and playdates. These activities completely sold the show for Brewer.

When the Amos 'n' Andy picture made its appearance and showmen began to sell it, it was certain that the Fresh Air Taxi Cab used in the picture was going to be plentifully represented on the streets of the town wherein the theatre was located. Where there's a Ford there's a Fresh Air Taxi. Anyway, when the colored gemmuns' film played the Tennessee Brewer used the fliv gag to help put the picture across.

An old Model T Ford was obtained from a local auto dealer and this was painted on sides with copy, "Fresh Air Taxicab Co. of America Incorpolated—Tennessee Theatre, 3 days—Thurs., Fri., Sat." The topless flivver carried a sign on the rear reading, "Our kar bought from and serviced by Central Motor Company." A man dressed as Amos was the chauffeur and a man togged out as Andy rode in the back seat.

On the third day the car was in use it appeared in a parade headed by the High School band of 75 pieces on the way to a football game. Permission was readily secured from the school to join this parade as it added some life to their parade and incidentally good advertising for the picture.

Brewer also used a sheet out of a desk calendar pad as a model for the reprint of several hundred. The blank space ordinarily found on these date sheets was filled in with copy about the picture, cast, theatre and playdates. There was also a notation to attach this to "your" calendar pad as a reminder to see the picture.

The pads met with plenty of favor from the Knoxians and the stunt might be used again on some coming attraction. We want to thank Brewer for passing these and we want to let him know that we hope to hear from him again very soon. How about it, Charles?

Rosenthal At Wilkes-Barre

Taking a jump from Duluth, Minn. to Wilkes-Barre, Pa., we find Morris Rosenthal now selling shows at the Capitol Theatre in the Pennsylvania city.

Since he has been located with the Publix outfit, Morris has turned out some excellent work that has appeared on our pages from time to time. His work at the Lyceum and the Garrick Theatres in Duluth has no doubt contained some slants of value upon which members have pounced and used in their own campaigns.

With a house to handle that takes showmanship to put across, Morris will have to step even faster than in the past. However, since he knows his stuff, we have an idea that some corking angles will be cropping up. Keep your eye on Morris!

Kligler Gives Us A Photo of The Service Staff At His House

The work that is being turned out at the Daly Theatre, the Bronx, New York City, by Joseph W. Kligler, manager of the house, has made the theatre one of the favorite recreation places of the neighborhood.

Kligler does not go out and sell his picture by means of exploitation and then just let it go at that. He does more. One of the biggest assets that the theatre has is its fine service staff. The house being small, the staff must also be small; but you can be sure that the ushers and doorman, cashier, etc., endeavor to work by a de luxe standard. We are showing a picture of the uniformed staff of the theatre.

We have on hand a couple of photos of the corking atmospheric front display that was turned out by Kligler for the selling of "Swing High," but the photos were so poor that we could not reproduce them. The front was excellent. Striped awnings conveyed the circus tone, with banners and pennants being flown from and under the marquee. The front did a lot to help put the picture across. We want to thank Kligler for passing these accounts along to us, and we hope to hear from him again very soon.

Merchants Assembled At Binstock's House To Hear Proposition

A large number of showmen have found it profitable to hold get-together meetings at their theatres where the merchants could meet and discuss local business conditions. As a result of this move, business, in many cases, has jumped considerably. When the merchants were tied-in on a theatre project, each merchant knew what was expected of him, and what he was going to receive in return for his co-operation. This eliminated any friction.

In Astoria, Long Island, New York, Paul Binstock, manager of the Astoria-Grand Theatre, engineered a very successful merchants' meeting recently. The merchants in the neighborhood all assembled at the local theatre after the final performance. In order to insure their being on hand, Binstock sent out a letter which was to be used as a pass, permitting the merchant and his wife to see the last show. The move proved a good one. A large number of merchants were on hand. Binstock discussed his plans for the coming season, stressing the importance of the theatre to the community. He next went on and told the merchants the value of advertising, etc. The merchants listened enthusiastically to his plans. A number of merchants presented their viewpoints. At the close of the first session it looked as though the plan was going to take tangible form.

We hope that Paul will keep us posted on the future meetings so that we can see how they are progressing. What do you say, Paul?

"Prosperity Week" Was Engineered By Edward J. Hiehle

Just to show us that he still has his fingers in the showman's pie and is pulling out box-office plums, Ed. Hiehle, manager of the Midland Theatre in Newark, Ohio, passes along a full page that he helped make up for the merchants of his town as a "Prosperity Week" plug.

Ed's house appears on the side of the layout. He made no attempt to land center space on the page. This was one of those times when a showman had to use diplomacy. It was not only his house that he was trying to get business for, but the town as well. We would also like to point out the little slug that is used in some of the ads. If you should like to use a slug like this, get in touch with Ed and he'll let you know how it can be obtained.

We note that Ed has run another of his Fashion Revues. He always puts these across in great style and they never fail to click for the house. Another angle that he used—this at Election time—was the dupe ballot for the picture he was trying to sell. The head stated: "Vote the Straight Entertainment Ticket." When the ballots were distributed a day or so before election, they created a lot of talk that resulted in good business at the theatre on the opening night of the new film. These activities are all typical of the work that is turned out at the Midland Theatre. The followers of the Club pages will all recall the special stunts, etc., that Hiehle has engineered since he has been at the theatre, and we are sure that they'll see more. Are we right, Ed?

Especially in view of the fact that when Ed is active there is plenty of live-wire showmanship on display. And it's the kind of showmanship that means money at the box-office for everyone making use of, or participating in, the gag. Do you agree, Ed?

Notice to Members

PLEASE be sure to notify the Chairman of any change of address.

—THANK YOU.

James A. O'Kelly Handles Publicity In Parkersburg, W. Va.

Here's James A. O'Kelly, exploitation chief for the Smoot and Lincoln Theatres in Parkersburg, West Va., the section where Bill Hendricks general manages the two Warner houses.

We have no dope on hand concerning Mr. O'Kelly's career in the show game, so we cannot shed any light on him. But as regards his work, we can say that he is a very active showman. In fact, they have to be active to work along with Bill Hendricks. We believe that some corking work should be forthcoming real soon from Parkersburg because there is a group of live showmen in the town. Incidentally, one of the recent stunts pulled at the Smoot Theatre was the signing up of the world's champion tree sitter — who squatted on a bough for 1,657 hours— for a personal appearance at the house. The stunt jammed the residents in that night, all being anxious to get a look at the new record holder.

Listen, Mr. O'Kelly, when you send in your next contribution, how about giving us a little dope on yourself so that we can present it along with your work? Give our regards to the showmen of Parkersburg and let them know we'd like to hear from them.

Whyte Held Them Out for First Time In a Year or Two

For the first time since "Sunny Side Up" played the Capitol Theatre in Riverhead, N. Y., people were turned away from the theatre. Why? It was all due to the excellent showmanship displayed by W. H. Whyte, manager of the house, whose effective campaign for "The Silent Enemy" caused the unusual occurrence.

The picture was thoroughly sold to the local schools. The Board of Education in New York had endorsed the film when it first made an appearance on Broadway, and, knowing this, Whyte had a very convincing crowbar with which to enter the schools. He made personal visits, addressing the students on the merits of the show. The angle proved to be a corker.

As Riverhead boasts a large enrollment of Boy Scouts, and in view of the fact that the Chief Boy Scout executive of the organization had personally endorsed the picture, Whyte had another effective sales argument. The Scout Master of Riverhead was notified of the playdate, and he immediately got in touch with the heads of troops in surrounding towns. It was arranged for all of the Scouts to appear at the theatre in full uniform. As an added treat, and one that helped his good-will stock tremendously, Whyte agreed to run a two-reeler showing the Scouts at camp the past summer. Additional business resulted from this move.

We are showing a photo of one of the unique lobby displays used on the picture. The shot shows a collection of arrowheads, flanked by stills on the film, which was placed on display. The collection, promoted from a resident in a nearby town, contained some very fine specimen. The entire display was loaned, free of charge, to the theatre. It caused loads of talk and helped the picture considerably.

With Whyte turning out work that is jamming the theatre and necessitating the non-selling of tickets, it seems to us that we are going to have some good slants on show selling to present to the rest of the Club. Keep us posted on your work, "W. H.," so that we can pass it along.

Santa Claus Matinee

We have already sent out upwards of thirty letters giving the details of this money-making gag. You may recall that we mentioned it some weeks back.

Briefly, here is the idea: Announce and advertise for the 24th of December a special Santa Claus Matinee. Tell the youngsters that Santa will be at the theatre to distribute candy and toys to all of them attending this special performance.

Purchase enough assorted toys, novelties and candy to insure each kid receiving a fair sized package. The stuff you give away should not cost you over five cents in all. The admission price for the special show should be fifteen or twenty cents, depending on the locality and type of house.

Santa and his costume is another small item. And if you doubt whether the kids will turn out, just try it once and be convinced. Such special attractions as you can offer should also be publicized, such as extra pictures, specialties by neighborhood youngsters, etc.

Make it a Gala event for the children and you will find them talking about it for many a month. If convenient you can arrange to start a new serial at that show, continuing with the succeeding episode the following Saturday or Sunday.

Information as to where you can secure the toys, novelties and candy may be obtained by wiring Club headquarters, but if you can get this stuff locally by tie-ups with the merchants, all the better.

If you get behind this in the right way you will find that 95 per cent of the receipts for the 24th of December will be from your kids Santa Claus Party.

Go To It!

"Talk Title Talk" Latest Hyde Stunt Going Over Great

Grabbing off free space from newspapers is one of the habits that Bolivar Hyde, Jr., contracted when he first hit the show business; and he kept it up ever since. His latest bit of space grabbing was done with the co-operation of the Montgomery Advertiser in Montgomery, Ala.

Bolivar, as a number of his fellow Club members know, is the City Manager of the Publix houses in the city, with his headquarters at the Paramount. A short time ago he decided to use a stunt that has been pulled many times, but nevertheless, it is always a good one for landing space in newspapers. The stunt—though it has been called by many names— consists of taking a group of movie titles and arranging them together to make a paragraph. Bolivar called the gag "Talk Title Talk." To give you an idea of how it's done, here's an example of the titles: "Going Some," "Blind Wives," "The Weaker Sex," "Remodeling a Husband," "Treat 'Em Rough," "Man Unconquerable," "Too Fat to Fight," "The Truth About Husbands," "Frivolous Wives," "Hearts Are Trumps."

Now here's a sample Title Talk: It's "Going Some" when "Blind Wives" tell "The Weaker Sex" the best way of "Remodeling a Husband" is to "Treat 'Em Rough," for while that may apply to "Man Unconquerable" who isn't "Too Fat to Fight," "The Truth About Husbands" is that they prefer "Frivolous Wives" with whom "Hearts Are Trumps."

The paper gave Hyde a lot of space for the duration of the contest. The Title Talks were sent to the local paper, a pair of tickets being given away for each one selected. Ten pairs of tickets were awarded daily, with one or two of the Title Talks being published. You can use this one in your town, too, if you wish. Thanks, Bolivar, let's have some more of your work.

ROY H. ROWE is the manager of the Palace Theatre, Raleigh, N. C., out in that section where showmanship is displayed frequently. We happen to know that Mr. Rowe is active because he has been in the game for some time, in fact, he owned a house a couple of years ago. He has hooked up with Publix and we are sure that he will prove as good a showman as the many other managers on that circuit who are members of the Round Table Club.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

SAM J. WHEELER is the advertising manager and projectionist of the Columbian Theatre in Wamego, Kansas. Mr. Wheeler is plenty active around his section, and the work he is turning out is helping business at the theatre. As he knows his fellow members will be interested in learning what he is doing to bring them into the theatre, Wheeler passes along a slant or two. These will appear in future issues of the Club pages. Keep up the good work, Sam.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

JOHN TUCKER is the Assistant Manager of the Majestic Theatre in Perth Amboy, New Jersey. He is rapidly learning the game under the expert guidance of the showman handling the house and we hope to hear that he is running his own house before long. In order that we may report on your progress, John, keep us posted from time to time.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

H. N. SCHRODT manager the Strand Theatre in Fort Dodge, Ia. We have never been in Fort Dodge, though we weren't far from it a year or so ago when we made a trip out to the Middle West. Why don't you drop us a line or two, "H. N." giving us the low-down on what's going on in your town. And also include your photo so that we can give you a regular introduction.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

JACK KAPLAN is the latest of those live-wire manager-showmen on the Consolidated Circuit in New York to hook up with the Managers' Round Table Club. Jack has appeared on our pages before, his work with Rudy Kuehn, General Manager of the circuit, on "The Big Fight" exploitation campaign rating space. We'd like to hear what else you are doing to keep the public satisfied Jack. Let's have some information on it, will you?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

JOHN MUELLER is the Assistant Manager of Loew's Broadway Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y. We have the Loew outfit signed up nearly a hundred percent, and it looks as though the assistants on the circuit want to be represented too. Oke with us, John. Let's hear what you are doing to help put the house across.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

ROY V. HANSEN is the Exploitation Director of the Franklin Amusement Company in Minneapolis, Minn. The circuit operates three suburban houses, the Franklin, Park, and Gopher. Roy is kept pretty busy thinking up gags to sell the house, but he more than does it. He is going to give us some dope on his work, and we'll pass it along in future issues of the Club pages. We'll show his photo too, if he'll send us one. Right, Roy?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

BEN M. COHEN manages the Capitol Theatre in Hazelton, Penn. This town of Hazleton has long held a record as a show town. That being the case, there had to be showmen in it. We'd like to see what Ben is doing to bust records at his house, and, at the same time, to keep the Hazelton record intact. Include your photo with your contribution, Ben.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

JACK SMALLWOOD is the relief manager of the Playhouse Operating Company in Long Island, New York. He works under the direction of Mr. Charles Winkelman, who you all know as General Manager of the circuit and a member of the Round Table Club. Smallwood formerly worked with another member of the Club, C. M. Maxfield, so he must be pretty well versed in the show game. Keep in touch with us, Jack, so that we can see what you are doing out on the Island.

THE Club is anxious to publish photographs of every member and would, therefore, appreciate receiving as many as possible for use in future issues of the Club columns. If you have not already done so, PLEASE send us your own photo at once. Thank you.

JOHN BLACK is the manager of the Spencer Theatre in Rock Island, Illinois. Mr. Black has been in the show game for some time and is very well qualified to fill the position he now holds. We would like to hear from him regarding the ways and means that he uses to bring in the town to the box-office. Let's have some dope on it, John.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

JOSEPH POLAK is the assistant manager of the Monroe Theatre in New York City. He has been at the house four years, and it is interesting to note that he rose from usher to his present position. Under the skilful guidance of Mr. Lowenstein, manager of the house, we think that Joseph is going to pick up enough knowledge of the game to be running a house for himself soon. Keep us posted on your work, Joe.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

E. B. CONANT manages the Charkarohen Hall in Lincoln, N. H. While we have been up in Mr. Conant's state we don't recall being near his town, and for that reason we'd like to have a little info on conditions in the neighborhood. Drop us a line "E. B." and also let's have a photo of yourself.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

T. H. READ is the manager of the Plaza Theatre in Asheville, N. C. He has taken over the assignment formerly held by F. La Bar, who did some corking work while he was at the house. We are sure that Tommy is going to continue the good work and let us have some examples of showmanship that we can pass along to the rest of the Club. And include your photo too.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

R. MALCOLM MILLS manages the Rialto and Queens Theatres in Alice, Texas, for the Hall Industries Corp. Mr. Mills is the latest showman for this live-wire chain to hook up with the Club. Though he is probably very busy trying to keep two houses filled but we think he will keep us posted on his work. Right, Malcolm?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

ERIC VAN DYCK manages the 46th Street Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., for the Loew circuit. We are well acquainted with Mr. Van Dyck's house and, if we recall, it is certainly a beauty. With a background such as that it must be a pleasure to go out and sell shows. Let's hear about it, Eric. And send in your photo also.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

P. E. PIERCE is the manager of the Sheridan Theatre in New York City. The Sheridan is a pretty well known neighborhood house, and we happen to know that Mr. Pierce is always on the go trying to put business up above the record line. This leads us to believe that he is going to be an active member of the Club. What do you say, "P. E."?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

CHARLES F. BURNS manages the Breevort Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Burns isn't exactly a stranger to the Club as his work has appeared before on our pages. However, Charles, everyone must, at some time or other, go through these portals. Now that you have entered, keep up your good work.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

A. H. BUEHRIG, JR., manages the Century Theatre in Baltimore, Mr., that town where showmanship is constantly being displayed. In view of this fact, it seems to us that Mr. Buehrig is going to line up on our active list. As your first contrib, "A. H.," how about a photo and a little dope on yourself so that we can give a regular introduction?

ALBERT SINDLINGER is the manager of the Park Theatre in Cleveland, Ohio. As Cleveland has been productive of some excellent showmanship that has been passed along on the Club pages, Mr. Sindlinger is no doubt trying to keep right out in front with the leaders, so he should be very active. How about transferring some of the activity to the Club pages, Albert?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

HARRY FELDMAN is the manager of the Victory Theatre in Holyoke, Mass. Mr. Feldman is the latest of the New England showmen to join the other live-wire numbered on our rolls. Welcome into the Club, Harry. And if you want to keep up with your fellow showmen from Massachusetts, you will have to do some tall stepping. But you shouldn't mind that.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

HARRY C. STOWELL manages the Paramount Theatre in Middletown, N. Y. We know that Mr. Stowell is doing some fast stepping, and plugging all of his shows at the house. As he is well versed in showmanship, we look forward to seeing his work on our pages in the very near future. And we'd like to publish a photo of yourself with it, Harry.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

ELMER R. DANIELS manages the Capitol Theatre in Worcester, Mass., for the Publix outfit. Worcester has long been noted for a group of live-wire showmen, all of the men in that town displaying exceptionally fine work. How are you doing, Elmer? We'd like you to inform us, so that we can pass it along to your fellow Club members.

WHAT ARE YOU WAITING FOR?

Dollinger Doings!

Word floats across the river to us that Fred Dollinger, manager of the Pastime Theatre in Union City, New Jersey, is having a fine time and enjoying great success in selling his shows.

Those of you who remember Fred when he handled the Rialto Theatre in Jamaica, and various other houses on Long Island, all know what he can do. It has been said that anyone giving Fred free sway will be showered with a collection of stunts the like of which have never been seen before.

Fred has been in this game for many years. One of his biggest show successes was the Claremont Theatre in New York City, where, about 1914 or so, he had all New York talking about the wonderful shows he put on. The movies and stage have long held a fascination for him, and his intensive schooling in the show game has given him a knowledge of the craft such as few men possess.

Watch for Fred's biography. It's sure to be interesting!

Candy Confections Were Distributed By Weiss At Game

Small, red-coated candies somewhat resembling pills were passed out at a local football game in Jacksonville, Fla., by Al Weiss, manager of the Florida Theatre, as a plug for his feature attraction, at the theatre.

The candies, or pills, as the spectators were wont to call them, were placed in small pay envelopes. The envelopes carried copy: "This pill contains Joy, Mirth and Whoopee—See Eddie Cantor—Florida Theatre—Now. Try These Candies—They Are Good—'Whoopee' Is Good, Too."

Weiss also got in a valuable plug for the film by handing out bumper strips for automobiles. These, like the candy, met with great favor. The bumper strips carried excellent copy relative to the picture. Nearly every car at the football field carried one. The spectators more than knew the title of the picture playing at the Florida. Weiss is pulling stunts of this sort with every new attraction. He covers almost every possible angle. We are of the opinion that he will keep us posted on his future work also, as we know he wants to pass it along, so that his fellow Club members can look it over, and, if possible, take advantage of some of the excellent slants that it contains. Right, Al?

Walter D. Fleck Is Putting Over Plenty Of Ace Showmanship

From Grand Island, Neb., we have had some excellent showmanship in the past, and now, with Walter D. Fleck taking up his stand as manager of the newly re-opened Island Theatre, we know that it is going to be even better, particularly so since competition is certain to be strong among the showmen in the city.

One of Fleck's first moves when he came to the house was to establish himself with the local paper and the civic authorities. He went about town and met them all. His next move was to say "Hello" to the merchants. This, too, was done. He arrived in Grand Island ten days before the house opened. The day before it opened he had secured a full-page co-operative ad from the local dealers and run it in the paper. That was showmanship. And the best part of it was that the dealers stated they had done additional business because of the stunt. We are showing a cut of the newspaper page in order that you may see how Fleck worked the gag. Congratulations were extended the theatre from all of the dealers, the picture was placed in a prominent spot on the page, and in nearly all of the copy, the title was plugged.

Fleck, whose picture we are also showing, has been in the show game for a good many years. He has handled publicity work, studio operation, house management, advance work for stage and screen productions, and practically everything connected with showmanship. We look for him to turn out some fine stuff on his new season's product as we know he is capable of doing it. We are certain that this Omaha showman will give the house an excellent rep and we look forward to hearing from him again very soon because we are sure that the rest of the Club will agree that has has started off with a bang. There is nothing that would have helped him more with the local merchants than a gag such as this full page co-operative ad. And that makes us wonder whether you too, are working stunts of this sort in your town. You will find it extremely profitable for you, if local conditions permit a stunt of this sort. But after all, it's up to you. You know the town because you are selling to the public, therefore, you know what will click better than do we.

Directed by William Beaudine

MACK SENNETT TALKING COMEDIES

When they rave like this you've got to sit up and take notice. For it's real box-office stuff they're talking about.

Just another proof that your theme song won't be "The Blues" if you're playing and plugging this great series of comedies.

"ALL BOX-OFFICE"

"Mack Sennett has a knockout in this comedy and Educational is going to crown itself with exhibitor blessings when it is released. It is comedy as it should be made . . . will take its rightful place as the ace comedy bet so far made in a short-reeler.

"It has a war background, but a background that has never before seen the camera. Harry Gribbon is the boy, coming from a small town that only had one life to give to its country and that was Gribbon. He carries a three-piece band with him all through the war and, in the most trying circumstances, Harry breaks out in song, accompanied by his band.

"Gribbon is great in his part, and stamps himself as one of the funniest men in pictures. . . There are five people credited with having written the yarn and the dialog, and Sennett should pin a medal on each of the five, in addition to doing everything he can to keep Bill Beaudine out on the Sennett lot doing more comedies, for his direction was perfect.

"Mr. Exhibitor, don't miss this one. It's a wow and will make an evening's entertainment even though you have a very weak feature picture."

—THE HOLLYWOOD DAILY REPORTER

"Mack Sennett, they say, is proud of having turned out a product like this. He should be. It's one of the cleverest two-reel comedies ever made with dialog. The finale is . . . one of the most ludicrous scenes that has ever been brought to the screen. It is a clean piece of satirical fiction that sets a new record in the making of talking comedies."

"Here is a two-reeler that will provide more laughs per minute than any short seen in some time . . . one long howl from start to finish. Harry Gribbon, Patsy O'Leary and Yola D'Avril have the leading roles and give excellent performances . . . Many funny gags are interpolated and the comedy moves at a rapid pace. This will appeal to all types and rates a plugging."

—MOTION PICTURE NEWS

"Audiences at the Belmont Theatre, Los Angeles, howled with glee at the preview . . . And well they might. It's a riot of fun and ends with a whale of a laugh situation . . . It's great fun, well recorded and splendidly photographed."

FROM COAST TO COAST* MILLIONS ARE RAVING A-BOUT "MOROCCO"!

FILMDOM'S elite join fan army in lavishing praise on "MOROCCO" and Marlene Dietrich at gala West Coast opening. "Most brilliantly acted and directed production of the season and, with one or two exceptions, since advent of talking pictures. Cinemaland bows low to Marlene Dietrich. Cooper wins honors. Laurels piled on Von Sternberg," says Los Angeles Express.

"Dietrich captured Hollywood! 'MOROCCO' should be immense at the box office. Cooper gives finest performance of career," praises Los Angeles Daily News.

"MOROCCO" IS HITTING OTHER KEY POINTS NOW. THE REPORT IS THE SAME EVERYWHERE—"TREMENDOUS!"

THE COIN!

Paramount assembled a great cast of great kids and made the finest possible production of Mark Twain's beloved "TOM SAWYER." A fine, big, clean motion picture without a divorce, speakeasy or gangster.

We take pleasure in announcing that, beyond doubt and based upon cold box office figures alone, "TOM SAWYER" IS A GLORIOUS SUCCESS!

Chicago wires: "'TOM SAWYER' CAUSED THE BIGGEST AND EARLIEST HOLDOUT IN THE HISTORY OF THE CHICAGO THEATRE. Solid line four abreast extending a full block to Wabash Ave."

Los Angeles wires: "WE CANNOT BEGIN TO ACCOMMODATE 'TOM SAWYER' MOBS. Finest comments and reactions we ever had to a motion picture."

For the good of your pocket-book . . . for the reclaiming of your juvenile patronage . . . for the glory of the picture business . . . play "TOM SAWYER" . . . get behind it . . . be happier than you've been for years!

"The Rogue of the Rio Grande" has a considerable amount of stuff. It is fast and its story is novel and excitingly developed. The idea of a Spanish-speaking hero in the role of the modern Mexican Robin Hood is a good one, removing the affected accent which has barred other border romances.

Marcus in Saddle as "On-and-Off" Deal Finally Places Pathe Under Radio Wing

Equipping The Modern Picture House

Throwing the spotlight on the present wholesale remodeling and re-equipment trend in the theatre field, THE SHOWMAN & MODERN THEATRE EQUIPMENT section, which starts on page 27 in this issue, features an exhaustive survey of new and improved theatre devices marketed during 1930.

The Buyers' Guide—a compilation of what to buy and where to buy it—appears as another feature, supplemented by interesting discussions and articles by authorities, all vitally important to showmen in the successful operation of a modern theatre.

"Lottery Bride" Breaks Record For Rialto Low

It's just about three years since the Rialto and Rivoli on Broadway switched from week stands to their present extended run policy, but it took "The Lottery Bride" to cop all honors for brevity of engagement and low dip in grosses since the change was made.

The picture, a musical, was in and out in one. Opening at the Rialto on Friday, it closed Thursday night and terminated its lightning engagement with a gross of about $20,000, or the lowest gross in the extended run history of either theatre.

The houses are 50 per cent owned by United Artists and Publix, with the latter handling operations.

Litchtman Back At U. A. Desk on New 3-Year Pact

With a three-year contract tucked in his pocket, Al Lichtman is back at his United Artists desk in New York, where he will continue as vice-president in charge of distribution.

His deal with Warners on a five-year contract basis is consequently completely cold. It is understood his duties there were to control sales with Sam E. Morris moved further up the executive ladder into a position closer to H. M. Warner.

"Don't be surprised to see William Fox back in the film business with both feet."

This was the substance of a statement emanating from Albany, where a series of conferences were held between Fox, former Governor Al Smith, John J. Raskob and Lieutenant-Governor H. H. Lehman.

The Albany reports tie in the conferences with RKO and Warners, in both of which firms Raskob is heavily interested, along with the duPont interests. Just what Fox's connection would be, as well as that of the former governor, is obscure, although for months there have been reports of the possibility of an RKO-Warner deal. Such a step would take a year or more to complete.

Warner stockholders meet Monday at Wilmington, Del. No changes in the board are expected. Some time ago, reports say, Raskob was offered a position on the Warner board, but declined.

"D. A." to Dig Into Racketeering Charges

Charges of racketeering against New York theatres, in which tribute is allegedly levied in return for protection from hoodlums, are to be investigated by the district attorney's office. Charges and counter charges of racketeering in the operators' local, both denied, also are under surveillance. Theatres which have refused to pay gangster tribute have been subjected to stench bombing, slashing of upholstered seats and other outrages, it is alleged.

Gets News, Studio, Players in $5,000,000 Buy; du Pont Interests Not Included

Pathe goes to RKO under the terms of a deal, set for signatures early Thursday morning, but delayed because of differences in opinion over one schedule of figures and now slated to be signed momentarily.

Approximately $5,000,000 is involved in the sale, which embraces all of the Pathe assets except its 49 per cent interest in Pathe-du Pont.

RKO is assuming the leases on the Pathe exchanges throughout the country, Pathe News, the laboratory at Jersey City, the building at 35 West 45th St., the studio in Culver City and all product, feature and short subjects, beginning with "Sin Takes a Holiday." Pathe retains its equities in all pictures made or acquired for distribution on its own prior to release of the Bennett picture. RKO acquires the right to use the Pathe trademark and is expected to release the company's newsreel as RKO-Pathe News.

Radio also acquires the services of Constance Bennett, Ann Harding and Helen Twelvetrees as the three biggest Pathe drawing cards, and contracts with Bill Boyd and Eddie Quillan. Directors involved are Tay Garnett, Paul Stein, E. H. Griffith, Russell Mack, Joseph Santley and Howard Higgin. Pathe's complete short subject line-up, including eight series of comedies, the Van Beuren product and other series, likewise figure in the sale.

Pathe Exchange, Inc., as a corporate entity, remains in business. Strengthening the values of its $7,000,000 bond issue, of which about $2,000,000 has been retired since Joseph P. Kennedy assumed management of the company two years ago, is one of the jobs on hand. The company also regards its large interest in Pathe-duPont as extremely valuable. Ted O'Leary, now Pathe sales manager, will handle this end of Pathe's affairs, while Pat Scollard, now New York operating head, will assist Lee Marcus in the operations of that end of the business about to be acquired by RKO.

Vol. XLII NEW YORK CITY, DECEMBER 6, 1930 No. 23

A TRIPLE BARRELED GUN, LOADED WITH WISDOM

SAMUEL GOLDWYN on one side of a desk, the writer facing him and listening:

"For ten years or more I have been arguing that production must be cut before motion pictures can expect to show improvements in quality.

"Personalities are too rare, writers are too hard to get and good stories are not sufficient in number to make wholesale production a success. Business is bad enough. It will get worse unless this industry does something to break down picture-making founded on numbers rather than merit."

An Argument, Open and Shut

FACT-SEARCHING Bob Cochrane explaining his slant on merchandising across a different desk:

"Good pictures deserve every boost they can get, regardless of who makes them. That explains why we are merchandising our film as never before. The public will come to patronize worthwhile product if it knows about it. Our job is to make the exhibitor conscious of that, or he can't be expected to pass on his convictions to the public.

"The company that fails to advertise and merchandise is tacitly admitting it hasn't got the stuff to sell. We are returning to the cardinal principles of advertising and the results are demonstrating the idea to be correct."

The Key to Chain Operation

HAROLD B. FRANKLIN, fired with enthusiasm over his proposed national circuit, at the breakfast table:

"Local, decentralized operation with the man who built his patronage at the helm wherever we can persuade him to stay. That's a highlight of the plan. Coupled with this will be the benefits of a national merchandising, national service and a high standard in operation which a plan like this makes possible for the first time in the history of the small, unattached exhibitor."

Backing Up Several Authorities

WE'RE chortling with delight. Not because Goldwyn, eminently successful producer, agrees with all we have said about production and its ills, but rather because a weighty opinion now backs up that stand. Fewer pictures, more carefully planned and more meticulously executed, produced by individual creators—not production czars—provide the one certain way out of the morass. It may happen. It may not, but if it doesn't, kiss the profits of the business a regretful farewell.

Two Theories Turn Into Facts

COCHRANE, film-wise and advertising smart, recognizes the emotional stimulus which pictures must have to make exhibitors get behind them. He admits and readily concedes that it is trade paper copy alone that can turn the trick. That's why Universal, doing exactly that, is attracting more exhibitor attention than has come its way in years.

Franklin, showman de luxe, recognizes that the future of successful theatre operation depends on humanizing the system. That means the key factor is the local operator who grew up with his house. The idea cannot miss. Watch for the proof.

Independents Operating in New Fields; Others Regaining Houses for Comeback

Muscling In

Hollywood—They're becoming nervous in film circles owing to published accounts that "Bugs" Moran, famous Chicago racketeer, is here for the purpose of adding to his bankroll, with picture personalities as the contributors. According to the tale, he is said to have threatened to spoil a pretty he-man's face if not presented with $25,000, and the local private police are not kicking about unemployment as a result.

L. A. Paramount Out of Fox Deal For Studio's Sake

Los Angeles — The Paramount theatre, show-window and upholder of morale for the Paramount studio, will not go into any operating deal with Fox West Coast Theatres, but all the other Publix houses on the Coast will.

The purpose in keeping the Paramount under the company's own wing is to keep the studio happy.

One of the deals, favored by Harold B. Franklin and frowned upon at the time by Harley L. Clarke because of the reported terms of the set-up, is close to fact. It provides for six Publix houses on the Pacific Slope to be turned over to Fox West Coast for operation for a long-term period of years, plus guarantees that Paramount product will get a break in bookings.

The houses included are the Paramount, Seattle; the Paramount, California and the St. Francis in San Francisco where the Imperial and Portola, also Publix theatres, are now closed, and the Paramount and Rialto in Portland, Ore.

Ad Reels Used By B & K In Chi To Boost Grosses

Chicago—Publix-B. & K., operators of the city's "aristocratic" picture mansions, have been driven to independent shooting gallery tactics to offset the December business slump. Advertising reels are being shown in numerous Publix neighborhood houses in the city, and this week were introduced at the circuit's elegant Norshore Theatre, which draws its clientele from one of the "moneyed" neighborhoods of the city. A Paramount sponsored picture advertising Lysol was the commercial offering.

December slump has also forced Publix neighborhood houses to watch kiddies, whose parents expect them to be admitted free, more closely. Three-year-olds, formerly passed without question, are now being held up for tickets. Birth certificates are also demanded if the parents persist in arguing.

Territory "Trades" Held Under Way; Finkelstein in $10,000,000 Drive

Return of independents on an extensive scale during the new year is scheduled, according to present indications. A number of them will be operators who formerly were among the most powerful factors in the industry and who sold out to the affiliated chains.

Some of these, barred by terms of their sale from running theatres in their former field of activities, are moving to other territories in what is beginning to assume the indications of a trade of territories.

Notable among these are M. L. Finkelstein and his sons, Harold, Danny and Leonard, who have begun an extensive expansion program in Iowa. M. L., former senior member of the firm of Finkelstein & Ruben, started a few weeks ago to get houses and already has about a dozen under his wing.

Ten Million for Theatres

Barred from operating in Minnesota, North and South Dakota and western Wisconsin by virtue of terms of his sale to Publix, Finkelstein plans to operate in Iowa and Nebraska and is said to be prepared to invest $10,000,000 in theatres. Harold was formerly general manager of the F. & R. circuit. Danny is with Warner Theatres at Atlantic City.

Iowa also is witnessing the growth of A. H. Blank's small town circuit, which has a number of houses throughout the state.

Others Active

In Pennsylvania, John J. McGuirk, Al Boyd and Abe Sablotsky, formerly Stanley leaders, are active in expanding, while Harry Schwalbe is associated with the Durkee interests in Virginia. Jensen & Von Herberg are active in the Seattle territory, where they have suburban houses and have just reentered the first run field.

Some of the big distributor circuits, finding long distance operation of small houses unprofitable, plan to turn them back to independents during the year.

Finkelstein Has Stroke; Crisis Passed in Illness

Minneapolis—M. L. Finkelstein, former partner with Ike Ruben in Finkelstein & Ruben, is seriously ill. He suffered a stroke a few days ago and, over the week-end, successfully passed the crisis.

Schnitzer in L. A. Indefinitely; Eye On Radio Costs

Hollywood — Joe Schnitzer makes no bones about his slant on the present situation. He describes the coming year as a most critical one and adds that the strictest attention must be paid to production.

He leaves for New York the first of the week for a fourteen-day visit and then a return to the Radio studio which will be permanent. Insiders here openly are speculating what the situation will be with both Schnitzer and Le Baron on the ground, although the relations between both executives are generally understood to be most cordial.

While here Schnitzer has been trimming costs and watching expenditures. He also signed new contracts with Max Ree, art director; Pan Berman, assistant to Le Baron, Max Steiner, musical director; Jane Murfin and Ralph Spence of the writing staff.

West Is Focal Point Of New Franklin Chain

Concentration in the West, the territory he has been active in for several years, is the first step in Harold B. Franklin's plans for formation of a national theatre circuit, decentralized in operation and independent of any producer or distributor tie-up in management.

While the trade at large has been speculating at random and often wildly at the plans of the former president of Fox West Coast Theatres, it took Motion Picture News in an exclusive story last week to tell the industry exactly what it was Franklin proposed to do.

He is now en route to Hollywood, following a short visit to New York, but expects to return East in about two weeks in connection with finances for the chain.

Sheehan on Coast

Hollywood—Winfield Sheehan is back from New York and his production conference with Harley L. Clarke.

INSIDERS'

IT looks like a victory for Hollywood. The hue and cry on overhead, passed on by the bankers to the gang in New York, who, in turn, passed it on to the boys on the Coast, has been passed right back to New York. By the same successive stages through which it reached the studios, it now returns itself to the bankers. And those who know Hollywood and its operating methods find it all very funny.

The story should really be told as it happened, although some of the detail may sound like old stuff.

Nobody worries much about negative costs when the business gets a year like 1929. Boom times, plenty of profit, big grosses—everything is swell. But, as the years have a habit of doing, 1930 followed 1929, the picture changed, and what you had was something like this: poor pictures, poor box-office grosses and mounting costs.

That which came in wasn't doing so well by comparison with that which went out. So in came the bankers. They insisted upon this and that; said expenditures must be trimmed—slashed is more like it—in keeping with the times. They also made it quite clear that room for quality was very considerable. Then the downtowners sat back to await results.

Bad Boys Turn Good

There ensued much agitation within the fold, all of which you may have read about in this very column. Promises were made and, in fact, in some directions the slashings so dear to the hearts of the bankers became fact. Most of the verbal barrages cooked up in New York were, of course, let loose on Hollywood. It was a sad blow and travail was rampant up and down studio land.

So it is today that the Coast slogan is "Death to Waste," or the same idea in other words. Wherever duplication of effort exists, someone is going to catch plenty. The personnel of various departments is being checked again and again to see if any loophole has been overlooked; every $25 saved is for the cause. Or, at least, that's a rough slant on the idea.

But it also appears that production plans for next year involve the same number of millions as this despite the talk about conservation and that the money saved through the elimination of waste will go into the making of better pictures.

The old Hollywood wheeze, but never too old for New York to swallow. That's why The Insiders ask you to cast your optics again at the opening line of this tale. It should be easier to understand if you've gotten this far.

A Surprise Package

Sweeping decision of the United States Supreme Court in the arbitration and credit cases was about as big a surprise to exhibitors generally as it was to distributors. The independents who aided the government in its actions against the credit and arbitration systems had little idea that a double-barreled victory was in progress.

When the cases were called for trial in the Federal District Court, the government sought to have them tried together. The contention was that the cases were so closely interlocking and allied that they were in reality one suit. However, the court decreed otherwise, ordering the actions to be heard separately; the credit case being called first on the calendar.

The credit case was presented, so far as the government was concerned, entirely on documentary evidence. Immediately after it opened, government counsel introduced a voluminous collection of exhibits, consisting chiefly of records and correspondence obtained from files of Film Boards of Trade, and rested its case without calling a witness and without argument. Considerable time was spent by the defense introducing evidence and testimony of witnesses to disprove the government's contention that the credit system was an illegal restraint of trade.

In the arbitration action, around which the government had built its stronger case, several days were consumed introducing witnesses. This was the more bitterly contested of the two, and opinion of some observers who followed the trial was then that the government would lose the arbitration suit, although it was hinted that distributors might expect an adverse decision in the credit case.

The Thacher decisions occasioned considerable surprise when handed down, with arbitration declared illegal and the credit system okayed. However, this two-way decision insured speedy appeal to the Supreme Court, which might not have been the case had the decisions been the same in both actions.

A Battle Looming

All is not quiet along the Warner-Paramount front, for the former is setting itself for an assault on Paramount Publix-Comerford at Scranton. This Pennsylvania sector, where Paramount is so strongly entrenched that few competitive efforts have been made against the stronghold, has been yielding very little in the way of revenue for Warners, who are determined to do something about it.

That something is a battle in Scranton, home city of the Comerford circuit. A long term lease is being signed Friday on the Gaiety, only burlesque house in the city. The house will drop its policy December 13 and renovations will be made at a reputed cost of $150,000. Then Warners will move in.

The erstwhile burlesque theatre will serve merely to introduce Warner product to Scrantonians. The plan is to invade the city in force, options on three other buildings in the center of the city having been obtained.

Out of School

Quotes Rob Reel of Harry Richman in the Chicago American:

"Studio politics is to blame for most of the poor pictures these days. In my own case, I struck a snag at the United Artists. I didn't get along with John Considine, who was at that time the supervisor of production. I tried giving presents to every one on the staff, from the directors

The Insiders Hear It Said—

THAT, unless the management scheme in one of the big companies rights its uneven keel very soon, the bankers will step in and tell the men in charge how it can be done—without them.

That a certain big shot's demotion is attributed to his part in a pussyfooting attempt to discredit an exhibitor.

That a projected theatre alliance—important, too—went on the rocks because one of the principals talked out of turn.

That a w.k. executive is about to slide the skids because a man higher up is blaming his own mistakes on the skidder who, after all, merely followed orders.

That the Major—John Zanft—will figure in that chain of newsreel theatres which Courtland Smith may start some day.

That a chap you all know is laughing plenty up his sleeve because the very men who advised him against a certain move are now on the spot themselves.

OUTLOOK

down to the prop boys. But even that didn't do any good. The overhead on my picture only grew bigger."

The report still emerges now and then that Richman may do another for United Artists. That is—perhaps. Joe Schenck may have not read the original blurb, but there are those who are speculating on what will happen after Schenck lamps Richman's cracks about studio politics and mounting overhead. The last topic is dynamite in several U. A. quarters where This Insider knows what's going on.

In Ohio

Here's something to ponder over:

It isn't numbers of theatres that count in this day of celluloid concentration, but types, seating capacity and buying power. For instance:

From a source that knows its onions comes some interesting figures anent the theatre situation in Ohio. This statistician computes the total number of houses in that populous state at 675. Six hundred are independent of producer or distributor alliance. Seventy-five make up the affiliate division.

The independents do a $22,000,000 gross yearly. The affiliates, $28,000,000, or, reduced to simple mathematics, an edge of $6,000,000 over the lone handers. Another slant, if you like:

The chains do 56 per cent of Ohio's total theatre gross with 75 theatres as against 44 per cent for the independents with 600 houses.

These figures are believed to be accurate, but no guarantee trails along with them.

Well, Well!

Wouldn't the bankers be interested in learning the name of the company president who has openly admitted that he isn't fit to head his own enterprise?

Not only that. The same executive advanced the identical remark about the heads of other organizations, although what they may think of him for making the crack in the presence of a half-dozen persons—not all of them in his employ or under his domination—is something else again.

A Dilemma

Publix is facing something of a dilemma in Detroit, where its theatres are reporting having a hard time of it trying to climb out of the red, estimates placing the weekly loss at between $21,000 and $30,000. The situation is reported so acute that there is possibility that the Kunsky houses will be turned back to John Kunsky, and the Munz houses to the Munz Enterprises.

The opposition provided by Fox, RKO and the Cohen theatres is proving plenty strong in the automobile city. It seems further that Publix elicited anything but cheers when it hiked the prices at the Paramount there from 75 cents to $1 for the run of "The Vagabond King."

Also in the offing—reported, but not confirmed—are difficulties with Warners who are declared to be peeved over the comparatively poor showing made by "The Doorway to Hell," which re-opened the State there under its new policy. The picture did $13,000 on its week, which isn't so hot in view of big grosses in other key cities. As a result, it is said, the Warners have indicated they might be willing to sell their product to Publix's Detroit opposition.

Some of the gang in Detroit can't understand why Publix dips so heavily in the red when, for instance, Amos 'n' Andy rolled up better than $90,000 in three weeks at the RKO Downtown, to be followed by "Africa Speaks" and a gross of $27,000.

Other competitive factors include the Fanchon and Marco dancing school, which is proving a real drawing card at the Fox. Also a talent contest staged by the same outfit which proposes to select two local girls to study at the F. and M. dancing school in Hollywood. Detroit apparently likes that sort of stuff.

As closely as the truth may be approached, it seems to be a case of showmanship, plus adoption of one policy and no changes with shifting of the wind.

THERE most probably will be an inquiry into the Sherman anti-trust laws to determine feasibility of revising them, but there is little likelihood of any change so far as the film industry and general business are concerned. The President in his annual message recommended such investigation, specifically referring to "enterprises closely related to the use of the natural resources of the country," particularly coal and possibly petroleum.

However, that is not interpreted at the capital as indicative of any change of attitude toward monopoly on the part of the administration. The President specifically stated he does not favor repeal of the anti-trust laws declaring that "the prevention of monopolies is of most vital public importance."

The President's recommendation is for conservation of natural resources. He pointed out that wasteful and destructive use and destructive competition are impoverishing both employer and worker, and conditions can't be remedied because of the prohibitive interpretation of the anti-trust laws.

Star vs. Studio

Just what will be the outcome of the jamboree between Ann Harding and the Pathe studio is a matter of conjecture on the Coast. Pathe gave Miss Harding a rousing send-off with "Holiday" and now the star insists that other stories selected for her be on a par with that successful opus, which raised E. B. Derr's position considerably as a producer. In fact, that picture is said to have been one of the major factors which advanced Pathe's trading position in the RKO deal.

Pathe, however, has realized that in Miss Harding it has a good box-office bet and is averse to losing her services. An option is to be exercised in January. Miss Harding's peeve probably originated in the firm's action in loaning her to other companies, in which she did not fare so well as compared with "Holiday."

THE INSIDERS

Once Upon a Time—

THERE was a fellow—big fellow, too—who was as regular as he was competent. The internal workings of his organization turned over one day and, when the machinery halted, this executive had considerably more of power than ever he had enjoyed before and that's saying plenty.

In the earlier days in this same outfit production policies, selection of stories, casts and directors' assignments were discussed by a cabinet in which experts in their respective fields had always proved invaluable. But today, the one-time regular has lost some of his balance, fails to consult as he formerly did, travels the way pretty much alone, and the cabinet is largely a matter of history.

The result is that all is not so well in production and that means, of course, not so well in sales. It further means that the personal relationship which once prevailed in the executive roost is no longer so cordial. That forebodes much that isn't so good.

RKO Price War Forces B. & K. to Cut on Weekends

Chicago—Price war between RKO and Publix Loop theatres has shoved matinee scales up to early evening at the RKO Palace and State-Lake and has cut B. & K. houses' week-end matinee scale 35 cents.

RKO Loop houses have always maintained a slightly lower scale than the B. & K. houses. Where the latter's matinee price of 35 cents has been in effect to 1 o'clock on week days, RKO has maintained the same price an additional hour. Top evening price in RKO houses, week days, has been 75 cents; whereas the B. & K. schedule for the same time went to 85 cents. Saturday and Sunday scales in the B. & K. houses were 50 cents to 1 P. M. and 85 cents thereafter. RKO collected 35, 50 and 85 cents Saturdays and Sundays.

B. & K.'s recent reduction was on the Saturday and Sunday schedule only, but it brought a similar reduction from RKO not only for those days, but for week days as well. B. & K.'s Saturday and Sunday scale is now 50 cents to 2 P. M., a 35-cent reduction for the last hour. RKO met this reduction by extending the 50-cent scale at the Palace from 2 to 5 P. M., the 35-cent scale at the State-Lake to 1 P. M., and the 50-cent scale to 5 P. M.

Week-day scale at the State-Lake now extends the 35-cent admission to 3 P. M., and the 50-cent admission to 6:30 at both RKO Loop theatres. B. & K. week-day schedules remain the same—35 cents to 1 P. M. and 85 cents thereafter.

Paramount Cuts Talker Output In French Studio

While Paramount is not abandoning production of foreign language talkers at its studio in Joinville in the suburbs of Paris, it is understood that production is to be materially curtailed.

The cuts are expected to involve markets where the returns, by virtue of the limited number of wired theatres in those territories, make it difficult for the company to come out with a profit. This is construed to involve territories like Hungary where only a comparative handful of houses is wired for sound.

"Have a Good Time"

There's a starlet in Hollywood, according to George Gerhard, who recently became too hard to handle owing to an increase in the circumference of her head. So studio officials looked over her contract and learned that it called for a 12-week vacation each year without pay. She started on her vacation right away.

Now It's Vilma

St. Louis—Vilma Banky, former motion picture actress who was in St. Louis the past week playing in "Cherries Are Ripe" at the American with her husband, Rod La Rocque, declared in a newspaper interview that actors and actresses are tiring of the mass production methods of Hollywood by which intelligence and quality are sacrificed. She declared the actors are taking the road, even for one-night stands at half salaries, because they are dissatisfied with the quality of the product Hollywood directors are now turning out.

Londoners Bolt From SMPE After A Series of Fights

Climaxing months of hot battling which gave to the parent body many stiff headaches, members of the Society of M. P. Engineers in London this week voted to bolt from the association and form a new unit entirely independent of the U. S. group. Initial tip-off of the split appeared exclusively in Motion Picture News on Nov. 1.

The parent association loses 120 members with the divorce, although many of the former's executives are understood to have been plenty dissatisfied with the "petty" bickerings of the Londoners and were in favor of giving them a wide berth.

Simon Rowson, head of the London section, cabled a lengthy list of unreasonable demands to board members at the recent New York convention, among them being a bill for $400 contracted by the Londoners when they gave Sir Oliver Lodge a big blowout, and which they claimed should be paid by the parent association. Changes in policy were also asked for, with the U. S. board ignoring all demands.

Rowson is understood to have "boiled over" when the convention closed without taking action on his requests and proceeded to form a resolution in London disbanding that section. The matter was deferred until this week and reorganization started immediately.

"Ever since the formation of the London section in 1927, the section has advocated an independent organization," President J. I. Crabtree, of the S.M.P.E. told Motion Picture News yesterday in commenting on the split.

"Decision of a majority of the present officers in London to pull away from the parent body is apparently a result of recent demands for reenstatement of half entrance fees, the right to appoint active members and for a non-budgeted expense account which the U. S. board of governors could not conceive," Crabtree stated.

"The present action appears to be hasty. Remaining members of the London section will undoubtedly carry on if any British technical society is formed. The S.M.P.E. will collaborate fully."

Mae Gives Mary Lowdown on the Princess Stuff

Chicago—One M'Divani and a prospective one met here to talk over the family between trains. Mae Murray, bride of Prince David M'Divani, was the Hollywood-bound transient. She was excitedly greeted by Mary McCormic, Chicago opera singer, and conducted to the latter's apartment in the Lake Shore Drive hotel here, to talk over family matters until train time.

Miss McCormic is to become the bride of Prince Serge M'Divani soon after the latter's divorce from Pola Negri becomes final on January 1. The union will make Mary a sister-in-law of Mae's.

$10,000 Sought For Film Daily 1930 Relief Fund

Ten thousand dollars by Christmas is the objective of the Film Daily Relief Fund, which started its annual drive this week.

The fund will start its fourth year of activity when the quota for 1930 has been reached. During its history, the fund has taken care of a large number of worthwhile cases and has done considerable work in relieving the suffering of unfortunates engaged in the film industry.

The committee this year is composed of Jack Alicoate, chairman; Dr. A. H. Giannini, treasurer; Billy Brandt, Al Lichtman, Bruce Gallup, Mike Simmons and "Red" Kann.

The required quota has about a month to go and that, according to the committee, means the contributions will have to roll in without diminution between now and Christmas. Checks are to be made out to the Film Daily Relief Fund and may be sent direct or to any member of the committee.

Warners to Buck Fox in K. C. Theatre Campaign

Kansas City—This territory, a Fox stronghold, is to feel the weight of a counter theatre attack by the Warners, it is indicated by appointment of Bill Warner, former First National manager, as head of Warner theatres in this section. The chain has no houses in this part of Missouri, its activities in the state being limited to five.

Allied Not Backing Horwitz, but Will Enter Fight If State Unit Is Attacked

Independents in Texas Form New Body; Rap Horwitz

Dallas—The Motion Picture Theatres Protective Association was formed here by a group of independents, representing a few deserters from the ranks of Allied States and other exhibitors revolting against the censorship propaganda of Will Horwitz and denouncing Col. H. A. Cole, Allied general manager, as an exhibitor leader.

Judge Roy Walker, of Lampasas, was elected president; Arthur Keyes, of Quanah, Sam Hefley, of Cameron, and O. A. Englebrecht, of Georgetown, were elected vice-presidents, and I. S. Melcher, of Dallas, secretary-treasurer.

Directors elected were: Walker, Keyes, Hefley, Englebrecht, Melcher, W. G. Underwood and Paul P. Scott, of Dallas; M. H. Gwynn, of Terrell; O. B. Bridges, of Houston; Henry Reeve, of Menard; W. J. Wooten, of Canyon; C. DeWolfe, of San Saba; Henry Hall, of Beeville, with five more to be elected later.

The morning session was taken up in a repudiation of both Horwitz and Cole. Plans were made for a plan to combat censorship, Sunday closing and taxation before the Texas legislature in January, necessity for which was all attributed to the Horwitz propaganda out of Houston.

To Work with Distributors

The new organization will work in harmony with the distributors, chains and producers, it was emphatically declared. The primary objective of the new body is the protection of Texas theatres, with a membership of Texas owned theatres only, and no part will be taken at this time in national exhibitor affairs.

About forty exhibitors signed as members during the first day and a committee of five was delegated to remain in Dallas to perfect

Allied in Texas Raps Censorship and Hays Laxity

Dallas—Censorship politically administered, local, state and national was deplored in principle by directors of Allied Theatre Owners of Texas, who met here following the "indigination" mass meeting which attacked President Will Horwitz

However, the directors asserted, the Hays office has failed to enforce standards of decency, and asked producers to permit some organization created by exhibitors to pass upon pictures.

Unless some such plan is set up, the directors stated, they do not feel they can oppose Horwitz's censorship stand at this time.

State Right Policy Barring National Body from Interference in Row

Allied States Association as a national body is not behind Will Horwitz's campaign for censorship in Texas, nor can it, under its constitution, interfere with the Texas unit in what is purely a state matter, but any attack on the Texas association as a result of Horwitz's activities as an individual will force Allied into the fight.

That in brief sums up the organization's stand in the controversy now raging in Texas as a result of Horwitz's campaign to secure enactment of a censorship law in Texas. Horwitz is president of the Allied unit in Texas.

Under terms of its constitution, Allied operates under a "state right" policy, each unit being autonomous and not subject to interference from the national body within the confines of its own territory. However, its units are allied for defense, so an attack upon one as an organization calls for support by other units. Nationally, Allied feels that the Horwitz matter is a personal affair, and the one way to give it any great significance is to make Allied a target as a result of Horwitz's stand.

Abram F. Myers, president, W. A. Steffes, Minneapolis; H. M. Richey, Detroit, and Aaron Saperstein, Chicago, held meetings in New York during the week, but were silent on the matters discussed, and the meetings were termed "routine." It is understood they gathered to investigate the merits of a new reproducing equipment said to embody new principles of sound projection.

Richey at Pow Wow in Spite of Auto Mishap

Injuries received in an automobile accident did not prevent H. M. Richey, general manager of the Michigan exhibitor unit, from attending the pow-wow of Allied chieftains now under way in New York. "Rich" and his wife were hurt in an automobile collision while motoring from Detroit to Toledo.

Double Feature Curse Laid to Block Booking

Block booking and poor pictures are responsible for the double feature evil, Aaron Saperstein, president of the Illinois independent exhibitor association, told Motion Picture News upon his arrival in New York from Chicago for the pow-wow of Allied States Association leaders.

Keep Government Out of Business, Convention Told

Memphis—More business in government and less government in business is what the country needs for ailing business, C. C. Pettijohn declared in a speech which highlighted the annual convention here of the M. P. T. O. of Arkansas, Tennessee and Mississippi. The convention closed with a banquet and ball.

"It strikes me that everybody has two businesses," Pettijohn observed—"their own and the motion picture business.

"Business alone can solve its problems and will, if left alone. Let the government cut out its own useless overhead and wastage and business will put its house in order and the so-called depression, which is in a great measure a psychological state of mind, will soon vanish."

Confidence in an industry which has made such rapid strides, was expressed by Judge Camile Kelly, who lauded films for their educational value.

H. D. Wharton, Warren, Ark., succeeded J. F. Norman of England, Ark., as president. Other new officers are: Ed. E. Kuykendahl, Columbus, Miss.; W. F. Ruffin, Covington, Tenn., and Norman, vice-presidents; M. S. McCord, Memphis, secretary-treasurer; Annie May Day, assistant secretary, and the following directors: R. J. Goodman, Starkville, Miss.; Paul Zerilla, L. K. Hellborn, M. L. Mirisch and M. A. Lightman, Memphis; R. X. Williams, Oxford; S. B. Johnson, Cleveland, and W. E. ### Freuler Back from Coast After Launching Lineup

John R. Freuler has returned from Hollywood, where he launched production on new westerns and comedies to be released this season by Big 4 Film.

Pictures now in work include "Sheer Luck," for which four songs were written by Ray Canfield and Jesse Kirkpatrick; "Radio Raspberry," Craig Hutchinson comedy; and "Hell's Valley."

Cannot Force Sales by Using Other Product as Lever; Saperstein Complains

Members of the Hays organization must live up to the terms of the trade practice agreement, which specifies that the sale of features must not be contingent upon sales of shorts, and vice versa, it was emphasized at a recent meeting, at which a number of exhibitor complaints are understood to have been considered, one of them from Aaron Saperstein, president of the Illinois independent association.

Saperstein, in New York this week for the meeting of several Allied directors, admitted writing, at the request of an exchangeman, a letter to the effect that he was forced by price discrimination to buy shorts in order to get feature product. Presentation of the letter brought a blanket denial that the companies were knowingly violating the trade practice agreement.

General Seeking Tec-Art Studios; Not to Produce

General Talking Pictures is negotiating for the Tec-Art Studios on the Coast, which it will make available to independent producer licensees. The company does not intend to enter production, it is stated in denial of report that the firm, confident of victory in its patent suits against Western Electric, was planning large scale production, negotiating for purchase of one or more existing firms, with a maze of box car figures mentioned.

When Brains Work

Warren Nolan is entitled to a world of credit for the smashing campaign he put over on "What a Widow," in which he delivered daily for 30 days 5,000,000 circulation of 26 key city newspapers directly tied in with first-runs of the picture. Each of the newspapers, extending from Coast to Coast and from Boston to Dallas, offered one of its woman readers a free round trip to Paris, with a week spent in the French capital, as guest of Gloria Swanson.

A $5,000 insurance policy for each girl also went with the offer. The campaign resulted in more than 900,000 words about the stunt, many of the papers finding that local interest made it front-page copy. No attempt at space-grabbing was tried, the newspapers themselves handling preparation of material, from information Nolan supplies. The pay-off was smash business everywhere.

Chi Exchanges Deny Saperstein Bludgeon Charge

Chicago—It is frequently difficult, but never impossible, for any exhibitor to buy shorts either electively or selectively, a canvass of exchanges here shows. Statement of Aaron Saperstein that he must buy short product in order to get features appears to be based more on exchanges' sales problems than trade practice violation, the canvass indicates.

No exchange, it is stated, forces shorts on an exhibitor, but sales inducements are offered such as price cuts on features when shorts are taken and boosts made when shorts are bought alone. In competitive situations, independents are encouraged to take the entire feature and short product at a price when his competitor is unwilling or unable to make the same deal.

Origin of the complaint may be that Saperstein overbought on shorts to get the best feature prices, it is intimated. A great number of independent houses playing double features are not using shorts, further aggravating the local situation.

Independents here have scores of unplayed Vitaphone shorts, bought 18 months ago in hundred lots, when a shortage was feared. Unplayed acts now are disturbing the local situation.

Paramount rejects contracts on a limited number of shorts if the product is slim, whereupon more shorts must be taken if the contract is approved. Warner feature prices are boosted when bought alone and appreciably reduced when shorts are taken. M-G-M has the same policy, but the price difference is less. RKO's policy is about the same. Universal, Tiffany and Pathe sell features and shorts separately. Columbia sells but few shorts, Fox and United Artists none.

President Felix Mendelsohn of the Film Board says no complaints on the subject ever have reached the Film Board. As exchange manager of M-G-M, he makes complete denial of the Saperstein allegation. Several independent exhibitors interviewed were unable to say that they could not buy features without taking shorts, provided they paid the price. Records of exchanges show that both products are bought separately or together.

Replacements Costly

Loss on unsatisfactory equipment, replaced by Western Electric reproducers, has cost British exhibitors more than $1,000,000, according to advices from T. P. Drew, sales manager at London. Replacement of 19 different makes comprise nearly 13 per cent of Western Electric's business in Great Britain.

Public Hearing In Chain Probe Is Tame Affair

Toronto—Nothing of an exciting or sensational nature developed at the public hearing here in the investigation into affairs of Famous Players Canadian Corp., conducted by Peter White, K. C., commissioner appointed by the department of labor.

The session was taken up mostly by White in offering an explanation of the scope and intent of the investigation and in declaring that it would not be proper to hold public sessions when private affairs were being revealed because of the business damage that might be experienced—particularly if the firm were entirely free of guilt under the Combines Act.

Independent exhibitors had been asked to appear with counsel, but they were not called upon to offer evidence of any alleged restraint or unreasonable booking difficulties. Miss Ray Lewis, editor of "The Moving Picture Digest," Toronto, asked if it would be possible for her counsel to attend the private hearings because of the fact that she had once instituted civil suit against Famous Players and had gathered considerable evidence for that case which would now be available for the inquiry. She was advised that the lawyers representing F. A. McGregor of Ottawa, registrar under the Combines Act, would be at her disposal if her evidence was deemed relevant.

Commissioner White declared it might be possible that sittings would have to be held in Winnipeg, Montreal and the Maritime Provinces, but this had not been decided.

Changes at M-G-M

Dave Lewis succeeds Louis Goldstein as M-G-M manager in Central America. Goldstein is handling the same territory now for Columbia.

Herman Cohen, formerly with M-G-M in the Washington exchange, has been given Guatemala under the new arrangement.

Ingram With Paramount

Paris—Rex Ingram, former M-G-M producer, has joined the Paramount studio at Joinville, where he is expected to produce for the multilingual market.

Circuits, Independents See Conditions Ripe for New Houses

Finding the present low market prices ot materials and reduced labor costs especially advantageous, big companies and individual and small circuit operators are planning to resume theatre building on an extensive scale, with advent of the new year. In addition to the low cost, the operators see in a building program an opportunity to relieve unemployment and so hasten return of general prosperity.

The building programs are headed by Warners and United Artists, which are planning intensive drives for theatres. In the recent consolidation of the Warner and First National sales forces, Warners transferred a corps of men to the home office, whence they are being despatched as theatre scouts. A number of territories where Warners are not now active, notably in the South, are to get new Warner houses under the plan.

In the Far West, Warners have plans for theatres all along the Pacific seaboard, where the biggest tussle for theatres is to be waged. With the company planning houses in practically every important Coast city, United Artists soon is to begin its building program. The schedule calls for 25 theatres in California, after which Washington and Oregon will be invaded. Following this, Joseph M. Schenck will push his building program eastward, his goal being a national circuit, embracing all towns where U. A. is shut out.

Meanwhile, Fox West Coast Theatres is digging in for the impending battle. Eighteen new theatres in its field of operations are planned.

Middle West Active

Another factor in the situation, which is to have its immediate start in the West, is Harold B. Franklin's projected national circuit, which is to have its beginnings in the West. Franklin now is engaged in financing his proposed operations.

In the Middle West, M. L. Finkelstein and his sons are engaged in an expansion program throughout Iowa. Individual operators in Middle West states are more active than they have been in months in the matter of proposed theatres, and a number of new chains are in process of formation.

Publix is rounding out its building program and has about 30 houses just completed, in construction or planned. Fox, in addition to the Coast expansion, is planning houses in the South, notably in Texas.

$1,000,000 RKO House Starts Soon at Denver

Denver—Radio-Keith-Orpheum Jan. 1 will start construction of its house here on the site of the old Orpheum. Plans call for a seating capacity of 3,000 and completion by fall.

Radio-Hughes Deal

Hollywood—Deal of Radio Pictures is practically set for the printing of its black and white prints at the new Multicolor plant being built by Howard Hughes. This means that Radio's plans for a new lab have been abandoned, temporarily, at least. Yarbutt Apt is to he in charge of the new plant.

U. A. Planning to Enter All Spots Where Shut Out

A theatre wherever the company is not getting proper representation is the exhibition plan of United Artists, Samuel Goldwyn told Motion Picture News this week.

"In a couple of months we will be set with 25 on the Coast, but we won't end there unless we get the break we feel we deserve," he added.

Goldwyn, in further outlining the Schenck plan, said the houses will not be 5,000 seaters, but limited to capacities ranging between 800 and 1,000 each on the theory that the public "comes to see the picture, not the theatre." He added that U. A. will build next door to the 5,000 seaters if it becomes necessary. The Coast move is, of course, aimed at Fox West Coast Theatres.

Goldwyn to Europe

Goldwyn sails on the Bremen Friday night for London and a vacation at St. Moritz, returning to this country about February 1. His own production plans for next season will be limited to four pictures: two with Ronald Colman and one each with Evelyn Laye and Eddie Cantor. His activities on behalf of Art Cinema will be limited to six pictures, among them two with Swanson, one with Norma Talmadge and "Street Scene," Broadway stage play for which he has just purchased the screen rights.

Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Charlie Chaplin will continue to make their own pictures while Howard Hughes will probably contribute two or three to the U. A. program for 1930-1931.

U. A. Building Starts in Jan.; Zukor at Pow Wow

United Artists' building program is to start soon after the first of the year, it is indicated, following a conference at Santa Barbara attended by Joseph M. Schenck, Adolph Zukor, Sid Grauman, Al Jolson, Leo Diegel, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Stebbins, Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon.

Mike's Minions

The Simmonsonian dynasty has been filmly entrenched in the AMPA and King Mike I, in a proclamation issued verbally at Thursday's luncheon (so to speak), announced that hereafter he will groom his favorites to follow in his footsteps when the inevitable revolution occurs. However, his ukase is beneficent; not tyranical.

Leon Bamberger, who has become famous as an exploiter, is the first object of Mike's largesse and he was given the royal permission at the meet to introduce the chief speaker. Others may be given try-outs, and the winner of the eliminations will be given the syllabic support of His Majesty as his successor. Leon, however, measured up so efficiently to the regal requirements that he's got an edge now on the rest of the princelings.

Pathe Finally Goes Under Radio Wing

Marcus, now a vice-president of Radio Pictures, stated Thursday it was all news to him, but the switch is understood to be set unless a last-minute and unexpected change is determined upon.

President E. B. Derr, now in charge of Pathe production on the Coast, may or may not remain with the company. On the basis of his record, it is learned Radio wants him to stay in charge of the studio, which will be maintained separately.

Separate Exchange Systems

The present plan calls for operation of Pathe as is. Exchanges will not be consolidated for a year at least, the future after that depending upon general conditions in the industry as well as in the two companies involved. It is further expected the Pathe personnel in New York and throughout the country will remain unchanged.

RKO will immediately assume obligations of Pathe. Four pictures about to be launched by Pathe on the Coast will be financed entirely by Radio.

The entire deal has yet to be approved by Pathe stockholders, but it is not anticipated there will be difficulty on that score. The entire negotiations are expected to be approved and cleared away by the first week in January.

Hiram S. Brown, president of RKO, said Thursday that he had signed no contract, would admit of no negotiations and said he would have nothing to say until there is a deal. Lewis Innerarity at Pathe could not be reached.

Arbitration Case Ruling Upholds N. J. Zoning Stand

Decision of the U. S. Supreme Court in the arbitration case contains a ruling which upholds the stand of the New Jersey exhibitor association in refusing to be a party to proposed zoning of the state, declares President Sidney E. Samuelson. This reads:

"The Sherman Act seeks to protect the public against evils commonly incident to the unreasonable destruction of competition and no length of discussion or experimentation among parties to a combination which produces the inhibited result can give validity to their action. . . . The interest of the public in the preservation of competition is the primary consideration."

The proposed zoning, Samuelson asserts, is "unreasonable, stifling and illegal," and "designed to earn profit for chain theatres at the expense of the independent exhibitor and the public which in the ultimate pays the entire bill."

"Blind buying, block booking of features and shorts, protection, guarantee and percentage selling, salacious advertising and unfortunate legislative representation of the industry are combining to create a storm for which everyone in the business—both innocent and guilty—will have to pay," he asserts.

Paramount Buys In Times Square

Paramount is assembling property on the 45th St. side of Loew's New York theatre and on 44th St., adjoining the Criterion, and at an undetermined date will build a 72-story office building and theatre on the combined Broadway and side street frontages Loew's holds a ten-year lease of the New York which has about two years to go. The Criterion belongs to Paramount.

Realtors familiar with Times Square values believe it will be some time before construction is started, pointing out that office space in that part of New York is no longer easy to sell. Observers of the film business hold the opinion that the Broadway first-run situation won't be ripe for 5,000 or 6,000 additional seats for five years.

Roxy Returns

S. L. (Roxy) Rothafel, returned this week from his European trip. He was greeted at the pier by 150 employees of the Roxy, armed with blue and white pennants. He declared that there is a big future for European films in this country and that Fox has just contracted for 10 British films.

Morgan Sails

Guy P. Morgan, United Artists' general sales manager for the Argentine, sails for Buenos Aires today on the Southern Prince, after a stay of six weeks in the States. Wednesday he was a bon voyage luncheon guest at the Motion Picture Club of United Artists' executives, those present including Arthur W. Kelly, Harry D. ## Double Feature Curse Laid to Block Booking feature policy will drop it tomorrow," he said. Chicago exhibitors, he declared, don't want to double-feature, but are forced into the policy by the lack of pictures with sufficient draw to be shown profitably, he said, pointing out that pictures like "Common Clay" and "The Office Wife" are not double featured.

Exhibitors can't afford to pay for and shelve the mediocre pictures, he says, adding also that the holding up of playdates in the present release method forces exhibitors to overbuy, because when a picture is not available for a given date, the exhibitor is forced to seek another, and the block system forces him to take the company's entire group. To dispose of this surplus, the exhibitor must double feature the pictures. Chicago independents, he said, were threatened with a double feature situation as "bad as that in New England" if they didn't agree to the proposed zoning schedules, which sought to outlaw double featuring, but stood their ground, "realizing that block booking and poor pictures makes double featuring necessary to their existence."

the organization and to institute a state wide membership campaign.

Many exhibitors who heretofore had been inactive in organization work have come into the new group. Suburban exhibitors of Houston, Dallas and Fort Worth were well represented in the charter membership.

W. G. Underwood, one of the owners and representing the Robb & Rowley circuit, Tuesday turned into the treasury checks totaling approximately $1,000 as memberships for that group of theatres, numbering 92 houses in Texas.

Judge Walker, former staunch member of Allied, and president of the new association, is an attorney of Lampasas, and reputed to be the leader in his community. He is the owner of several theatres.

Baltimore—J. Lawrence Schanberger, manager of Keith's here, wanted to have a particularly good picture for Thanksgiving week and had "Fast and Loose" booked. Thinking that the cast of "Morocco" would appeal more to his clientele, he and his father, Fred C. Schanberger, asked Paramount to allow them to have it for Keith's, but the company demurred on the ground that it was not to be released until December. However, Lawrence and his father persuaded Paramount to let them have the picture.

Loew theatres in Baltimore have other Paramount pictures booked, but it is understood that "Morocco" was bought by Lawrence Schanberger several months ago when he selected his 17 pictures for the season from that program.

No New $1,600 Equipment, Is Denial of Erpi

Denial that Electrical Research Products soon will place on the market a new type of equipment for small theatres priced at $1,600 is made by C. W. Bunn, general sales manager, as "absolutely without foundation."

"Furthermore, no such equipment is being contemplated, nor do we believe that any can be produced at such a price and still deliver the high quality that the motion picture industry and the theatre-going public have come to expect from Western Electric apparatus. Our standard for quality has been set and set at a high point. We do not intend at any time to lower that standard, regardless of what sacrifice such a stand may entail.

"We also believe that with our present line of equipments we are in a position to offer the small theatre exhibitor a Western Electric Sound System installation that will not only put his house on a par, as far as quality is concerned, with the de luxe house, but will also be a business builder for him. In other words, the equipment suitable for his house is so priced that he can pay for it and still remain in business on a profitable basis."

President's "Bolshevik" Charge Stirs Members; Directors Backing Secretary

Des Moines—Members of the Iowa Allied unit are "het up" over statement attributed to Tom Arthur that he submitted his resignation recently because Secretary Lester P. Martin had "gone bolshevik." It is hinted that opposition factors, seeking to discredit Martin, because of his fight against zoning, may have inspired the statement.

Martin is credited with developing the organization to its present state and has the board of directors with him. He has been working without compensation.

Arthur Remaining

Arthur has made up his differences and will continue in office until Jan. 1, the date for election of new officers.

Martin feels he has been the victim of a political move made against him personally. There seems no reason to believe this.

Arthur states that he does not wish to be quoted aside from the fact that he has no desire to disrupt the organization and that he will remain peacefully at its head until the January election.

Questioned as to a report of a disagreement between Arthur and Harry Hiersteiner Des Moines member of the board of directors, he said, "Harry? Why, I haven't seen him." Hiersteiner wished to make no statement except that the board of directors is behind Martin.

Resentment over the statement of Tom Arthur that he was resigning the presidency of the Allied unit in Iowa because its secretary had gone "bolshevik" is expressed by F. R. Puffer, Webster City, in a letter to Motion Picture News. He says the statement is so ridiculous as to "be almost laughable" and that a canvass of the membership would show, perhaps, that only one member had "gone bolshevik."

Arthur used Puffer's name and of other directors in his statement, as board members opposed to the secretary's methods, and this drew fire of Puffer, who says he believes it was solely to do the organization an injury. He says the association has made phenomenal progress and has the moral and financial support of practically every independent in the state.

Benefit Show Is Halted by Philly Cops in Uproar

Philadelphia—Amid scenes of disorder, 7,000 were ejected from the Kent, picture house in Northeast Philadelphia, Sunday night when an attempt was made to present a film and vaudeville show for the benefit of the unemployed. A special detail of 150 police from all over the city was rushed to the theatre under orders from Director of Public Safety Schofield to clear out the theatre, which had been secured for the benefit by Allyn-Capron Post No. 22, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

A permit for the showing had been obtained two weeks previously by the veterans from Superintendent of Police Mills, but at the last minute Schofield revoked the license. It was then too late to notify the ticket-holders and a detachment of police was sent to disperse the crowd. Disregarding orders, the indignant crowd filed into the theatre and the show began, only to be halted by the arrival of several detachments of police. A riot of serious proportions was averted when George Winkleman, member of the veterans' committee, went to the stage and pleaded with the crowd to obey the police order.

At the same time benefit shows were given in other theatres in the city, but the reason for forbidding the Kent affair was not learned. Officials of the post declared that they would stage the show next Sunday and obtain a court order if necessary.

"Morocco" Smash Hit at L. A. with $38,500 1st Week

Los Angeles—Sensational business was done by "Morocco" in its first week at Grauman's Chinese, turning in a gross of $38,500. SRO was the rule at the house. The mystery surrounding Marlene Dietrich, and the Gary Cooper draw, were called responsible.

This was all the more remarkable in view of the fact that the draw at most houses was the heaviest in weeks. "The Doorway to Hell" at the two Warner houses did abnormal business, and "Sin Takes a Holiday" gave the RKO its best week in six months. The Orpheum was up somewhat and "Tom Sawyer" sent the Paramount up to $26,000.

Baltimore Theatres To Put on Big Benefit Shows

Baltimore—The police department is cooperating with the M.P.T.O. of Maryland, Inc., to put over a monster benefit picture performance on Sunday, Dec. 14, in all theatres here, including the first run and neighborhood houses, and Charles D. Gaither, police commissioner, has sanctioned the Sunday shows and will act as treasurer of the funds realized.

J. Louis Rome has been appointed chairman of the committee of arrangements and has Samuel Soltz, of the New Howard, Frank A. Hornig, of the Horn, and Charles E. Nolte, president of the Maryland exhibitor organization, helping.

The time of the performances will be from 2 to 11 P. M., so that church-going will not be interfered with. Representatives of ministerial groups called on Commissioner Gaither to learn his attitude on the matter and were told that it would be futile for them to try to oppose the Sunday performances as an emergency exists and he will co-operate with the exhibitors and will permit them to hold another if it is necessary.

Tickets will be sold from the box-offices the same as on any week day. Rome estimates that about $75,000 will be realized from the benefit.

Musicians' Union Local No. 40 has given permission to its members to play in all theatres for this special occasion, free of charge. All tickets will be furnished free of charge by N. C. Haefele, of the National Theatre Supply Co. The Independent Operators' and Managers' Union has agreed to allow its members to work free of charge and other employes of theatres will do the same.

"Lottery Bride" Dies with Other B'way Houses Up

While other New York houses were emerging from the holiday slump, the Rialto nose-dived with a dull thud during the week with "The Lottery Bride." The picture is coming out Thursday after but one week at this long run stand, with Emil Jannings' Ufa talker, "Blue Angel," going in. At the other stands, "Lightnin'" led the procession, doing so well that it is being held over for a second week.

This follows the showing of "Just Imagine," which proved somewhat disappointing, as it had been figured for a run.

The Mayfair is clicking this week with "Sin Takes a Holiday," after closing out "Tol'able David" with a take slightly over $17,000.

'Sin Takes Holiday' Detroit Holdover On $20,000 Take

Detroit—Freezing weather failed to cause any great decrease in general attendance, due to personal appearance of Ted Lewis and his band at the Michigan, the picture version of Mark Twain's "Tom Sawyer" at the Fisher and one of the best of stage and screen shows at the Fox.

The RKO Downtown, playing "Sin Takes a Holiday," was forced to change its recently announced policy of one-week stands for all pictures, due to the business which crowded the box-office all week. Marilyn Miller's "Sunny" at the Paramount was attracting its share of patronage, as was "Min and Bill," which was moved in to the State after one week at the Michigan.

Hollywood Again

Providence—Another play dealing with Hollywood's morals and manners got under way here when "Jack's Up," acted and written by Reginald Owen, of the stage and films, made its bow. The story centers around a cinema sheik almost ruined by the talkers and the rise to fame of his double. Owen plays both parts and gives a cracker-jack performance. Critics here like it.
